McGAULEY THEORY IN OVERLAND BANK MURDER BADLY WRENCHED

Sheriff Who Swore Out Warrant for "Big Mac" Goes Over to Prosecutor Who Holds Sylvester Baldwin Is Slayer.

MAN WHO STARTED IT HOLDS HIS TONGUE

Detective Chief Kaiser Back From Detroit, Vehemently Denies Report That He Sought Parole for Prisoner

"Big Mac" McGauley will not be substituted for Sylvester Baldwin, charged with the Overland Bank robbery and murder, and "The Babe," who has been often charged with lesser offenses and several times convicted, will go on trial for his life at Clayton next month.

Sheriff Lill of St. Louis County, who had associated himself with Detective Chief Kaiser's theory of McGauley's guilt and Baldwin's innocence, has abandoned that idea and goes over to County Prosecutor Castlen, who has maintained from the first that the confession of a gangster to Kaiser, upon which the McGauley theory was built, is pure fiction designed to free Baldwin.

Michigan, where McGauley has not received a life sentence for robbery, will not parole him to Missouri without an official request, and Prosecutor Castlen says no request will be made.

Lawrence Ahrens, who told the police story of the holdup to Kaiser 10 days ago, has refused to repeat it in a deposition for use at the trial, saying "I do not want to hurt you Babe, but I have done enough for you already."

Ahrens' Details Contradicted.

Persons in the bank say Ahrens' details are wrong in many particulars.

These developments followed within 24 hours the publication in Today's Post-Dispatch of the complete story of the strange differences of official opinion in county and city. The County Prosecutor, refusing to entertain Ahrens' confession as truth; the Sheriff swearing out a warrant for McGauley in Justice's court when the Prosecutor refused to issue; Detective Chief Kaiser, in Michigan on his own, trying to bring McGauley to the county, and Police Chief Clark refusing to take part, saying it was the County's case and the County could do as it thought best.

Incidentally, in the same article was published McGauley's repudiation of Ahrens' confession, his statement that he would willingly come to the County and face all the witnesses, and that Baldwin must be a "high-powered boy with a lot of money and influence back of him."

Chief Kaiser returned to St. Louis last night and denied vehemently that he had asked Michigan authorities to parole McGauley in order that he might be tried in the Overland case. He declared he had no interest in the matter whatever.

Did Not Seek Kaiser's Aid.

Sheriff Lill, in announcing that he was not going to have a falling out with Prosecutor Castlen "over this or anything else," said he did not invite Chief Kaiser to work on the Baldwin case.

"Chief Kaiser came to me with a confession," the Sheriff said, "and later he came to me and said he was going to Detroit on his vacation and inquired if I wanted him to look into the McGauley case. I told him my deputy, Harry Arnold, was in Detroit on another case, and if he (Kaiser) had anything important, to give it to Arnold at Detroit and let him handle it.

"I did not instruct or request Chief Kaiser to ask for the return of McGauley nor did I authorize him to go to the Governor of Michigan for that purpose. I am working along with the Prosecuting Attorney in this case. I am not interested in bringing McGauley back, at least until after Baldwin has been tried."

Detective Chief's Statement.

Chief Kaiser, who had read accounts of the developments in newspapers elsewhere, said last night:

"I had arranged for a furlough [illegible] to go to Detroit from Aug.

NEWS PHOTOGRAPHERS FORCE LINDBERGHS TO END FLIGHT

Friends Say Flyer Feared for Wife's Safety; Deny That He Shook Fist.
By the Associated Press.

HICKSVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Fear that news photographers in their zeal to obtain action shots of Mrs. Lindbergh at the controls of her plane might actually endanger her life forced Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today to interrupt the training flights he had planned over the Long Island Aviation Club's field.

It was not until Col. Lindbergh had made every effort to avoid the closely following photographer's plane, that he finally gave up and, landing, left the field with his wife.

Close friends of the flyer said later that his efforts to elude the photographers were not because of any desire to block pictures but solely because the proximity of the second plane distracted the attention of his pupil, and, at times brought real danger since he could not be certain that a sudden wind flurry, or an attempted bank or twist by either plane might not bring the two into collision.

Observers denied that Col. Lindbergh had shaken his fist at the photographer after bringing his instruction plane to earth. If there was a gesture, they said, it represented and was intended as nothing more than a wave of surrender —marking his abandonment of the day's tutoring.

SAN DIEGO CHIEF NAVAL PILOT KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS

J. J. Demoshock's Ship Goes in Tail Spin After Perfect Take-Off at Eugene, Ore.
By the Associated Press.

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 24.—J. J. Demoshock, Naval chief aviation pilot stationed at San Diego, Cal., was killed here today when his Boeing plane went into a tail spin at a 300-foot altitude and crashed on the Eugene airport.

Demoshock, with six other Naval flyers in individual planes, took off for San Diego, making a perfect run down the field.

His plane gained altitude swiftly, but Lieut. T. G. Richards, commander of the flight, said Demoshock pulled his plane too sharply and a heavy load of gasoline threw it into a tail spin. Richards said Demoshock had been a Naval flyer for many years. He was 32 years old.

He was enroute from Seattle, Wash., to San Diego.

Louisville Business Man Dies With Four Others in Germany.
By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 24. — Joseph W. Gross of Louisville, killed today in an airplane accident in Germany in which four persons lost their lives, was making his first flight. Friends said that Mr. Gross, a well-known business man, had said that while abroad on a combined business and pleasure trip he intended to fly.

Mr. Gross was head and founder of the Gross, Parsons and Hambleton Company, president of the Premier Paper Co. and had an interest in several other local concerns. He was 46 years old and a director of Temple Adath Israel, a member of the shrine, and of several social organizations. He is survived by his widow and two sons, three and five. He sailed August 2 on the Carmania and intended to attend the Germany Fair at Leipsig.

RIOTS CONTINUE IN JERUSALEM; U. S. ASKED FOR AID

Number of Jews Slain Put at 30, With 35 Wounded in Attacks at the Wailing Wall.

ARAB DEAD PUT AT 17; MORE THAN 200 HURT

Americans in Holy City Request Warship for Protection — British Premier Summons Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The seriousness of the race riots in Palestine led Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tonight to summon his Cabinet to a special meeting tomorrow morning. The First Sea Lord was recalled from leave.

The War office ordered the railway from Cairo to Alexandria cleared of traffic to facilitate prompt transport of British troops to the trouble zone around Jerusalem. It was announced that five warships carrying troops had been ordered to leave Malta for Palestine.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Jerusalem and a government censorship of telegrams and cables established.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 24.—A state of emergency was proclaimed to exist over all Palestine tonight with clashes between Arabs and Jews, growing out of the Wailing Wall controversy, spreading from the point of origin in Jerusalem, and with a death list of more than 50. Word that British warships and troops were on the way to supplement the police forces was received with great joy.

The calm restored in Jerusalem this morning after two days' rioting in the streets was only temporary and at 6 o'clock tonight the disorders were in full blast again. Jewish sources estimated the number of Jewish dead at 30, with 35 others gravely wounded and estimates of the Arab losses much earlier had been 17 killed with others likely to die. The injured numbered more than 200.

The fighting had spread from the "old city" to the Jewish suburbs of Yemin Moshe, Gdud Saul, Gdud Havoda and Sephardim. The gravest fears were expressed for the safety of Petach Tikwah, the oldest Jewish colony in Palestine and noted for its rich orange groves.

Jewish leaders appealed to their race to co-operate with the British administration in restoring order. They charged that the Arab attack bore every evidence of organized warfare and that the Arabs were well armed, especially with daggers. It was also claimed that communist propaganda had appeared urging Arabs to fight the Jews and expel the English from the country.

A delegation of Americans now in Jerusalem tonight asked the United States Consul to request the sending of an American warship to Palestine, where rioting between Arabs and Jews over the right of worship at the Wailing Wall brought nine more deaths in and around the Holy City this afternoon.

The Consul was understood to have promised to send for American naval aid.

Armed Arabs attacked the Jewish village of Motza, near Jerusalem, this afternoon, killing six persons.

Fifty British soldiers arrived by air from Egypt to reinforce British police troops.

In Cairo a giant British troop carrying plane, taking off for an army camp to pick up 25 soldiers for duty in Palestine, crashed, killing three of its crew of seven and seriously injuring the other four.

HOLY CITY AN ARMED CAMP

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, Aug. 24.—The Biblical city of peace tonight is an armed camp. Part of the population is panic-stricken and airplanes, troops and warships are being rushed to Palestine to control the most serious disturbance that has arisen here since the close of the World War.

Many Arabs and Jews have been killed and more than 150 persons have been injured in rioting which broke out yesterday over the age-old religious controversy of the Wailing Wall. The rioting continued sporadically through the night and started afresh today despite the efforts of authorities to maintain peace.

Repeated trouble over the Wailing Wall has occurred in recent years, but nothing on such a scale as the present rioting. The shrine

POWERS DRAW UP NEW REPARATIONS OFFER TO ENGLAND

Stirred by Snowden's Demand for Something in Writing, Italy, Japan and Belgium Get to Work.

BRITAIN WANTS NO GERMAN SACRIFICE

Chancellor Asks France and Italy to "Abandon What They Took Away at Paris Conference."

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 24.—Representatives of France, Italy, Belgium and Japan worked tonight on the draft of a new offer on division of reparations payments which it was hoped would be satisfactory to the British.

The offer being drafted would increase the British share of German annuities between 36,000,000 marks (about $8,575,200) and 38,000,000 marks (about $9,051,600). Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden had demanded 48,000,000 marks, or about $2,382,000 more than the offer now in making.

If the British Chancellor is satisfied with the estimated yield of this offer, as he has not been with previous estimates by the other creditors, and has no objection to the sources from which the sum is made up, it was thought that he would accept compromise on that basis.

Snowden Stirs Delegates.

By shaking up the almost expiring conference today, Snowden so stirred its blood as to give it new life. The Chancellor in a letter to Premier Henri Jaspar of Belgium said he had had enough verbal proposals and that the time was come to put on paper whatever the other creditors had to offer, and to do it at once.

He asked for a reply this evening. The representatives charged with drawing up the offer to the British worked until 11 p. m. before adjourning until tomorrow.

The British Chancellor took occasion in his letter to repudiate any thought that the British were encouraging or abetting a move to induce the Germans to contribute to the offers to Britain by increasing the unconditional portion of the annuities. Snowden had already made clear that he would not accept for Britain sacrifices by the smaller allies and he now revealed determination not to accept further sacrifice by Germany.

Wants What "Was Taken Away."

The British theory is that the other creditor Powers obtained in the Young plan undue advantages from which the British suffered. Snowden wants those Powers, notably France and Italy, to put things right by abandoning to Britain what he claims they took away in the Paris conference of experts.

An immediate consequence of the intervention by the Chancellor was postponement until next week of a meeting of the six Powers that organized the conference, which had been set for this afternoon.

The Chancellor suggested that it was useless for them to meet again until the creditor Powers had put on paper what they proposed to offer.

MacDonald Reaches London by Plane for Debt Discussion.
By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald arrived at the Hendon Airdrome in North London shortly after 6 o'clock this evening, from Lossiemouth, Scotland, by plane.

MacDonald was forced to make two unscheduled landings en route today because of poor visibility. The plane unexpectedly appeared at the Cramlington Airdrome about lunch time and put off again after a short halt. Encountering bad visibility again in the vicinity of Durham, the pilot returned to Cramlington where the Premier had lunch. A veteran pilot was then assigned to act as Pathfinder in another plane and the two machines set off for London. The Premier came to London because of developments in the reparations conference.

WIDOW OF SLAIN MAN AND HER BROTHER-IN-LAW HELD

Arrested in Connection With Death of Railroad Engineer Near Tulsa on July 31.
By the Associated Press.

TULSA Ok., Aug. 24.—Two arrests in connection with the mysterious killing of C. W. Stanley of Lynn Lane, Ok., retired Frisco railroad engineer, were made today when Stanley's widow and her brother-in-law were taken into custody by authorities investigating the killing. Stanley was found dead in the back yard of his home on the night of July 31, a bullet wound in his head.

Aweek before his death, while visiting in Springfield, Mo., Stanley reported to police that he had been kidnaped, held prisoner and robbe of $1200.

Mrs. Katherine Stanley, the slain man's widow, and her brother-in-law, Ernest Shackleford, both of Lynn Lane, were arrested at their homes and arrainged in Common Pleas Court. Both pleaded not guilty and preliminary hearings were set for Sept. 3. They are held without bond.

The engineer's widow expressed the belief that her husband had been slain and robbed, but authorities scouted the theory, declaring that some other reason motivated the shooting, and are trying to connect the Springfield kidnaping and robbery with the murder of the aged railroad man.

JURY DISAGREES ON PENALTY IN ATTACK ON TEACHER

Nine Voted for Hanging Blufford Abbott at Monticello, Ky.; Panel Discharged.
By the Associated Press.

MONTICELLO, Ky., Aug. 24.—The jury trying Blufford Abbott for an attack on Miss Ruby Taylor, a young school teacher, was dismissed here today because it could not agree on the penalty. They reported themselves deadlocked with nine holding out for hanging and three for a 20-year sentence.

The jury received the case at 8 a. m. yesterday and when it was dismissed at 1:55 p. m. today a new trial was ordered for the regular term of court in November. Abbott's two cousins, Roscoe and Ted Abbott, are under indictment and are expected to be tried in November. Miss Taylor testified that the three came to her school house and frightened away the children, caught her after a chase and that Blufford Abbott attacked her. He told the jury he was drunk that day and had no recollection of the affair.

15 WOMEN FLYERS LAND AT EAST SIDE AIRPORT ON SEVENTH DAY OF RACE

Blanche Noyes and Neva Paris Unhurt in Accidents at Field—One Forced Down in Franklin County.

Fifteen sunburned and wind-baked women guided airplanes to earth at Parks Airport, south of East St. Louis, yesterday afternoon, finishing their seventh day's flying in the nine-day national women's air derby from Santa Monica, Cal., to Cleveland.

Fourteen of them circled the field and landed within an hour and 26 minutes, in a succession which once became so close that three reached the ground in 19 seconds. The day's flying from Wichita, with a stop at Kansas City, did not change the order of the leaders, Mrs. Louise McP. Thaden of Pittsburg still being ahead among the 11 flyers of heavy planes, and Miss Phoebe Omlie of Memphis being first among the four light plane flyers. Two untoward landings damaged planes without injuring the flyers. These planes, placed under repair at once, will be in the race again today, leaving with the rest at 8 a. m. for Terre Haute, Cincinnati and Columbus. The final flight to Cleveland will be tomorrow.

Mrs. Haizlip's Fine Performance.

The fifteenth flyer did not appear until an hour after the fourteenth had landed. But let no one say that Mrs. Mae Haizlip of Kansas City—in whom Tulsa also has an interest—"limped into port." The dark-haired and diminutive flyer brought in her plane, with its wing spread of only 22 feet, in triumph, by one of the most resolute performances in this whole Odyssey of airfaring womankind.

A leaking gasoline line forced Mrs. Haizlip to descend in a meadow east of Washington, Franklin County, Mo. A farm group gathered, gasoline was brought and necessary telephoning was done, but no one seemed able to help Mrs. Haizlip in her hurried repair job, or in starting the motor again. One youth tried to crank the propeller, but failed to master the job under Mrs. Haizlip's direction, and she had to do the cranking herself—"with this good right arm," she related—as an alternative to remaining "down on the farm."

Miss Blanche Noyes of Cleveland, who left Wichita first and who also led the departures from Kansas City, was the first to arrive at the East Side port. She smashed the landing gear of her machine. A later arrival, Neva Paris of New York, had a still more unlucky landing, her plane nosing into a roadway beyond the point for which she had aimed, and stopping with tail up. As an alarmed crowd gathered, Miss Paris climbed out, the picture of disgust, declaring that she had never before made such a bad landing.

Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic flyer, was the second to arrive. "How much did Blanche (Noyes) beat me?" was her first question after landing. Miss Noyes, it developed, made the second best time and Miss Earhart the fourth best from Kansas City, Mrs. Thaden being first in speed over that leg of the course.

Order of the Landing.

Miss Noyes' arrival was officially timed at 2:20:51 p. m., and Miss Earhart's at 2:26:52. The others in order were:

Mrs. Louise McFetridge Thaden, Pittsburg, 2:54:21.

Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Cal., 2:38:23.

Ruth Elder, Hollywood, Cal., 2:46:52.

Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y., 2:48:18.

Neva Paris, Great Neck, L. I., 3:02:38.

Opal Kunz, New York, 3:02:55.

Mary Von Mack, Detroit, 3:02:57.

Vera Dawn Walker, Los Angeles, 3:08:35.

Mrs. Keith Miller, Australia, 3:15:32.

Phoebe Omlie, Memphis, 3:21:55.

Edith Foltz, Portland, Ore., 3:27:47.

Thea Rasche, Germany, 3:46:51.

Mae Haizlip, Kansas City, 4:48:11.

The official computation, including yesterday's flying, showed the rank and elapsed time of the contestants, divided into heavy and light plane classes, to be:

Heavy planes—Thaden, 16:27:57; O'Donnell, 17:14:23; Nichols, 17:50:37; Earhart, 17:57:21; Noyes, 20:32:22; Elder, 21:36:06; Paris, 23:44:22; Von Mack, 23:54:22; Kunz, 28:08:30; Walker, 29:04:23.

Light planes—Omlie, 20:22:32; Foltz, 22:43:24; Rasche, 25:15:09; Miller, 31:28:40.

Mrs. Haizlip's time was not computed, because of a failure to record her arrival at Kansas City. She is not one of the leaders. The prizes posted for the contest have been variously stated as totaling $10,000 to $25,000.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Aug. 24.

THE signals of the round-the world Zeppelin, now over the Pacific, were heard yesterday by Mason and Petersen.

They came in so loud that they were switched to the loud speaker so we could all hear the dots and dashes clicked off by the big ship so far away. Later in the evening Hanson heard the Zeppelin give its position as 1500 miles out from Tokio in the San Francisco steamship route, flying at a height of 300 meters above the sea.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Correspondent on the Graf Zeppelin on Its Round-the-World Cruise. (Copyright, 1929.)

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 24.—Having left the 180th meridian (the international date line) far behind, at 11 o'clock tonight, Greenwich mean time, the equivalent of 5 p. m. St. Louis time, our position was established at 166.20 West longitude, 45.20 North latitude, about 2300 miles out from Tokio, more than half way on our flight to Los Angeles.

We know we are getting within reach of America and that excitement there is growing, because already we are receiving messages of greetings.

While we have certainly been making wonderful progress, it has been over an endless sea of fog for hours and hours. We climbed through to 3500 feet to be able to make observations, which was becoming a difficult problem owing to the fact that we had not seen the sun or the Pacific for hours.

Our present position gives us quite a thrill. We have all of a sudden come to realize that we are almost "home"—speaking now of the Americans on board. "Bill" Leeds, who has been the "play boy" of the trip, is as joyous as a baby with a new toy.

Rushing along just above the forty-fifth parallel, we are at the moment headed apparently almost directly for Portland, Ore. At 166 degrees we are approximately 2135 miles west of Seattle, and a little less than 2450 miles northwest of San Francisco. Traveling at the rate of 80 miles an hour, with a good push from a favorable wind, that would bring us in sight of the American coast by 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon (Pacific time.) That would also bring us to Los Angeles early Monday.

80-Mile Pusher Wind.

"If we keep up this pace we could be in Los Angeles by midnight Sunday night" said Flight Commander Lehmann. "However it is a little too much to expect.

AVIATION PARADE OPENS AIR RACES AT CLEVELAND

Crowd of 100,000 Attends Formal Ceremonies — Three Derbies Are En Route to City.

GLIDERS, AIRSHIPS TAKE PART IN SHOW

Army-Navy Stunts on Program Today—Parachute Jumpers to Try to Drop on Designed Part.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 24. — Aviation opened its 1929 national air races and aeronautical exposition here today with an assemblage of aircraft, pilots, engineers and equipment, the largest in its history.

Thousands of persons from all over the United States and many foreign countries joined with Clevelanders into a crowd of more than 100,000 to watch the parade and ceremonies of the formal opening.

Three cross-country Derbies were rapidly approaching Cleveland, one for women from Santa Monica, Cal., another for men from Portland, Ore.; and a third from Miami. At Dayton, army and navy flyers were preparing for their series of stunts at the opening of the races tomorrow.

For the first time in history, national air race spectators will get to see how motorless aircraft perform. Gliders, with pilots sitting out on precarious seats in the open and also in enclosures will be hitched to planes and automobiles to start a series of attempts to approach the record of Robert Kronfeld of Germany who soared to an altitude of 6800 feet and coasted in the air 62 miles.

Aviators will attempt to jump with parachutes to a designated mark, and a team of crack stunt flyers from the Waco Aircraft Co., Troy, O., will put their ships through a number of stunts.

Lighter-than-air craft also will have its day with four semi-rigid dirigibles from the Goodyear-Zeppelin Co., and the Detroit Aircraft Corporation's new metal-clad dirigible soaring overhead.

The exposition, taking up every available inch of the 200,000 square feet of floor space in the Cleveland public auditorium, opened after a spectacular parade depicting, with flower-decked floats, the history and modern advances in aviation.

The planes present a gaudy display of color and a development toward streamlining to increase efficiency. There are numerous amphibian jobs, some of them designed for the private sportsman on his fishing trips and others for long stretches across water.

Outside, too big to enter any of the exposition halls, was the new Boeing 18-passenger, which will go into transcontinental service between San Francisco and Chicago.

There are numerous designs of huge flood lights and other devices for safety, including compact radio transmitter-receiver sets for beaconing and phoning, all to be stowed away in a little open ship.

Members of the Society of Automotive Engineers, more than 1000 strong, and of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America arrived for a three-day session, at which they will discuss greater standardization of parts, less rigid Government spin tests for planes, the possibilities of the new Beryllium alloys in making engines stronger and lighter, and variable pitch propellers.

Tex Rankin First at Billings; T. A. Wells Second.

By the Associated Press.

BILLINGS, Mont., Aug. 24.—The Portland-Cleveland air derby flyers tonight decided to postpone their hop for Bismarck, N. D., scheduled for tonight, until tomorrow morning. The flyers will stay here tonight.

The eight flyers in the derby left Spokane this morning, stopping once en route at Missoula, Mont.

Tex Rankin of Portland led the racers into Billings on the hop from Missoula, completing the trip in one hour 58 minutes and 11 seconds. He was followed by T. A. Wells, of Wichita, and Speed Holman, of Chicago, in the order named.

Sydnor Hall of St. Louis landed here with his gas tank empty. He swerved from his course and went to Big Timber and the extra mileage used his reserve supply.

T. A. Wells of Wichita took the lead in elapsed time to Billings. He has made the four stages in 4 hours, 59 minutes and 19 seconds. Speed Holman of Chicago and Tex Rankin of Portland are pressing.

The elapsed times from Portland to Billings were as follows: Holman, 5:11:53; Dick Rankin, 6:25:18; Wells, 4:59:19; Emory, 6:54:57. Lieut. W. B. Clark, Portland, 6:17:39. Maj. G. H. Eckerson, Springfield, Ore., 6:08:11; Tex Rankin, 5:16:16; Hall, 8:33:42.

Les Bowman, registered from Buffalo, N. Y., who landed first at the Tampa stop and who also set his little blue Monosport down first here, was second in total elapsed time from Miami.

The 14 planes arrived here in rapid succession. The flyers will begin taking off at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning for Macon, Ga., their next stop en route to Cleveland.

The official elapsed time standings of the flyers from Miami to Jacksonville were announced as follows:

Homecoming of School Pupils Celebrated at Stadium by Races, Contests and Reception to Quaintest of Mothers.

St. Louis school children celebrated their home-coming yesterday, after a summer in the lap of Mother Earth. They come home to the third of the three mothers who claim every child—the queerest and quaintest mother of them all—old Mother Goose.

And what a home-coming! Thousands of children. More thousands of mamas and papas and big brothers and kid sisters. Races. Ball games. Dances. Noise. All—or almost all—the soda pop and pop corn and hot dogs any kid could surround, and not one lesson to be learned.

They called it the Public School Playground Festival, this celebration in the big new stadium on North Kingshighway, but surely it was Mothers' day. It was a great day for Mother Earth, who gave those childish bodies their strength and it was a proud day for Mother Goose, to whom the youngsters formally came home. And anybody could see that it was a great day and a proud day for the human mothers.

But most of all was it a big day for the youngsters, themselves. They had opportunity to sock many balls, indoor, tennis and volley; to run many races, yell many yells, eat much popcorn. And many of them, much as they had read and heard about Mother Goose, had their first opportunity to see her.

Then Comes Mother Goose.

The last race had been run, the last game won and lost. The Patrons' Alliance trophy had been awarded again, on the summer's record as well as yesterday's victories, to Laclede School Playground, which won it last year. Two drum corps had circled the arena. A comparative hush had fallen, perhaps as still as a traffic jam at Twelfth and Olive, with all the horns going.

A stir at the northeast entrance of the arena, and in came Mother Goose herself! Great eyes could scarcely widen, little lungs and little necks stretch enough for that thrill.

She rode, with her high silk hat on a huge white goose, attended by slaves at once fearsome and friendly. She waved to the stands, and many a tot eagerly and trustingly waved back at her.

Behind her followed 2200 children, in such colors as only an artist's fancy, or a child's, could conceive; presently to break off like sparks struck from a rainbow, and scatter in dances over the arena.

Colors Outshine Sunset.

"It's not quite time for sunset," remarked Rodowe Abeken at the microphone. "Those are only Miss Breen's colors." But surely no sunset ever had such colors. Anyhow, no sunset could dance like that.

Not only could Mother Goose's children see her. They could see King Cole, who called for his pipe, bowl and fiddlers three, and then for a most remarkable dancer. They could meet little Bo-peep and Little Boy Blue, who turned out lively enough, once he was awake. They could see the hill that Jack and Jill went up, and learn how to ride a cockhorse, what a blackbird pie looks like, and what a pretty sort of candlestick Jack Jumped over, how lovely Mary's garden grew and how old Mother Hubbard's dog acted when they found the cupboard bare.

That was happy knowledge for any child, and yesterday it was beautiful knowledge for all the children's parents.

The festival was directed by Abeken and the dances by Miss Corinne Hachtman, with costumes by Miss Margaret Breen. But they and the playground staff can't have all the credit. The kids did the most of it, just as they had most of the fun.

Freed on Self Defense Plea.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Aug. 24.—At a preliminary hearing here today before Justice of the Peace Berry, Reuben Dalton, charged with the killing of William Harrington of Sprott Monday, was freed, the court acting on the testimony of Harrington's two sons, Elmer and Roy, that Dalton was forced to defend his life when Harrington threatened him with an ax at the former's home. Dalton who was a brother-in-law of Harrington, maintained that his life had been threatened a number of times and that the feud between the two men was the outgrowth of a board bill that Harrington had refused to pay.

FIRES IN MONTANA AND IDAHO SAID TO BE WORST IN 19 YEARS

National Guard Attempts to Save Columbia Falls; Only Hope for Control Is Rain.

By the Associated Press.

KALISPELL, Mont., Aug. 24.—With the Kalispell Company of the Montana National Guard on duty at Columbia Falls in an attempt to save that city from destruction by a raging forest fire and the mobilization of the remainder of the guard authorized to assist in combatting the flames, Montana tonight was facing a most serious forest fire situation.

The district forester at Missoula, Mont., reported that fires in Northern Idaho and Southern Montana were the worst in 19 years and that conditions were such that there was little hope for control except in rains. Weather reports, forestry officials said, indicated but little relief from this source within the immediate future.

Columbia Falls was reported crowded with refugees from the territory in the vicinity of the flames and that part of the State now threatened. Hundreds of these have camped in the city.

More than 75,000 acres of timber have been destroyed by the fire in the Flathead section of the vicinity of Glacier National Park and by the great half moon fire in the vicinity of Apgar, Coram and Lake Five.

During the same period, 2,213,000 old cars were scrapped. New York, with 304,800 new cars, headed the list. Pennsylvania, with 222,600, and Ohio, with 215,000, were second and third.

King George at Sandringham.

WOLVERTON, England, Aug. 24.—King George and Queen Mary, after a smooth train journey from London today, entered a royal automobile at this station and motored immediately to their favorite summer residence at Sandringham. STATE ACCUSES 10 IN MEDICAL LICENSE INQUIRY

Dr. Stewart Announces Formal Complaints Have Been Filed Alleging Illegal Practice.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 24.—Dr. James Stewart, secretary of the State Board of Health today announced charges of practicing medicine without a State physician's license had been filed against 10 persons in nine small towns of Missouri, in connection with the board's inquiry into the activities of unlicensed medical practitioners.

Stewart said the formal complaint had been filed by the board with the prosecuting attorneys and that prosecutions would be conducted in each case, with the cooperation of Attorney-General Shartel.

The 10 persons against whom Dr. Stewart said formal complaints had been filed are: J. M. Barnett and William Lovell, both of Glenwood; W. L. Ivey, Cole Camp; Jonathan Pittman, Success; J. V. Hough, Grove Spring; N. A. Murrell, Hartsville; B. C. Wampler, Odin; A. L. Anthony, Oakland; Dr. Graydon Carlstrom, Malden, and Dr. R. V. Cowher of Carrollton.

Stewart said Dr. Carlstrom, an osteopath, was charged with the practice of medicine without having obtained a license from the State Board of Health. The penalty is a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, or a jail sentence of not less than 30 days nor more than one year or both fine and jail sentence.

Stewart said the complaints were filed against the 10 defendants as a result of requests sent by the Board of Health to the county health officers in each of the 114 counties, for the names of persons suspected of practicing medicine without licenses. The names supplied were checked with the records of the board, to determine whether licenses ever had been issued. Other names are being checked, Dr. Stewart said.

The board has under way an investigation of the medical credentials of 36 persons in Kansas City who were reported to be practicing without license. The names were submitted by the Jackson County Medical Association. The Attorney-General is co-operating in the inquiry. No formal charges have been filed so far in Kansas City.

A similar checkup is being made in St. Louis, and complaints will be filed against persons found to be practicing without licenses, Dr. Stewart said.

FORD BUYS OLD GOLD MINES

Virginia Diggings, Closed Since Civil War, Date to Colonial Days.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 24.—The Vaucluse gold mines in Orange County, successfully worked before the Civil War but since abandoned have been bought by Henry Ford, it was learned today. The deed to 200 acres, which includes the mining properties, purchased from Judge Alvin T. Embry of Fredericksburg, was recorded in the Orange County court house today. Nothing is known here of Ford's intention regarding the property. The price is understood to be $10,000.

The Vaucluse is one of a group of mines dating back to Colonial days. It is part of a grant of land from the King of England to Alexander Spottswood, first governor of Virginia. These mines contained gold, but below water level it was found to contain alloy too expensive to remove. There is some speculation as to whether Ford proposes to overcome this by the use of modern machinery.

Zeppelin Due to Reach U. S. Coast This Afternoon

this 30-mile pusher to last that long."

Capt. Lehmann, like the rest, is highly elated. He just came over to me and said, jokingly:

"Don't you think we had better throttle her down a bit? Maybe we had better at that, if we want to see San Francisco in the day time."

Whether we will first touch the coast near Seattle or possibly at Cape Mendocino (California), remains undetermined. The decision will be made ome time Sunday by Dr. Eckener and his officers.

At midnight before we had crossed the date line, we apparently had found the tail wind Dr. Eckener had been looking for, because Navigator Pruss reported to me: "We are again making around 70 miles an hour."

The Graf was quivering as if driven by a great force. I stood on the bridge just at midnight. It was very lark, except for the dim light cast over the compass and the various indicators. Two helmsmen were silently twirling their wheels, one controlling the course and direction, the other our altitude.

Standing, peering out his window to study the heavens and watching for danger signals, or, if all was clear, huddled in the chair in the darkest corner—that was Dr. Eckener.

87 Miles an Hour.

The officer of the watch was Capt. Lehmann, who silently paced the bridge, keenly alert to the drone of the motors and the rush of the winds. Clouds raced by the moon, stars came and disappeared. There was a thrill of exhilaration and exaltation and a wonderful feeling of freedom—at midnight. They were hours that never can be erased from memory.

At that time, Capt. Lehmann, turning to me as he came from the navigation room, said:

"We figure our position at 44.10 North, 175.30 East, and are making 75 knots, or 87 land miles an hour, with a 20-mile southwest wind shoving us along."

Then the executive officer added that he was going to cut out the fifth motor, which had been working most of the night.

The great, vast Pacific is sullenly submitting to conquest by the Graf, after the battle royal with the storm kings off Japan. Barrier after barrier of clouds and fogs and light head winds tried to hold us back.

At dinner time we were battered by a heavy rain, but the Zeppelin bored through irresistibly, shaking off sheets of water like a living thing.

Feeling for the Wind.

Much of the time we were in the densest, thick, clammy fogs, and again climbed through clouds. Just before sunset, we shot up through a low ceiling and emerged into the brilliant sunshine, with a vast, billowy ocean of fog beneath us, until night fell and black clouds rolled over the Graf as it plunged on through uncharted spaces, blazing the first air lane from Asia to America.

At 9 p. m. local time, our position was 171.10 East, 43.40 North. To dodge a turbulent depression to the north, Dr. Eckener veered the ship from the northeast almost directly east. At that hour, we had done 1792 miles since leaving Kasumigaura at 3:13 p. m. Friday, emphasizing the tremendous difference in speed compared with steamers, even when we have anything but exactly favorable conditions.

Dr. Eckener zigzagged and curved the Graf just like an old-time sailing ship, turning to his advantage anything that the meteorological situation offered. But all the time he was "feeling" for that west-northwest wind he believed was in the air.

Ran Through Thick Fog.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Graf Zeppelin was 1450 miles from Kasumigaura doing more than 66 miles an hour average for just about 22 hours running time, after deducting two hours gained in traveling from west to east. Our position was 165 East longitude, 40.30 North latitude. We were running into clouds, a slight fog and a bit of opposing wind, which, however, did not impede our onward progress, but forced us to remain at about 900 feet above the ocean.

At 8 o'clock this morning we were about 1165 miles out over the Pacific. It was at this time that Dr. Eckener ordered the fifth motor started to give us greater speed, as the winds were holding us back a bit.

Until 4 in the morning, several of us had remained on the bridge, fascinated by the wondrous night above the Pacific. At 8 o'clock the densest sort of fog developed, with deep clouds alternating with the buest sea and its hundreds of dotted bog islands.

At 9 o'clock, a light head wind was blowing, slowing us down to 55 miles an hour. Sir Hubert Wilkins and I had been sitting on a window ledge, watching the ever changing panorama of fog and sea when he remarked: "I shall never be satisfied again travelling in any other way."

Controversy as to Whether Day Is "Gained" or "Lost."

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Controversy exists among those who mark the Graf Zeppelin's progress as to whether the airship "gained" or "lost" a day as she crossed the 180th meridian, the international date line.

Naturally, no time is really lost or gained. A day is doubled for arbitrary calendar purposes. Its loss or gain depends upon the point of view.

The Graf's passengers will go to bed Saturday night and wake to find it still Saturday, or they will sit down to Sunday luncheon and rise from the meal to find it Saturday again, should the line be passed during the meal.

Those who maintain this is a "loss" of time cite United States government authorities who say that in crossing the line from east longitude to west, which means travelling west to east, a day is "lost." The other view is that if the Graf doubles a day she gains a day. More graphically, if a man spends a dollar and still has it, he gains a dollar.

Jules Verne based his famous tale "Around the World in 80 Days" on the trick of time in the Pacific. Phineas Fogg wagered he would circle the globe in 8[illegible] days. At the finish he thought the 80 days had passed and that he had lost his bet, but he looked at the calendar and found it a day later. At the 180th meridian he had gained a day, so he won his bet.

MEETING BROKEN UP, POLICE ARREST TWO

Crowd Dispersed at Broadway and Park—Pleas Made for Textile Workers.

Detectives last night broke up an open air labor meeting at [illegible] avenue and South Broadway, arrested two speakers, and dispersed a crowd of approximately 150 persons.

The men arrested were Dan Earley and Leo Fischer, both of Chicago. They were charged with holding a public meeting without a permit and causing obstruction of the sidewalk. Friends bailed them out.

John Braun, of Typographical Union No. 8, who acted as chairman of the meeting, was not arrested. He said the police asked Earley from his soap-box when Earley compared 16 Gastonia, (N. C.) textile workers, now charged with murder, to Sacco and Vanzetti, executed in Massachusetts for a holdup murder.

The meeting was held under auspices of the International Labor Defense, in behalf of the 16 textile organizers in Gastonia who have been arrested and charged with the murder of a chief of police who was killed in a fight with strikers. Circulars were distributed at the meeting captioned, "Stop the Frame-up! 15 National Textile Strikers and Organizers Now Face the Same Fate as Sacco and Vanzetti."

It was planned to hold the meeting Tuesday at Sokol Hall, [illegible] Chouteau Avenue, but when a crowd gathered, according to a spokesman for the International Labor Defense, the manager declined to open the hall, and police had forbidden the meeting. The meeting was then announced for tonight at Park Avenue and South Broadway, where a public space by the railway tracks is frequently used as a forum.

When detectives broke up the meeting, the crowd booed, and there were shouts of "Free speech"—"Hooray for the Land of the Free" and "This is Democratic America."

CLOTHING WORN BY WOMAN'S SLAYERS FOUND NEAR FARM

Two Pairs of Stained Overalls Discovered Near Place Where Miss Duebbert Was Shot Thursday.

ROBBERY BELIEVED TO BE ONLY MOTIVE

Handkerchiefs, Gloves, Flashlight and Cartridges Also Picked Up Near Scene of Murder.

The outer garments worn by the men who shot and killed Miss Pauline Duebbert Thursday night on her farm in St. Charles County near Femme Osage and seriously wounded her cousin, August Meyer, were all accounted for yesterday afternoon with the discovery of a pair of stained khaki coveralls on a wooded ridge overlooking the apple orchard where the shooting occurred.

A similar pair of new coveralls, bearing tell tale stains, were found Friday not far away. Strewn along a little-used woods road, leading to a county road two miles from the Duebbert farm, were found two bandanna handkerchiefs, two white handkerchiefs, two pairs of new canvas work gloves, a flashlight with a $1.50 price tag and three .38-caliber revolver cartridges.

Robbery Considered Only Motive.

Bloodhounds followed a faint trail to the road where they lost it near a point where neighbors reported seeing a Ford roadster a few hours before the shooting. Sheriff Grothe stopped using the dogs yesterday and directed his deputies in a canvass of stores about the county, hoping to find where some of the clothing and equipment used by the murderers was purchased. He said last night that he would visit stores in neighboring counties tomorrow.

The theory of the Sheriff—that the murder was committed by two amateur criminals well acquainted with the neighborhood, who became panic stricken and fled without robbing the house which contained several hundred dollars—appeared by residents of the vicinity who believed robbery could have been the only motive.

Miss Duebbert was regarded in the neighborhood as wealthy. Besides the income from the farm, which is well stocked, she is reported to have kept about $40,000 loaned out, charging the usual rates of interest. Neighbors said that most of the money was in comparatively small loans, some of them extended to farmers in the vicinity and others to persons in more distant parts of the county who could offer good security.

Was Keen Business Woman.

Practically all of her business dealings were transacted at her farm, most of them in the small "front room" of the old house. She was looked upon in the neighborhood as a keen business woman, generous almost to a fault in her personal relationship to her acquaintances but with a practical eye to business when it came to transactions involving money or property. She had sold a cow the night before the shooting.

About 200 farmers and their wives, all of the near neighbors and many from other sections in the county, gathered about the family burial plot on the Duebbert farm yesterday afternoon, on the edge of the apple orchard less than 200 yards from the spot where Miss Duebbert's body was found, as she was buried next to the graves of her grandfather, father, and brother.

The little plot, surrounded by a rude fence, is without headstones. Miss Duebbert's grandfather, the original owner of the 240-acre farm which she inherited, decreed that this should be so and his son carried out his wishes.

Knowing the intensity of feeling among the neighbors, practically all of them simple farm folk to whom the tongue of the Old Country comes still more readily than that of the new, Sheriff Grothe hesitated for more than three hours yesterday before permitting the bloodhounds to attempt to find a trail. He feared that they might follow the track of an innocent neighbor who had come to the farm shortly after midnight when the jangle of the rural phone aroused subscribers all along the line of the tragedy.

But when the gloves and handkerchiefs were discovered upon the ridge, he showed them to the dogs, and then set one of them, a blue tick trailer, upon the scent which led to the discovery of the other articles. Except for a piece of the rail, with several hairs which corresponded to those of the dead woman, caught in it, they are the only tangible clews that have developed. The rail was found a few feet from where Meyer, who is in a coma last night at St. Joseph's hospital in St. Charles, said that he lay for four hours, awaiting death, until he felt sure the men had gone away and

The theory of the Sheriff—that the murder was committed by two amateur criminals well acquainted with the neighborhood, who became panic stricken and fled without robbing the house which contained several hundred dollars—shared by residents of the vicinity who believed robbery could have been the only motive.

Miss Duebbert was regarded in the neighborhood as wealthy. Besides the income from the farm, which is well stocked, she is reported to have kept about $40,000 loaned out, charging the usual rates of interest. Neighbors said that most of the money was in comparatively small loans, some of them extended to farmers in the vicinity and others to persons in more distant parts of the county who could offer good security.

Was Keen Business Woman.

Practically all of her business dealings were transacted at her farm, most of them in the small "front room" of the old house. She was looked upon in the neighborhood as a keen business woman, generous almost to a fault in her personal relationship to her acquaintances but with a practical eye to business when it came to transactions involving money or property. She had sold a cow the night before the shooting.

About 200 farmers and their wives, all of the near neighbors and many from other sections in the county, gathered about the family burial plot on the Duebbert farm yesterday afternoon, on the edge of the apple orchard less than 200 yards from the spot where Miss Duebbert's body was found, as she was buried next to the graves of her grandfather, father, and brother.

The little plot, surrounded by a wire fence, is without headstones. Miss Duebbert's grandfather, the original owner of the 260-acre farm which she inherited, decreed that this should be so and his son carried out his wishes.

Knowing the intensity of feeling among the neighbors, practically all of them simple farm folk to whom the tongue of the Old Country comes still more readily than that of the new, Sheriff Grothe hesitated for more than three hours today before permitting the bloodhounds to attempt to find a trail. He feared that they might follow the track of an innocent neighbor who had come to the farm shortly after midnight when the jangle of the rural phone aroused subscribers all along the line of the tragedy.

But when the gloves and handkerchiefs were discovered upon the ridge, he showed them to the dogs and then set one of them, a pointer trailer, upon the scent which led to the discovery of the other articles. Except for a piece of wire rail, with several hairs which corresponded to those of the dead woman, caught in it, they are the only tangible clews that have developed. The rail was found a few feet from where Meyer, who lay in a coma last night at St. Joseph's hospital in St. Charles, said that he lay for four hours, awaiting death, until he felt sure the men had gone away and it was safe for him to enter the house and telephone.

In the meantime volunteer searchers went over the vicinity in search of the weapon from which the shots were fired. They dredged down into a deep cistern, a few feet from the orchard gate, and hunted about the haystack and outbuildings without result.

In Miss Duebbert's room, in the old house which had been built by her grandfather, was found $693 and several shares of bank stock. The money consisted of $300 in gold, some of the pieces dating back to 1887, and the remainder in bills and silver. It was deposited in a bank pending the administration of the estate.

Meyer, who had farmed for his cousin since shortly after the death of her brother Fritz, in 1913, lived in a new house a few feet from the old one which the brother completed a few weeks before his death. Miss Duebbert preferred to remain in the house in which she had been born.

Neighbors are aroused by the crime, not only because it is the first bloodshed in that section of the county in 15 years, but because of the inoffensiveness of the victims, who got on well with their neighbors and seldom left the farm. Meyer did most of the marketing, but he went abroad so seldom that a sedan which Miss Duebbert bought two years ago showed a mileage of only 1600 miles.

Neighbor Unconcerned Over Shots.

Had the wind blown from the east, instead of from the west Thursday night, the slayers might not now be at liberty. Otto Brinkmann, whose home is west of the Duebbert farm, so close that he could ordinarily hear the conversations between Miss Duebbert and her cousin as they tended the evening chores after supper, remarked to his wife that he did not hear them as usual.

"The wind's blowing the wrong way," she replied. A few minutes later, at 7:45 p. m., he heard five shots from the orchard.

"There they are," he said, "shooting owls, I guess."

And thought no more about it until the telephone call at midnight took him with other neighbors to the farm.

McGauley Theory in Bank Murder Badly Wrenched

16 to Aug. 27 to visit my sister. The McGauley trial was being held and I dropped in casually. Chief Gerk had instructed me to talk to McGauley about a pistol that Earl Reed, who is wanted for the murder of Patrolman McCormack, was thought to have secreted in McGauley's house at St. James.

"I studiously avoided mentioning the Overland murder and I purposely avoided going near the prosecutor in the case, who was the one I would have talked to had I been seeking a parole for McGauley.

"I met the judge and he asked me about McGauley's character. I told the judge he was a tough character and that a man had confessed that McGauley murdered a bank cashier. I informed the judge that I was not interested in that phase because St. Louis County has its own police department and handles such matters independently of our department.

Did Not Go to Lansing.

"That night I telephoned the Detroit police and they told me McGauley had been convicted. I then went to Canada with my wife and children and while traveling I read what was being published in St. Louis connecting me with the case. I came back to defend myself. My furlough was absolutely spoiled. Regardless of what anybody says, I did not go to Lansing and did not communicate with the Governor or suggest to anyone that McGauley be paroled."

Asked what circumstances led up to Ahrens' confession, Kaiser declared that Winfield Seeman, named by Ahrens as one of the bank robbers, indicated while in jail that Ahrens "knew something about a murder."

"We arrested Ahrens and questioned him at great length," Kaiser said. "Finally he broke down and said it was the Overland bank job. We took his confession in writing and turned it over to Sheriff Lill."

Chief Kaiser's efforts to get McGauley back to Missouri were shattered when the situation was explained to Arthur D. Wood, Commissioner of Pardons and Paroles for Michigan. Upon Kaiser's representations Wood had announced Friday that he would grant a temporary parole for McGauley's return to Missouri upon request of the proper officials. And then, apprised by the Post-Dispatch, of the County's Prosecutor's position, he decided only Gov. Caulfield's request would be honored.

Even then, Commissioner Wood said, Missouri would have to return McGauley to Michigan unless a jury assessed the death penalty.

Baldwin Relies on Alibi.

Baldwin, who is now in Clayton jail with William McGraw and William O'Hara, jointly charged in indictments with murder, will be tried in the September term.

Prosecutor Castlen, ignoring Ahrens and his confession, will rest his hope of conviction principally on the testimony of George Hoech, bank bookkeeper, who remains steadfast to his positive identification of Baldwin as "the man with the shotgun" who killed Cashier Todd V. Phelps as he stood with his back turned and his hands raised, and McGraw as the second robber in the bank. Another witness will identify O'Hara as the driver of the robbers' car.

The defense, as outlined by Baldwin's lawyer, former State Senator A. E. L. Gardner, will offer an alibi with about 15 witnesses to support it. This will be that Baldwin and a companion were at a hotel from 3 or 4 a. m. to 12:55 p. m., the day of the robbery; that Baldwin rode in a taxicab to his notorious Plantation Inn, arriving at 1:10 p. m.; that he left immediately in his own automobile and drove to Pine Lawn to see a bartender, and that he returned to his resort at 1:30, where he was arrested a few minutes later.

The State will argue that Baldwin and McGraw entered the bank, held up the bookkeeper, cashier, a customer and a woman employe, while O'Hara and another man waited outside in an automobile.

Gardner hopes to use Ahrens and O'Hara as witnesses for Baldwin but doubts whether he can secure their services since Ahrens refused to answer his questions in the deposition Friday.

Ahren's confession, a 17-page document handed to the County Sheriff by Chief Kaiser, has been found at variance in several details with the accounts of the holdup provided by witnesses. Ahrens related that three men entered the bank—himself, McGauley and Lawrence McBride—while one man, Winfield Seeman, waited in the automobile. State's witnesses have said there were two men inside the bank and two in the automobile. Ahrens declared that he begged McGauley not to shoot the cashier, while witnesses declared that the one accomplice was running out when, the slayer raised his shotgun and fired.

Denies Identifying Ahrens.

Another development was the denial by Mrs. Agnes Wilkinson that she had identified Ahrens as one of the robbers. After witnesses had viewed Ahrens at Clayton, St. Louis detectives announced this identification. Mrs. Wilkinson, however, explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter that she was too frightened and hysterical at the time of the robbery to recognize anyone. "The young man said it was him, so I guess it was," was her conclusion.

Efforts to check the alibi of McGauley, described in his denial of the crime, have met with little success. Evan Lortz, farmer, near St. James, Mo., for whom McGauley said he was working last Jan. 18, the day on which the Overland Bank was robbed, declined to make a statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "I'm not talking," Lortz said. "I don't want to say anything."

Residents of the district verified the fact that McGauley, his wife, Frieda, and their three children lived on "the Hardesty place," near Lortz's farm, between November, 1928, and April, 1929, and recalled that McGauley was "shucking corn for Evan Lortz about that time"—Jan. 18—but they could not remember any specific date. McGauley's alibi appears to rest with Lortz, who has nothing at this time to say.

McGauley, a former St. Louis Workhouse inmate, 29 years old, claimed he was not acquainted with Baldwin, a year his junior.

Ahrens Now Silent.

Ahrens, a 27-year-old auto mechanic, made his unexpected return to silence Friday afternoon in the sheriff's office at Clayton when Gardner attempted to question him in the presence of Baldwin, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Noble, Chief Deputy Sheriff Willman and reporters. Ahrens announced immediately that his attorney had advised him to make no further statements.

During the futile examination, Noble interjected a query: "How much money have you received and from whom for making the statements you have made?" Ahrens replied, "I don't know what to say now," then decided not to reply. Asked who his lawyer was, he answered, "I don't know his name."

Asked by Gardner, "When did you first know Baldwin?" he replied, "I will have to refuse to answer. I'm in deep enough already. I would only be hurting myself by saying any more."

Then to Baldwin, who seemed to resent his position, he said:

"I don't want to hurt you, Babe, but I've done enough for you as it is."

NEW STREET CAR FARE IN EFFECT TOMORROW

Commutation Tickets Go on Sale—Details of Eight Weeks Test Plan.

In preparation for the new experimental street car fare which becomes effective at 3 a. m. tomorrow, the St. Louis Public Service Co. yesterday placed on sale 12-ride weekly commutation tickets and discontinued the sale of tokens.

The commutation tickets, which cost 90 cents and are good only for the current week, are for sale by conductors and at various banks and stores. Tokens outstanding in the hands of the public will be redeemed at 8 cents each by street car conductors in quantities of not more than five. Larger quantities will be redeemed at the company's office.

The company admitted, however, that it would have to accept tokens in payment of fares if the holders insisted.

Under the new schedule, which was formally filed with the State Public Service Commission yesterday in accordance with the commission's order, the fare for adult passengers not having commutation tickets will be 10 cents. Ticket buyers who are not more than nine rides in the week also will pay a 10-cent fare, for there will be no refund for the unused portion of a ticket if as many as nine rides have been punched, and the refund for fewer than nine rides will be on the basis of 10 cents a ride. For instance, if seven rides are used there will be a refund of 20 cents, making the seven rides used cost the passenger 10 cents each.

On the other hand, after all the 12 rides are used the ticket holder may ride the remainder of the week for 5 cents on showing his ticket stub.

The fare for children under 12 years old remains at three cents.

The Public Service Commission ordered the new fare put in effect for eight weeks and ordered the street car company to make weekly reports showing the number of the different classes of fares collected for each hour of the day. The Commission hopes to obtain information that will enable it to fix fares on a basis that will encourage more persons to ride the street cars and still give the company an adequate return. Meanwhile the company's application for a 10-cent fare, four tokens for 35 cents, has been suspended until Dec. 1.

In the current issue of "Transit News," distributed in the street cars, the company urged the public to buy tickets, pointing out the saving this would mean to regular riders. The cost to the rider who uses all his 12 rides in a week, but no more, will be 7½ cents a ride. If more rides are used the average cost goes down.

The commutation tickets will not be good on the Kirkwood Express cars on which the fare will be 20 cents each way.

Three Brothers, Burned, Die.

By the Associated Press.

DUNDEE, Minn., Aug. 24.—Sprayed by burning gasoline when a tank exploded during a fire here last night, three brothers died today from their burns, two other men were reported in a critical condition, and a half dozen others were less seriously hurt. The dead are Raymond, 19 years old, Albert, 22, and Frank, 27, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hullerman. The injured are Eugene and Paul Appel. The accident occurred while a small crowd watched fire destroy the farmers' co-operative grain elevator.

Nine Juveniles Sitting On Poles and Garage Roofs

Two Other Children Are in Bicycle Endurance Contest, All Because One Boy Got a Trip to Florida.

Although 11-year-old Donald Wood abandoned his perch at 5050 Emerson avenue yesterday afternoon after 144 hours, the open season for juvenile endurance contests went forward unabated last night with seven boys and two girls perched on poles or garages and two others laboring on bicycles. Granite City now has two garage-roof squatters in the contests.

There may be others. Telephone calls, announcing new entrants or asking about "sitting contest rules," came in number to the Post-Dispatch. There were three bicycle riders, but Thomas Baumgartner, 16 years old, of 2150 Oregon avenue, completed his 24 hours of continuous pedaling at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. Two others, however, are carrying on—John Holtmann, 16, of 5034 Steffens avenue, a Western Union messenger boy, and William Collins, 15, of 4767 Plover avenue.

Roselle Taylor, 10, of 6638 Chamberlain, University City, was the first girl to go up on a swing pole; she took her post at 2:45 p. m. Friday. Her parents and two neighbors take turns on guard.

At 7:30 o'clock last night Mildred Scofield, 12, of 4922 Wren avenue, climbed to a platform on top of a 14-foot pole, determined, she said, to stay 240 hours.

William St. Clair, 15, of 3935 Washington boulevard, was one who called the Post-Dispatch to announce that since he had prepared a shelf for himself upon a six-foot clothes prop, he was ready to begin if someone would tell him the rules.

It all seems to have started with Paul Kuver of Webster Groves, who bethought himself of a new vacation amusement by sitting atop a pole the week before last. A neighbor admiring his grit gave him a trip to Florida.

The youngest of the sitters is Vernon Stahl, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stahl, 5429 Geraldine avenue, who occupies a little board on top of a swing pole by day and sleeps in a wooden box by night. He started at 4 p. m. Friday. Another new entrant was Junior Meyer, 12, of 6740 Page boulevard, who occupied a similar platform at 8:30 p. m. Friday. Jerome Reeder, 12, is on a board in a plum tree in his back yard, at 4714 Beacon street. He started at 9 a. m. Friday.

The boys who want "to put Granite City on the map" are James Anderson, 10, and George England, 13, who are residing for the present on the roof of the Anderson garage at 2317 Cleveland avenue, Granite City. Dick Arnfield, 14, a playmate, found himself overweight when he attempted to climb to the roof with them at 9 a. m. Friday. William Huxel Jr., 14, made the ascent, but complained of a headache, and came down at 8:30 a. m. yesterday.

Rudy Markovich, 10, straddled a board projecting from the roof of his father's garage at 4922 Division avenue, at 7 a. m. Friday.

Ernest Stahlmann Jr., 907 Landscape avenue, Webster Groves, and Jerry Flemming, 12, 6015 Shulte avenue, joined in the juvenile fad, which Health Commissioner Starkloff is wont to discourage because of harmful effects on the children.

$3000 HOLDUP ON ESTATE OF JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

However, Two Negro Robbers Are Captured 15 Minutes Later on Train.

By the Associated Press.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The paymaster of the Westchester Construction Co., which is doing some work on the Pocantico Hills estate of John D. Rockefeller, was held up today by two Negroes, who escaped with $3000, but were captured 15 minutes later on a train at Yonkers.

A few minutes after the holdup, George McGarry, station agent at Eastview, saw the Negroes run across the platform and board a passenger train at his station. Almost simultaneously the alarm from the Rockefeller estate came in. McGarry wired ahead to Yonkers, and police there removed the men from the train. They found the bag containing the payroll in their possession, the officers said.

Argentine Plea for Haiti.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 24.—The Contnental Alliance today sent to President Herbert Hoover an appeal for restoration of complete independence to Haiti. The telegram said: "Argentine public opinion, fully aware of the facts and feeling of distress of the Haitian people, in the name of human justice is desirous of promoting good harmony between the American nations. It unanimously demands restoration of the Hatian constitutional Government with full national independence."

BARS SERVICE CARS IN STRIKE

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 24.—Judge Mark Boatner in Civil District Court today denied an injunction sought by service car interests in the street car strike to prevent city officials from interfering with their operation on a "gratuitous" plan.

Judge Boatner held the service cars liable to the provisions of the city ordinance which practically bars them from the streets. Its constitutionality was not attacked. Attorneys for service car operators intimated they would take an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

ITALY'S DECISION ON ENTERING SCHNEIDER RACES WITHHELD

Secretary of Royal Aero Club Criticises Britain for Refusing to Postpone Event.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 24.—Tests of the remaining Italian racing airplanes continued today although the Government has not yet made definite announcement of whether Italy will participate in the Schneider cup air races in England on Sept. 6 and 7 in view of England's refusal to postpone the event.

A statement by Cavalere Nino Cariassare, Secretary of the Royal Aero Club of Italy, today charged that the race this year had been given "an aspect excessively tourist and commercial." He declared himself unable to understand why England had refused to follow the courteous precedent of the United States in 1926 in postponing the event.

Cariassare declared that the Italian Club would demand from the International Aeronautic Federation a specific ruling concerning race postponements and also a clear declaration about the sportive phase of the Schneider cup races in relation to the commercial.

RUTH ELDER ADMITS SHE WILL WED CAMP

Flyer, on Arrival in Air Derby, Confirms Engagement to Son of Late Athletic Expert.

The reported engagement of Miss Ruth Elder, trans-Atlantic flyer and movie actress, and Walter Camp Jr., picture producer and son of the late athletic director at Yale, was confirmed yesterday afternoon by Miss Elder on her arrival in St. Louis as a competitor in the women's air derby.

Miss Elder said she and Camp met socially in June and became betrothed shortly before the take-off of the race last Sunday. She denied a report from Hollywood, Cal., that Camp whispered his proposal just as the race started from Santa Monica and got his answer from San Bernardino by telephone. "Mr. Camp is not a schoolboy," she said.

Miss Elder plans to meet Camp in New York at the close of the race in Cleveland, O., when they will make definite plans for the wedding.

"We will live in New York, and I will keep on flying," she said.

Miss Elder, who is 27 years old, has been divorced twice. Her first husband was C. E. Moody, a Georgia school teacher. Her second husband, Lyle Womack, obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce in Panama last December on the grounds of cruelty. The decree was made final in June of this year.

Accused of Siphoning Gasoline.

DIXON, Ill., Aug. 24.—Robert Gertes, 25 years old, an employe of the Title Trust Bank in Sterling, was arrested here recently by city police on a charge of larceny. Gertes recently purchased a new automobile and had equipped himself with a piece of hose and was caught siphoning gasoline from parked cars here. He was to be arraigned before County Judge Leech today.

PAIR WHO KILLED MOONSHINER ARE MOVED FOR SAFETY

Deputy Marshal and Deputy Sheriff Taken to Tulsa After Threats at Tahlequah, Ok.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TULSA, Ok., Aug. 24. — J. Alfred Demoss, deputy United States marshal from Tulsa and Willis Thompson of Pryor, deputy sheriff, both accused of the murder of Charles Jenkins, fugetive moonshiner, were brought to the Tulsa county jail from Tahlequah for safe keeping yesterday afternoon.

Decision to remove the officers to Tulsa was made because of the intense feeling following their arraignment and pleas of not guilty to the homicide charge.

Jenkins was shot Tuesday night by DeMoss after a futile attempt to escape near his home, eight miles southeast of Kansas, Ok.

DeMoss and Thompson were attempting to arrest Jenkins on a two-year-old warrant charging him with violation of the prohibition law.

Two hundred kin folks, all said to be living in Jenkins home county, came to the county seat for the arraignment.

Ralph Snoddy injured in Race.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 24.—Ralph Snoddy, veteran speedboat driver, was injured today when his boat, the Miss Los Angeles, overturned in the second heat of the Gold Cup race. The boat was traveling at a speed of approximately 45 miles an hour when it overturned.

Spaniard's New Safety Plane

THE auto-giro aircraft demonstrated at Philadelphia last Friday. It is the invention of Juan de la Cierva, and while it has an ordinary propeller in front the chief feature of the design is a set of blades above, revolving in a horizontal plane. 15 Women in Air Race Land at Parks Airport the airport cheered the rapid succession of arriving flyers, and did their best, by the numbers displayed, to pick out the best known of the pilots. Ruth Elder, famed for the attempted trans-Atlantic flight which ended in her rescue by a sailing ship, was the favorite with the crowd. Flowers and telegrams awaited her at the office.

Coveralls and white helmets were removed by most of the flyers, revealing a variety of sport dresses, knickies and riding costumes. Miss Earhart was one who did not cover her sport dress and small felt hat while flying.

While they made literal application of powder puffs to noses, and lotions to blistered hands, the the flyers' talk was chiefly of elapsed time on the latest leg of the flight. The official record of the flight from Kansas City for the four making the best time was: Mrs. Thaden, 1:50:21; Miss Noyes, 1:50:51; Miss O'Donnell, 1:32:23; Miss Earhart, 1:52:52.

Smoke and Bumpy Air.

There was also complaint of the smoky air over St. Louis, which made it less easy to find the port, and of "bumps" in the air, ascribed to the heat. Hot weather, the flyers said, produces up-and-down bumps in the air currents. Miss O'Donnell said one of the bumps which she struck in crossing Missouri was such as nearly to throw her from her seat. Most of the flyers carry parachutes.

Talk of sabotage and wilful damage to some of the competing planes, which has been heard since the fatal crash of Miss Marvel Crosson of Los Angeles on the Arizona desert, was little heard after yesterday's landing. But special guards, some representing the flyers and some employed by airplane manufacturing companies, watched some of the aircraft from the time they were placed in the hangars. The machines thus watched included Miss Omlie's, Miss Haizlip's and the Curtiss-Robins flown by Misses Nichols and Walker.

Ruth Elder said, after landing, that she had not charged or suspected any wilful damage to her plane. She said that at San Bernardino, Cal., a mistake was made in putting gasoline into her oil tank, but that this was discovered and remedied at once, and that she did not consider it an intentional act.

Mrs. Rasche complained that dirt somewhere in her gasoline line had made her lose time in yesterday's flying, causing her motor to miss. She was in danger yesterday of having to quit the race for another cause, her Federal flying license having expired. Messages received at Wichita said that she was to be "grounded," but telegrams to Washington brought a renewal of the license by the Department of Commerce, and a message to that effect reached her at Kansas City.

Nineteen contestants in the derby started from Santa Monica last Sunday. Miss Marvel Crosson crashed and was killed in the Arizona desert, and three others have dropped out through various mishaps.

The landing at Kansas City were all made auspiciously, save that Mrs. Miller, Australian aviatrix, landed first on the wrong field and lost some time in getting to the Municipal Airport, the official stopping place.

Leave Dinner Party Before 9:30.

Looking like a bevy of college girls in summer camp the derby contestants were entertained at dinner by the Exchange Club and a half-dozen other East St. Louis organizations, at the Broadview Hotel.

Mutual aid in facial treatment had done wonders for the tanned skins of a few hours before. But weariness and sleepiness could not be so readily overcome, and before 9 o'clock the guests began to excuse themselves and slip up to the rooms provided for them in the hotel. By 9:30 the last of them had gone. Ruth Elder stayed at Hotel Statler, in St. Louis.

Mayor Doyle, Wallace Wright, chairman of the local aeronautical commission, and women's club presidents made the welcoming talks. The flyers merely smiled and bowed.

The departure today, at one-minute intervals beginning at 8 a. m., will be in the reverse order of the arrival yesterday, Mrs. Haizlip taking off first and Miss Noyes last.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Margaret Perry of New York, who was forced to withdraw from the women's air derby, is seriously ill with typhoid fever, according to diagnosis of physicians today.

Mrs. Perry is at a hospital here where she was taken with a high fever Friday morning, immediately after she landed at the Municipal Airport. Illness has dogged Mrs. Perry since the race got well under way. She was forced to spend Thursday night at Abilene because she was ill when she arrived there. She hoped to be able to continue the race after a night's rest there and took off for Fort Worth in time to arrive here shortly after 7 o'clock Friday morning. She landed her plane at the Municipal Airport, although at that time she was suffering from a fever, was barely able to see and had little sense of equilibrium. A physician at the airport took her temperature and found that she was suffering from fever of 104 degrees. She immediately was placed in an ambulance and carried to the hospital.

Mrs. Perry said that she remembered little of landing her plane here. The physician attending Mrs. Perry, said that it is likely she contracted the fever when she was marooned in Mexico last month. Mrs. Perry was forced down south of El Paso in July and for more than a week lived in a small hotel in an inland village in Mexico.

Mrs. Perry's mother, who resides in Beverly Hills, Calif., is enroute here.

Miss Trout Lost Several Times, Arrives at Wichita.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 24.—Miss Bobbie Trout, woman's air derby entrant, arrived here tonight at 7:30 from Tulsa, Ok., after being lost several times en route. She plans to take off from Municipal Airport tomorrow morning at 5 o'clock in an attempt to reach East St. Louis in time to take off with the other contestants. She plans to stop at Kansas City for fuel.

Mrs. Florence Lowe Barnes, San Marino, Cal., arrived here this afternoon flying a plane which had been sent to Pecos where she had washed out her own ship. She plans to continue by plane to Cleveland tomorrow at daybreak although she was definitely eliminated from the race.

BISHOP INTIMATES EMPRINGHAM IS OUT

Manning in Statement Says Necessary Ecclesiastical Action Will Be Taken.

By the Associated Press.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 24.—Bishop William T. Manning, answering today an open letter addressed to him by the Rev. Dr. James Empringham, in which the latter renounced his holy orders, said the necessary ecclesiastical action will be taken. He declined to answer the personal attacks directed at him by Dr. Empringham.

"I should not consider it right for me to enter into any public discussion of this matter, and I have declined to do so," said Bishop Manning in his statement. "Dr. Empringham as been divorced and remarried. This is all that need be said as to his standing in the church.

"The religious and moral views of Dr. Empringham need not be discussed. The necessary ecclesiastical action in the case will, of course, be taken."

Dr. Empringham, who formerly held Episcopal pastorates in New York City and in Syracuse, N. Y., but of late years has devoted his time to the Church Temperance Society, an organization opposed to prohibition, is under fire in New York City in connection with another enterprise, the Health Education Society, Inc.

The society's offices were closed some time ago by the State Health Department, and threats that charges of practising medicine without a license would be filed against him have been made.

Dr. Empringham has been in California, from where he addressed his open letter to Bishop Manning, but is said to be on his way back to New York to face the charges. He denied the charges in his letter.

HELPER DEPARTS IN HASTE; CASH REGISTER $110 SHORT

Butcher's Assistant in Clayton Was Extra Man Employed on Saturdays.

The helper was an extra man employed on Saturdays.

itself is the last remaining fragment of the temple built 3000 years ago. It is situated close to the Moslem shrine of the Mosque of Omar and around these two symbols of ancient religions deadly rioting rages.

The wall itself is a fine example of ancient Jewish architecture. It is still intact to a height of 40 feet above the ground and it goes down to a depth of 60 to 65 feet into the ground. It is reached by many turnings off the street Bab Es Silseleh. At the wall Jewish pilgrims gather three days a week to pray and mourn.

Arabs own the ground upon which the wall is built but they do not deny Jews the right to worship there. A part of the Jewish ritual calls for a screen to separate the sexes. Arabs maintain this blocks the right-of-way and the controversy results in trouble.

Centering on the ancient remnant of sacred Solomon's Temple, which is known as the Wailing Wall, sacred shrine to Jews all over the world, trouble started in Jerusalem at noon yesterday. Crowds of armed Arabs attacked the Jews, who formed themselves into defense units. Rioting spread and soon got beyond control. Hospitals were crowded with the injured.

Authorities proclaimed martial law and barred the populace from the streets after 6 p. m. Establishment of martial law carried with it censorship on all news from the disturbed area.

Disorders Attributed to Laxity on Part of Officials.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. — Dr. S. Margoshes, editor of The Day, a New York Jewish daily paper, who is in Palestine, has cabled a special dispatch to his paper.

"The entire Jewish community is in a state of peril," says Margoshes. "Wild rumors are everywhere current, new attacks are continually breaking out in all quarters of the city and all Jewish stores have been closed. The general impression as to the cause of the troubles seems to be a laxity on the part of the authorities, the unreliability of the police and the hesitancy of officials to act in the absence of the High Commissioner.

"Having interviewed representatives of all shades of opinion, I have found a remarkable unanimity of expression. They are all agreed that the greatest injustices have been done the Jews since the excesses of 1920.

"Ben Avi, editor of a powerful Jewish weekly, has said that the only remedy is to request a commission from the League of Nations to investigate and settle the entire matter, since the English have ailed to do so.

"The Jews, he says, are willing to abide by the decision of such a commission. Solomon, vice president of another publication, Vad Laomi, writes that the conditions around the Wailing Wall are worse now than they were under the Turks.

"Jewish indignation is so great at the present time that there is no telling what the hot heads may do. Brody, acting head of the Zionist Executive, has stated that the Jews cannot recede from their position and that the British reply to his note was highly unsatisfactory.

"The opinion of the man in the street is that the colonial officials are trying to embarrass the Government in England and the Arab hostility has been inspired by these officials, the entire Hebrew press, whose tone, reflects this opinion.

"Ben Avi, in an editorial in Palestine Weekly and also in Doar Hayom, under the title 'J'accuse,' lays the blame on the acting High Commissioner, Luke, and charges him with weakness and bad motives.

GERK TELLS GANG HEAD TO GET OUT OF TOWN

Charles Fresina Receives Warning After Denying Knowledge of Extortion Plots.

Chief of Police Gerk yesterday told Charles Fresina, Italian gang leader, that the "best thing for him to do was to get out of town." Gerk's warning came during a conference with Fresina at Police Headquarters shortly before Fresina was released on a $10,000 common law bond. He and four other gangsters on the police list of 20 men who are to be arrested on sight, had made their appearance earlier in the day at the "show up" at headquarters.

Chief Gerk spoke with Fresina in an effort to get information of extortion cases aid to the hands of Italian gangsters. Fresina denied anyknowledge of such condit' ns and told Gerk that Gerk "had nothing on him," and that he "hadn't made any trouble." Gerk replied: "The police are going to make lots of trouble for you and your kind," and the Chief's warning to leave the city followed.

Another arrest yesterday was that of Dominic Calico, 60-year-old father of Ralph Calico, gangster and eputed extortionist. The elder Calico was arrested at his home, 1234 North Ninth street, by detectives who found two .32 caliber revolvers, a double-barreled shotgun and a large bore rifle on the premises. Dominic Calico is being held for questioning.

Reports have come to the police that another Italian gang war is imminent and the arrests have come not only in the line of regular police work but in an effort prevent another outbreak.

The other four gangsters on the police list who were arrested are Dewey Goebel, Tony Carmine, said to be aligned with the Russo faction, Saro Mantia, indicted but never tried for the murder of Alphonse Palazzolo, and Lester Barth, under indictment for murder and robbery in connection with the killing of a jewelry salesman in 1925, and for the $12,000 holdup of the Hamilton State Bank in 1926.

Yesterday the Circuit Attorney's office presented material to Circuit Judge Hamilton to show that the $43,700 property qualification of Mrs. Angeline Spicuzza, 1214 North Sixth Street, who signed Barth's bonds in the murder and robbery case and in the bank holdup, was far in excess of the real value of the property. Barth's bond in the murder and robbery of the jewelry salesman is $25,000, and $18,700 in the bank holdup.

According to the Circuit Attorney's office, property listed by Mrs. Spicuzza as worth $38,700 was appraised by an expert as worth only $14,700. The Circuit Attorney's office asked that additional security be furnished. Judge Hamilton, who approved Barth's bonds, announced he would make no decision on the qualifications pending habeas corpus hearings, to be held tomorrow, instituted in behalf of Barth, Carmine, Goebel and Mantia in connection with their most recent arrests.

County Water Service Complaint.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 24.—A complaint that the St. Louis County Water Co. was not rendering adequate water service to consumers residing along South avenue, in the subdivision known as Wheaton, was filed with the Missouri Public Service Commission today by the South Avenue Improvement Association and 46 individuals. The complainants asserted the present water service was inadequate and that at times the service failed entirely. The commission was asked to consider forcing the company to install larger mains and render adequate service.

GERMAN MARSHAL WHO DIRECTED TURKS DIES

Liman Von Sanders, in Charge at Gallipoli, Was 74 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 24.—Field Marshall Liman Von Sanders, 74 years old, who directed operations against the British in Gallipoli during the World War, died Thursday at Munich.

Otto K. B. Liman Von Sanders was a German cavalry general to whom Mohammed Reshid V., sultan of Turkey, by arrangement with ex-Kaiser William II, intrusted in 1913 the reorganization of the Turkish army. He had the title of marshal inspector general.

He remained in the Turkish defenses at Gallipoli in 1915 and after the British government organized the Turkish fighting forces in Asia Minor and conducted operations in 1918 in Palestine.

The Turkish debacle, however, nullified his efforts. He resigned in 1918 but was ordered by the Berlin government to remain at his post. The end came when the British closed in on his headquarters at Nazareth. Von Sanders escaped and tried vainly to make another stand at Aleppo.

The news of the armistice reached him while organizing another defense zone at Adana. He surrendered his command to Mustapha Kemal Pasha and went to Constantinople where he successfully arranged for the repatriation of the German forces.

He then was interned at Malta by the British who released him in 1919, after which he returned to Germany. Originally bearing the name Liman, the general was granted the additional title of Von Sanders by the Kaiser in 1913. He was 74 years old.

His adverse criticism of Turkish conditions in his book published in 1921, "Five Years in Turkey," aroused widespread comment.

BRECKINRIDGE JONES ESTATE ASSESSED $16,140 STATE TAX

Report Values Holdings at $765,500 Instead of $363,096; Bank Stock Value Rises.

A state inheritance tax of $16,140.09 has been assessed against the estate of Breckinridge Jones, banker and capitalist, as shown in a report filed in Probate Court yesterday.

The report was prepared by an appraiser who was appointed to compute the tax and it reveals that an inventory filed in court several months ago placed the value of the estate at $363,096.80 the actual value is $765,500.57. The increase is due to the fact that all of Mr. Jones' stock holdings were valued in the inventory at par, while the appraiser finds that some of the stocks, principally shares in the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., now the Mississippi Valley-Merchants-State Trust Co., have a much higher market value. He owned 1076 shares of Mississippi Valley stock which at par were listed at $100 a share of a total of $107,600, but possess an actual value totaling $360,460. Other stock in the estate was similarly appraised.

Mr. Jones, who was chairman of the board of the former Mississippi Valley Trust Co., died Nov. 21, last. By his will his daughters and sons are the principal beneficiaries. They are Mrs. Kent Clow, Mrs. Harrison Hoblitzelle, Reid Jones, Breckinridge Jones, Jr., and Daniel W. Jones. The latter and the Mississippi Valley-Merchants-State Trust Co. were named as executors.

SUES RESTAURANT PROPRIETOR FOR CAUSING HIS ARREST

Nicholas Polito Jr. Says Act Was Unjustified and That Police Gave Him Permanent Injuries.

Suit for $10,000 damage growing out of his arrest, Aug. 11, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Nicholas Polito Jr., 23 years old, a son of Justice of the Peace Polito, against William O. Moss, restaurant proprietor at 518 North Sarah street.

It is alleged that Moss caused young Polito to be arrested and held in a "tight room" eight hours, with only the police permitted to hee him. In this time, the petition sets forth, Polito was beaten by policemen. He declares that his spine was hurt, he was disfigured and he suffered permanent injuries.

According to the suit no justification existed for the arrest and the beating.

At the time Polito was arrested peace disturbance charges were placed against him and two companions, but the cases were dismissed by Police Judge Beck, who reprimanded four city detectives who appeared as witnesses. The court held there was no evidence to substantiate the charges. The officers contended that Polito and his companions were annoying the night manager of the restaurant and that when they interfered a fight took place.

J. J. Brouk Left $87,031.

Joseph J. Brouk, 3145 Russell boulevard, who died June 19, left an estate valued at $87,031.57, as shown by an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday. He left the bulk of his property in trust for the benefit of his widow, Mrs. Brouk. At her death the property is to be divided among three sons and a daughter or their heirs. Mr. Brouk was city salesman for the National Bearing Metal Corporation.

All-Walnut Dining Suite

THIS all-walnut suite gains its charm through the use of beautifully grained, matched wood rather than ornamentation. Panels are veneered on walnut, while posts and stretchers and chairs are solid walnut. Table extending to 8 ft., 66 in. Buffet, Server, China Cabinet, Armchair and five Side Chairs comprise the suite. This is truly a very unusual buy.

McKesson SERVICE

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

"Gimme a two-cent stamp and make it snappy!"

GLOWING globes of red and green used to invite passers-by into a cool, clean-smelling drug store lit by sputtering arc lamps. Then the white-coated druggist was, as O. Henry says, looked on as a "counsellor, a confessor, an advisor, an able and willing missionary and mentor whose learning is respected, and whose occult wisdom is venerated."

Times have changed. The tempo of living and business beats faster. Medical science has made great advances.

With all of these, the independent community druggist has kept pace. Unfortunately, many who use the drug store today as a place to buy stamps, to have packages wrapped, to ask road directions, to change a bill, or to get a light for a cigar, sometime forget that the man behind the counter is a Registered Pharmacist.

His professional education required years at college. His reputation has been patiently built up through years of painstaking prescription service. His code of ethics, self imposed, is as rigid as that of any of the professions.

An independent druggist, whether around the corner from your home or downtown near your office, he still retains the friendly, sincere, interested spirit, reminiscent of the red-and-green-globe days.

He is actively a part of your community, your neighbor, with a personal interest in your health and welfare.

Whether it's a prescription to be compounded quickly and accurately or a purchase of high quality merchandise at reasonable prices; you insure satisfaction, fine quality, and personal service, by looking for the drug store which displays on its window the symbol of McKesson Service.

FLAG RAISED AS SUN SHINES ON BYRD PARTY

By RUSSELL OWEN.

(Copyright, 1929, by the Post-Dispatch and the New York Times Co. World rights reserved.)

This story appears exclusively in St. Louis in The Post-Dispatch. All news articles from members of the Byrd party or from special correspondents assigned to it appear only in The Post-Dispatch in this city.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Aug. 24.—The sun came back yesterday as regular sun should, and sent its light flashing across the barrier top to spill over the edge and touch the tops of ice masses on the bay with fire. Far down in the South the cliff walls reflected the brilliant golden light for which we have waited so long. The ice cliffs sparkled like gigantic mirrors winking back a message of welcome to the sun as if there was some secret understanding between them and they were amused at our boisterous happiness.

"We have been doing this for years" they seemed to say, "why all the excitement."

But for most of us this had been our first winter night, our first experience of not seeing the sun for four long months, and there was holiday and rejoicing. Huge and swollen by refraction, tremulous through the haze, the sun didn't rise very far above the horizon despite the evident looming which left images above their natural level.

As if to tantalize us it just peeped over the edge of the world and then crawled slowly along, half hidden at times by thin clouds. To make up for this reluctance to climb any higher, however, it stayed with us a long time and even after it had set again the sunset illumined the sky with its marvelous changing pattern of colors.

Byrd Orders Flag Raised.

Commander Byrd ordered the flag raised. It was taken down the day the sun disappeared last April and this seemed the appropriate day to let it again fly over Little America. So in the bitter cold, for winter is far from over and some of our coldest weather is still to come, all the men in camp were grouped on the mound of snow about the flagpole. When the flag was lowered last fall the mess hall stood out above the snow and there were big piles of excavated snow but now the house has entirely disappeared and the uneven surface has been smoothed over and the holes filled in by the winter blizzards. The surface everywhere around camp is many feet higher than it was a few months ago.

The flag was raised at the Commander's order and as it whipped out in the 20-mile wind everyone uncovered although it was 40 below and the wind gripped ears and noses painfully. Then the British flag was unfurled beside it and the Norwegian, and everyone saluted each of them with bared head. The ceremony took several minutes and when it was over there was a rush for cover.

It didn't go far, however, because at this time Jack O'Brien decided that something ought to be done about the Irish flag and he unfurled a green pennant he had had made on which a gold harp and the words "Erin Go Bragh" had been painted, and waving this over his head he started a snake dance around the camp which lasted about five minutes and then the wind became too much for even his Hibernian enthusiasm.

Larry Gould's Birthday.

With all these things happening, and such small events are tremendously important in our little community, there was more to come for the day the sun came back was also Larry Gould's birthday "this is a big day for us," said Commander Byrd, "because of the return of the sun and a bigger day because it is Larry's birthday, he has won the affection and esteem of the whole expedition."

Larry is not only second in command and senior scientist but in the regard of every one in camp occupies much the same position in the expedition that Dr. Wilson did in the Scott expedition. So his birthday was an occasion as great as the return of the sun. It was celebrated with a turkey dinner and afterward an entertainment.

The World's Greatest Cleaner

Samoline does all it says: it is the most remarkable cleaner I have ever used. It cleans and polishes like magic. I recommend the use of Samoline for every purpose.

I used Samoline to clean and polish an old tarnished silver tea set that I have discarded for many years. Samoline and a little rubbing makes an appearance like it was a replated tea set. Only users can be convinced of the marvelous cleaner.

Dr. Eckener Is Anxious To Pass Over Seattle

Day of Reaction for Zeppelin Passengers After Strenuous Entertainment by the Japanese—Commander Has Indigestion.

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY,
Only Woman Passenger Aboard the Graf Zeppelin on Its Around-the-World Cruise.
(Copyright, 1929.)

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 24.—It seemed this morning like Commander Eckener was hunting all over the Pacific Ocean for that "Nor'wester" he has been bragging about that was to boost us along at a still merrier clip toward Seattle.

"I want to get a glimpse of Seattle," Dr. Eckener said today, and so it is assured that the commander has figured out the time of his arrival over the American coast to make that visit possible and arrive at Los Angeles by daylight.

For the passengers, it was a day of reaction after Tokio's heat and enthusiastic entertainment. Some of them slept most of the day. If they are conscious of taking in the historic conquering of the Pacific, they are apparently getting it without being up and about.

Even Dr. Eckener had a little reaction after Japan's too great friendliness and desire to do him honor. It gave him indigestion. He sent word from the bridge he would not come to dinner, and requested I take his chair.

Lieut. Richardson, who had been very active in the navigation room all day, also reported under the weather tonight, calling on "Doctor" von Wiegand for medicine.

Commander Rosendahl frequently called at the navigating room after the American wireless stations had picked up our signals. Lieut. Leeds, whose genial personality has earned him the sobriquet "Sunshine," is looking forward with much intensity to getting home.

It was truly a weird picture tonight as I gazed out of the windows into the clouds and fog, with here and there a hole through which the shimmery Pacific a thousand feet below, could be seen for a moment before it disappeared.

I sat in my corner of the navigation room adjoining the bridge and watched Navigators Whiteman and Pruss try to "shoot the star" with a sextant, with Lieut. Richardson enthusiastically helping out.

Mars was as coy as Venus, quickly slipping behind the misty veil. Even Capella would not stay put for a shot as we aimed onward at the big target of America.

Through a hole in the clouds below, Pruss dropped a flare to calculate our drift. It gleamed strangely on the black waters.

The only excitement of the day, with the exception of the storm, was a big whale, which we swept past in the forenoon. A few weeks ago, coming by steamer from Japan, I was kept awake by the fog siren blowing day and night. Tonight I feel I was rocked to sleep by the gentle swaying of the Zeppelin.

AUTOMATIC DEVICE TIMES PLAYERS' MOVES AT CHESS

Pieces Make Contact and Start Clock—St. Louis Watchmaker the Designer.

Henry Mueller, a watchmaker at 3618 Olive street, is also a chess player and an enthusiast about the game. With an ordinary chess player time is not a considerable element, but with a chess-playing watchmaker it might well be. At any rate Mueller has conceived, designed and made an electric automatic time-controlled chess board—something new and different, which he purposes to exhibit at the Western Chess Congress which opens at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. tomorrow.

It is intended to make chess tournaments less arduous, to free the player's mind from attention to the fleeting minutes, to record the time between moves and to eliminate the possibility of dispute on the point—for, whether the casual onlooker, believe it or not, tournament chess games are played with a time limit.

The board has the appearance of an ordinary full-sized chess or checker layout. The black squares are pierced for pegged chessmen. The peg makes an electrical contact with a wire at the bottom of its socket. These wires run to twin clocks mounted in a neat box alongside the table. Thus, when a player lifts a piece he breaks a contact, stopping his own recording clock and starting his opponent's.

As a further refinement, Mueller plans to connect an alarm with the clocks, to be set for the specified time limit of the tournament. When a player's bell rings time is up.

There are, Mueller says, 300 parts in his chess board, exclusive of those in the two clocks. He fashioned them and put them together in odd moments during the last six months.

NO EXCITEMENT ON CROSSING DATE LINE

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS,
Noted Explorer Making the Round-the-World Trip on the Graf Zeppelin.
(Copyright, 1929.)

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 24.—This is the first time in history that anybody ever rode in an airship all day and all night for two Saturdays in a consecutive 48 hours. Yesterday was Saturday and today is Saturday.

There was no real excitement aboard ship when it was announced that we were crossing the 180th meridian, as most of the passengers were asleep.

The winds today, while not severe, have been somewhat tricky. We have had various breezes, some ahead and some astern, but today's speed gives us hope that we will fulfill our expectation that the Pacific journey will average a flying speed of more than 100 kilometers an hour (62½ miles).

Flying above the clouds the intermittent sunshine makes navigation easy. Sometimes we are hurdling banks of rain soaked cumulus clouds, the body of the Zeppelin above the gondolas scraping through the mist. When we get into that position we are permitted to see the most wonderful effects—rainbows, halos, and parabolas on the clouds opposite the sun.

A continuous watch from the windows affords a pleasing panorama, that, together with the knowledge that we are rapidly approaching our destination, eliminates all boredom.

We have had occasional excitement in the way of sighting big fish. During the day we sighted three white whales, several monstrous fish that we did not identify, and one tremendous sun fish. All of them were plainly seen from our height of 800 feet during intervals of clear weather.

Several varieties of birds were startled from the surface of the sea by the noise of the engines and by the shadow of the airship as we flew erratically low over the water.

What with our rapid easterly movement and our comparatively low latitudes, the sun sinks quickly as compared with the length of the days on our journey across Siberia last week. For some time the darkness was absolute until the moon finally came up to shine through streaks in the clouds.

There are indications that we will have fine weather until at least late Sunday. Commander Eckener is highly pleased with our progress although he has been forced to take a more southerly course than had been anticipated. We are shooting practically across on the latitude of Seattle.

26 Shipwrecked Sailors Three Days in Lifeboats

Return on Liner President Harrison to U. S. but Tell Far From Woeful Story of Their Experiences.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—"Just a shipwreck", twenty - six sailors sighed wearily, picked up their duffle bags and walked ashore this morning.

They were the survivors of the freighter Quimistan, and had drifted at the mercy of a sea for three days, with nothing to console them but a phonograph in one of the two lifeboats, tons of fresh water, bags of bread and canned pineapple, lobster, roast beef and cheese.

The only hardship they reported was an insufficient amount of butter for their bread.

Capt. George Pietsch, master of the foundered 58-year-old banana boat, spread the cheer for his crew when the President Harrison brought the castaways to quarantine at 1 a. m. yesterday. The master of the Quimistan, has spent 25 of his 42 years at sea. Telling of the disaster, he related that he had come to America, sent here on the mission of navigating the Quimistan to the junk heap at Genoa. The Northern Shipping Co. of Hamburg had bought the ship, he related, and he was sent to take her back.

After sailing from Norfolk on Wednesday, Aug. 14, at 7 p. m. Capt. Pietsch said: "We sailed through seas like that looking glass." That loking glass was in the suite of the President Harrison.

On Sunday evening, for no reason the Captain could think of, a plate in the port quarter gave way. Every effort was made to put a collision patch over the hole, but the torrent poured in, submerging the engine room. The hole could not be reached from within the ship, he said, because a fresh water tank prevented the crew from getting at it.

With the Quimistan slowly settling under them, Captain Pietsch gave the order to abandon ship at 3:45 Monday morning. All his crew were trained hands and the Quimistan was left without incident.

For three days, with a fine breeze astern they bent sail and bowled along, heading for Sable Island, due north of the position in which the Quimistan was abandoned. Captain Pietsch had 12 men in his lifeboat, with the other 13 in the other lifeboat, commanded by Second Mate Nils Jorgensen.

On the third night a fresh wind and a rain squall drenched the Quimistan castaways. But a warm sun in the morning dried them.

In the afternoon third officer A. H. Norman, on the President Harrison, watching particularly for any trace of the missing Swiss flyers, sighted the tiny speck of Jorgensen's lifeboat. Her sail was a pin head that flashed in view for a second at a time from a steeply rolling sea.

Capt. J. H. Benson ordered the President Harrison put about, and headed for the sighted boat. He reached it, and, with his huge liner making a lee, took the Quimistan crew aboard. The rescue of the men in Capt. Pietsch's life boat followed. Food was ordered and first class food placed at their disposal.

The crew had their suits pressed and then were entertained by the passengers and crew of the Dollar Liner. On the last night out the ship's dining salon was gaily decorated and a large dinner was held.

In a little speech, Capt. Pietsch thanked Capt. Benson and his crew, and presented the compass of the foundered freighter.

OLD INSCRIPTION FOUND ON BOULDER IN MISSOURI

Characters MDCXLIV and 1732 May Have Been Made by Early French Explorers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ANABEL, Mo., Aug. 24.—Amateur scientists and historians are speculating over the meaning of some figures on a boulder on Joe Long's farm south of here. Long had known the boulder was there all the time, but the protracted heavy rains in the spring washed off the face of it, and some of the figures and letters were easily made out by W. L. Magruder, vocational agricultural instructor, who came over to examine the stone. Magruder made out the Roman numerals, MDCXLIV — 1644. Below that, in Arabic, are the figures, 1732.

Magruder pointed out that if those were dates they covered the period of active French exploration in this country. If they are to date the birth of some man the Roman numerals are fairly contemporaneous with the birth of LaSalle, 1643, Hennepin, 1640, and Marquette, 1637. The activities of these explorers in America were in the latter part of the seventeenth century. Many of the men of their parties remained in this country and established fur trading posts close to the streams.

The boulder is 62 miles from the Mississippi river. It was not customary for the pioneer Missourians to use Roman numerals on their gravestones. Few of them knew the Roman characters. Magruder said there were other characters on the stone which he could not make out, but the Roman and Arabic figures were deeply cut and fairly clear.

DESERT CHARLEY IN JAIL AFTER $100 SHOT

St. Louis Carpenter, Who Turned Cowboy, Charged With Intent to Kill.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 24.—Charles W. Hubricht, until 19 months ago a hard working carpenter of St. Louis, the father of five children, now known as "Desert Charley," was delayed yesterday in his "fight for his rights" Judge John J. Glynn, judge protem of the City Police Court here.

Hearing of the charge of assault with intent to kill against Hubricht will have to wait until "some time next week," the Court ruled.

"Desert Charley," whether for publicity or righteousness or devilishness, Thursday night shot the lens out of a camera owned by H. G. Demerritt, photographer in Tonganoxie, Kan. The lens was valued at $100. Hubricht didn't have the $100.

Two attorneys were appointed by the Court to defend Hubricht, who said he was "penniless and 65 years old."

Petitions circulated by Wilson Myers, hotel proprietor, and Ben McKeehen, large land owner, of Tonganoxie, urged that Hubricht be released. At noon there were more than 100 signatures on the petitions.

When asked about the petitions the photographer, Demerritt didn't seem anxious to discuss them.

"I don't believe I'll pay the least bit of attention to them," he said. "The lens cost me $100. I want $100 or justice."

"I haven't got $100 for him," said Charley, from his cell in jail here. "He saw that sign on the burros, and I warned him not to take a picture until he paid me. It's the law of the desert that a man protect his rights—self-preservation—that's it. Well, he didn't pay me no 50 cents and I'm not going to pay him $100."

HISTORIC VERA CRUZ FORTRESS DESTROYED

Terrific Heat Causes Explosion at San Juan de Ulua; Fire Follows.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 24.—A tremendous explosion and subsequent fire has almost destroyed the historic fortress of San Juan de Ulua, in Vera Cruz harbor, according to dispatches received here.

The explosion shook the city Friday afternoon and the fire completed the destruction during the night. The town was thrown into a state of alarm when the powder stores in the ancient stronghold, which is a mile from the mainland, exploded with the roar and rumble of an earthquake.

No casualties were reported, as workmen had left their tasks an hour before the blast occurred. The explosion is thought to have resulted from the terrific heat of the last few weeks. All powder stores on the island were destroyed. Firemen rushed by boats to extinguish the blaze, while crowds gathered at the water front to watch the spectacle.

The loss has not been determined but the fortress is said to be completely ruined. San Juan was the last stronghold of the Spanish following the Mexican revolution of 1821 when Spain's control of Mexico was overthrown. The Spaniards retired to the island defenses and held them for four years after Mexican independence was realized.

On the island was one of the cruelest prison dungeons on the North American continent for more than a century but it is no longer used. Subterranean prison cells which really are beneath the sea have been an interesting sight for tourists in recent years. It was behind the thick stone walls of the fortress that former President Calles conducted secret negotiations with Archbishop Ruiz y Flores in 1928, looking toward a settlement of the Catholic church troubles in Mexico.

STREET CORNER TUNNEL TO RELIEVE MEXICO CITY TRAFFIC

Pedestrian Passageway Will Be Followed by Others if Experiment Proves Successful.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 24.—Work is to be started immediately on the first subterranean passage under the city's downtown street intersections in a plan to relieve traffic congestion. The tunnel, which will be for pedestrian use, will be built at the intersection of Sixteenth of September and Fifth of February streets, with the Zoculo or Main Plaza.

Construction of the main tunnel will involve solution of a problem created by the presence of water at a calculated depth of six to nine feet under the street. Mexico City being built over an old lake which under the surface has not entirely dried up. Waterproof tubes will be used to overcome this difficulty. In case the experiment proves successful tunnels will be constructed at all the busy downtown street intersections.

BELLEVILLE TRUCK DRIVER DROWNED IN ST. CLAIR LAKE

John Tiedeman, 28 years old, a truck driver, 16 North Twenty-Eighth street, Belleville, was drowned in St. Clair Lake near Belleville yesterday afternoon when he waded beyond his depth while learning to swim. His brother, William Tiedeman, recovered the body a few minutes after he sank but efforts to revive him with a pulmotor were unavailing.

Fred Gremlich, superintendent of the St. Clair County Mine Rescue Station, hurrying to the lake with the pulmotor in an automobile, collided with an automobile driven by Robert Boatman of Belleville. Boatman, his wife and small daughter were cut and bruised.

Joplin Ore Prices Unchanged.

JOPLIN, Aug. 24.—Ore prices were unchanged in the Tri-State District this week, zinc prices ranging between $41 and $46 a ton, with prime western grades bringing $44 a ton for the twenty-second consecutive week. Huckster Shot in Quarrel.

Joseph Dumm, 54 years old, a huckster, 1611 North Twenty-fifth street, was taken to City Hospital at 5:45 p. m. yesterday suffering from three minor birdshot wounds. He told police that Jesse Browning, a wall paperer, had shot him after a quarrel in a vacant lot at Jefferson avenue and Madison street. Police arrested Browning, whom they said admitted shooting Dumm with a shotgun after he had been threatened with a pistol.

How Queen of Netherlands Solves Precedence Problem

She Uses Ten Tables at Dinner and Saves Chancellor Snowden From Seat in Least Conspicuous.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 24.—Queen Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Maria of the Netherlands, on occasions alters the laws of etiquette to suit a situation. There is no social problem so difficult, her fond subjects aver, but what her queenly tact solves its intricacies and averts ruffled feelings among her guests.

Delegates to the reparation conference here wondered how she would seat them at a dinner to which all were invited last night. There were three Premiers and lesser Cabinet officers among them, all, for instance, commanding precedence over Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Snowden, if his place were given him, according to the diplomatic protocol, to which the Netherlands adheres more rigidly than most any other nation, would have been seated at the table in the least conspicuous place. Queen Wilhelmina solved the problem by dividing the guests among 10 tables, so that the most meticulous critic could not have determined the precedence accorded each guest.

Women attending Dutch court functions have always worn trains, but most of the wives of the reparations conference delegates had no such gowns with them. Queen Wilhelmina let it be known that trains could be dispensed with if the dresses came to the ankles. The line was drawn strictly against knee-length skirts.

The international wine list aroused some comment. There were German wines from the Rhine, French wines in profusion, and plenty of fine Italian vintages to go with the 13 courses.

BRICK HOUSES REPLACE DUGOUTS IN BULGARIA

Balkan State Being Modernized but Still Retains Its Morality.

By the Associated Press.

PLEVEN, Bulgaria, Aug. 24.—After many years of trial, under heavy war burdens, Bulgaria is regaining its feet. This became apparent to the many Americans who visited the little Slav kingdom during the recent observances of the thousandth anniversary of the reign of Czar Simeon the Great. The country's progress is particularly marked in the small cities and towns.

A visit to any village near Pleven brings this progress into clear relief. For example, in a yard in Trustenik there was found a zemlianka or dugout, which is the kind of a house in which almost all Bulgarian villagers lived a few decades ago. It consists of a little porchlike entrance, then a small kitchen with an open fire place and after that a stall for a pair of big black cows, beyond which there is a slightly elevated section, on the dirt floor of which the family sleeps, with mats made of corn husks under them and heavy goat hair hand woven rugs over them.

In the whole house there is but one little window, no stove, practically no furniture and no interior room divisions. The animals are placed in the middle of the hut.

Solid Brick Houses Now.

Such places are relics in modern Bulgaria. They have given way to solid brick houses, with large windows, good stoves and furniture. Other equally good brick buildings are being built by the thousands for the farm animals.

The fields are excellently cultivated with modern American and German machinery, supplemented by huge hoes deftly wielded by girls. The quality of the farm animals has been improved and the villages have adopted the best kinds of wheat, alfalfa, corn and fruits.

The Pleven district is noted for its grapes and famous for its large sweet melons. In the spring every family raises silk worms, feeding them on mulberry leaves from trees which the state furnishes. As a result of state supervision and dairy contests the villages have increased the milk capacity of their cows threefold.

In every village there is a school, most of which are housed in excellent modern buildings. In this area less than 10 per cent of the younger Bulgarians, including the young women and girls, are illiterate. Bulgaria has the lowest percentage of illiteracy of any country in the Balkans.

Water and Light Service.

Since 1926 40 villages have put in water systems; many have electric light. In more than half of the villages there are public libraries, and in not a few popular lecture courses. Most of the roads uniting the villages as well as the main roads from city to city are macadamized.

There are many popular banks, branches of a general mortgage bank and agricultural banks, all fostered by the state. Co-operative societies abound.

The very heavy, old, hand woven peasant costumes have given place to clothes which suit the seasons and straw hats are replacing heavy, sheepskin caps.

Through all this change the Bulgarians have retained their old fashioned morality. The village girls rarely bob their hair, do not wear short skirts, do not use cosmetics and do not smoke.

GOOD WILL INSPECT ILLINOIS WATERWAY

Secretary of War Also to Survey Upper Mississippi—To Use Boat and Auto.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Secretary of War Good will leave Washington Monday to inspect one of the Middle West's principal inland waterways—the Illinois River.

As inland waterway development is a subject in which President Hoover is greatly interested, the War Department head's visit to the Illinois River probably will be followed by inspection of other important water traffic arteries.

On the trip, he also may make a brief survey of the upper Mississippi River system while traveling from Illinois to Minnesota. In the latter State, he is to inspect Fort Snelling, and at Minneapolis will deliver an address on Aug. 31 at the dedication of the Fooshay Tower.

His inspection of the Illinois River will start Tuesday from Chicago and will be made both by boat and automobile. He will travel part of the way on the Government boat Comanche. He will be accompanied by Illinois members of Congress, Gov. Emmerson and Col. W. C. Weeks, district engineer. A delegation representing the Illinois Manufacturers' Association also will make the trip.

On both the Illinois River and the Upper Mississippi, if he visits the latter, the Secretary will observe the army engineers working at full speed on the building of channels to permit deep draught water traffic. Reports from the Illinois River to the chief of army engineers say that approximately 5,000,000 cubic yards of dirt and rock is to be dredged out of the stream this month. On the Mississippi River in Minnesota the principal work is the construction of the Hastings lock and dam, which at the beginning of this month was reported as 30 per cent complete.

SLACK EXPORTS, LOWER RATES AND WHEAT PRICES DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Dashing of hopes that a sustained outlet for the big stock of United States wheat was at hand gave wheat values a decided setback today. Instead of witnessing a fresh outburst of foreign buying of domestic wheat today, wheat traders here hoped for advices that ocean freight rates for Southern Hemisphere wheat had been cut. Simultaneously export demand for wheat from North America came to a complete halt, with little movement of consequence now from the farms increasing both north and south of the Canadian line.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were 1¼c to 2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅝c to 1⅝c up, oats ⅝c to ⅞c off and provisions unchanged to 17c down.

Disappointment over failure of any evidence to appear that yesterday's flurry of purchasing of United States wheat for shipment to Europe would be repeated was intensified by advices today of favorable weather prevailing for the harvest of the spring crop northwest, and that primary receipts of domestic wheat this week are more than 2,000,000 bushels larger than at the corresponding time last year. Temporarily, the wheat market here displayed notable power to absorb offerings on declines in prices and a brisk rally ensued, but this showing of strength appeared to be largely a reflection of an advance in corn values to higher level than has heretofore been reached since Aug. 2. Heavy profit-taking on the part of holders of corn, though, did much to pull this prop out from under the wheat market as the day drew to an end.

Reports from Washington intimating that no immediate new action by the Federal Farm Board would be taken relative to pressure of domestic wheat at terminal markets did a good deal to hasten wheat prices downward, especially in the late dealings. There were also estimates current that world's wheat stocks in second hands had increased 18,980,000 during July compared with 16,987,000 bushels decrease for that month last year.

Corn made a sutrited advance today to $1 a bushel for Chicago December delivery, with crop damage complaints from seven territories between Oklahoma and South Dakota inclusive.

The week-end weather forecast pointed to a general shower period ahead.

Oats were influenced largely by the action of wheat.

In provisions a good part of the trade consisted of letting go of September deliveries and taking deferred futures in exchange.

IRREGULAR TREND TO COTTON AT NEW YORK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Conflicting opinions as to the Southwestern weather outlook were reflected by further evening-up of commitments and irregular fluctuations in the cotton market today, after early off to 18.65c early. December rallied to 18.80c and closed at 18.78c, compared with 18.75c at the close of Friday. The final tone of the market was barely steady at net advances of 3 to 10 points. Spot cotton, middlings 18.70c.

The market opened steady at a decline of 4 point to an advance of 4 points, and eased off during the early trading on the hope of showers or rain developments in the Southwest over Sunday. Some of the local traders felt that the rains on the gulf coast might foreshadow some relief from drouth in the western or northwestern sections of the State, and this idea evidently led to further liquidation, which may have been combined with some local selling.

Early offerings seemed to be quite readily absorbed on the decline to 18.34c for October and 18.83c for March, or about 6 to 10 points below yesterday's closing quotations, and the market firmed up later in the morning on rebuying or covering. This was promoted by the official forecast for generally fair weather in West Texas and the week-end forecast, which held out no promise of relief from dry conditions in West Texas, except for the probability of showers in west and north portions toward the close of the week.

Trading was a little more active on the spurt which carried October up to 18.55c and March to 19.14c or about 20 points above the low level of the morning, but this advancement renewed realizing with last prices showing reactions of several points from the best.

The attention of the trade seemed to be pretty much monopolized by the Southwestern weather uncertainty, owing to nervousness over the further progress of the crop in the drouthy sections, while a tendency to even up commitments was probably increased by doubt as to the showing of the private crop reports which are expected toward the end of next week.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week on Friday was estimated at 41,000 bales against 33,000 last year. Liverpool cables reported fair trade calling with an improved spot demand and some covering on the Texas drouth situation and said the demand for cotton cloths from India was well sustained.

New York Cottonseed Oil.

NEW YORK Aug. 24.—The market for cottonseed oil was inactive today and in absence of the demand which helped prices on Friday the undertone was somewhat easier under a little week-end liquidation despite the steadiness in lard and cotton. ...ON MOTOR CAR TO ISSUE ONE NEW SHARE FOR 4 OLD

...Authorized Common to 100,000 Shares From 400,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The ...on Motor Car Co. has informed the New York Stock Exchange that it proposes to reduce its authorized common stock to 100,000 ...par shares from 400,000, and to exchange four shares of its present outstanding stock for one share of the new stock.

Lehigh Valley Report.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Lehigh Valley Railroad today reported net income of $1,987,729 for the quarter ending June 30, compared with $2,250,975 for the corresponding quarter of last year. For the first six months the net earnings totaled $2,863,587, against $4,347,139 for the first six months of 1928.

BULL MARKET IN SELECTED STOCK GROUP CONTINUES

Several of the Recent Favorites Appear to Tire and Sell off Moderately—A. T. & T. Reaches 300 Mark.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The concentrated bull campaign in selected stocks was pushed forward with unremitting vigor in today's two-hour session of the stock market but several of the recent favorites appeared to tire, and sold off moderately.

Week-end profit-taking was for the most part readily absorbed, however, and the general list closed fairly firm. Trading was in good volume, the day's turnover exceeding 2,100,000 shares. Operations for the advance again centered in the communications, steel and chemical shares.

Week-end trade and business reviews were of a character to strengthen confidence, but several commission houses took a precautionary attitude, after the recent startling advances, and advocated profit-taking in anticipation of a corrective reaction. There was practically nothing in the news of the half day in Wall Street to affect the market.

No Worry Over Credit.

Bankers were inclined to expect a flurry in the call money market, with the approach of the end of the month, when the strain upon credit will be intensified by the currency requirements for the Labor Day holiday. After the ease in money this week, however, traders were not disposed to worry about the credit situation.

In the communications group, American Telephone rose 5½ points to touch the 300-mark for the first time, and International Telephone continued its upward climb, rising more than 6 points to another new high for the present stock at 145. While rumors of a splitup of American Telephone have been emphatically denied, Wall Street looks for the granting of valuable rights before the first of the year.

New Peak for Steel.

In the steels, U. S. Steel reached a new peak at 260½ in a narrow gain, but slipped back and closed with a net loss of 1½ points, while some of the so-called independents leaped forward. Republic mounted more than 8 points to a new peak on optimistic estimates of the earnings prospects of its new welded pipe process. Inland and Youngstown also reached record levels with wide gains.

Allied Chemical, floating supply of which has been reduced by further acquisitions by the Solvay interests, sold up 10 points, then slipped back 3. U. S. Industrial Alcohol got into the 200 class for the first time, with an extreme gains of more than 8 points. United Carbon mounted 6 points.

U. S. Freight was a strong point, rising about 8 points to a new peak. In the utilities, Consolidated Gas and Stone and Webster were well bought, and Southern California Edison and Pacific Gas and Electric again surged forward to new record levels. American Can reached a new high, and Shattuck duplicated its best level, with a 4-point jump. Underwood Elliott and Ingersoll Rand made wide gains. Coppers were well supported.

Westinghouse Down.

Westinghouse Electric, a high flyer in the last few sessions, was slightly depressed by profit-taking, and Dupont, Columbian Carbon, Radio and Continental Can lost 2 points or more in realizing. Some of the rails were under pressure, Chesapeake & Ohio losing 3 and Pere Marquette 6 points. People's Gas tumbled about 12 points, but then reduced its loss to 4.

Foreign exchanges were quiet, sterling holding at $4.84 13-16.

Select Leaders Buoyant During Week.

Spectacular buoyancy in a select group of leading issues developed on the stock market this week, despite an increase of $133,000,000 in brokers loans, which carried the total once more above $6,000,000,000 to a new high record for all time.

The Standard Statistics Co. Associated Press price indices of 50 industrials and 20 utilities rose several points to new peak prices.

The upturn was facilitated by an abundant supply of call money, the rate ranging between 6 and 7 per cent, 6 being the minimum rate for more than a year. The Federal Reserve statements indicated that the funds were provided entirely by corporations, individuals and non-member bank sources. Loans for others increased $194,000,000, while member banks decreased their loans more than $60,000,000.

WEEKLY METAL MARKET REVIEW

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Foreign sales of copper continue in good volume and domestic demand has also shown some improvement, although it is reported that some consumers are reluctant to purchase beyond immediate requirements. Reports that fabricators are well booked ahead and experiencing some difficulty in filling orders are encouraging a confident attitude on the part of producers, however, and electrolytic holds firm at 18 cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley.

Tin was not featured by any particular buying movement, but at the same time producers were reported as unwilling to canvas the market, with the result that the tone was steady.

Most of the consuming demand for lead centered in nearby positions. The tone was very steady.

The position of the zinc market did not change to any extent, demand remaining very quiet with prices unchanged.

Antimony was somewhat steadier in view of the absence of selling pressure and the rather firm undertone in the Far East markets.

AUGUST BULL MARKET ONLY AN ILLUSION

Actually Not What It Has Seemed, Condition Being Created by Performance of the Quality Stocks Carried in Accepted Market Averages, Review Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"The market's continued advance in the face of a $133,000,000 increase in brokers' loans this week puzzled those who did not understand the composition of this sizeable expansion in borrowings. It did not, as many supposed, reflect a sudden shift toward heavy public buying on margin. Therefore, it did not present the danger signal at first feared by many when figures were published late Thursday afternoon. Indeed, the increase in brokers' loans was explained wholly by an increase in loans on securities 'for account of others.' The week's loans both by New York member banks for their 'own account,' and for the 'account of town banks,' actually fell. Funds offered to the market by individuals and private institutions would have driven loans up $194,000,000 except for a $61,000,000 reduction in the sums provided by member banks. The increased demand for funds arose largely from the expiration of subscription rights calling for huge payments with the seven-day period from Aug. 14 to Aug. 20 covered by the brokers' loan compilation.

Some "Rights" That Expired.

"Among these were a $42,000,000 payment to the United Corporation, $21,000,000 to Oneida Community, Ltd., $20,000,000 to Columbia Gas & Electric, $17,000,000 to Transcontinental Oil and $34,000,000 to Electric Bond & Share. The expiration of "rights" called for an abnormally large payment by stockholders desiring to subscribe for stock in the companies named. Presumably the more sophisticated element in the financial district realized this situation and determined to pick up whatever shares might come out as a result of apprehension over what appeared to be a dangerous resumption in public gambling. Actually the August bull market has not been what it seems. About as many stocks have gone down as up so far this month. The illusion of a sweeping advance has been created by the performance of the quality stocks carried in all of the accepted market averages. It would not be difficult to make up a list nearly as long of stocks that have been drifting downward.

Investment Trust Buying.

"The rise in the quality stocks basically reflects the improved earning power indicated for these leaders in 1929 but it reflects more. The rate of market appreciation has been accelerated by the multiplication of huge investment trusts which must to present a dignified portfolio draw unto themselves such stocks as American Telephone & Telegraph, General Electric, United States Steel, Consolidated Gas and New York Central. While the money situation remains essentially unchanged the financial district in its enthusiasm perhaps has overstressed the significance of a moderate increase in the reserve's bill portfolio. It is true that bills have been bought in the last fortnight but an analysis of the maturity distribution of bills held at the time this week's report was made up shows that most of the bills bought in the open market mature within 15 days. That would seem to indicate that a major portion of the purchases represented transactions in connection with sales contract agreements and not purchases designed to reverse the reserve's program and make money easy.

Watch Business Trend.

"While bills are coming in earlier than usual this year and the time is now at hand when normally the reserve expands its holdings there has been no indication whatsoever of a decision to ease rates through the purchase of Government securities. Presumably the Reserve will hesitate to reverse its position in that respect so long as industry maintains its present pace. For the seventh consecutive month this year the country's volume of industrial production has established a new record high for any corresponding month in history. The reports from individual key industries inspire rather than shake confidence in prospects for a good autumn. And incidentally with a 10 per cent increase in output for 1929 to date industry has been able to show something like a 40 per cent increase in net earnings. That is why for the moment the financial districts are watching the trend in business even more carefully than that in money. It has the assurance that the New York bankers will use their best efforts to keep money rates generally stabilized."

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows: Total surplus and undivided profits $1,107,191,000, unchanged. VENIRE OF 500 CALLED FOR STRIKERS' TRIAL

Sixteen Accused of Killing Gastonia, N. C., Police Chief to Face Court Tomorrow.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 24.—Difficulty is expected in the selection of a jury to try the 16 Gastonia strikers for the murder of Police Chief O. F. Aderholdt, slain in a police raid on the Loray strike headquarters at Gastonia, June 7.

The Sheriff's office said today a venire of 500 would be called for the trial of the strikers and strike organizers, which begins in Mecklenburg Superior Sourt Monday.

The strikers, 13 of whom will be tried for murder, are now in jail at Gastonia. They will not be brought here until a few hours before the opening of the trial. They were arraigned at Gastonia last month, but immediately thereafter the defense obtained a change of venue to this county.

The defendants claim they are being "railroaded" on "framed-up charges" because they started the unrest in the new industrial south by organizing the Gastonia strike.

Fred Erwin Beal, left wing labor organizer, and credited with being the leader of the Gastonia strike, and the 12 other capitally accused man defendents in the case have never been admitted to bond.

However, the three girl strike organizers, against whom the State will press only second degree murder charges, were released on bail a month ago. Since then they have been raising funds for the defense.

FARMER DIES, SECOND VICTIM IN MARION, ILL., FENCE ROW

Double Funeral to Be Held for Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Howard; Neighbor Admits Shooting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Aug. 24. — Oscar Howard, 42 years old, died this afternoon of injuries, the second victim of a dispute over the location of a fence in which Roscoe Kimmel shot and killed Gussie Howard, 36, wife of Oscar and wounded their son, Lloyd, 14.

A double funeral for the Howards will be held Monday afternoon. Kimmell who surrendered to the sheriff, after the shooting, admitted that he fired from ambush at the three Howards, but said that he shot in defense of his wife and son, who were engaged in an argument with the Howards, when the shots were fired.

Soldier's Will Filed After 8 Years.

A will of a soldier prepared on the printed form of a military hospital was filed in Probate Court yesterday. It was that of August J. Ruhr, who died eight years ago at his home, 3104 North Market street, and was executed at Fort Snelling, Minn., a month before his death. He bequeathed his belongings to his mother and a brother, Conrad Ruhr. The filing of the will at so late a date was made necessary, it was explained, to enable the heirs to qualify for Ruhr's Government insurance.

Beardstown Woman Drowns Self.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Aug. 24.—Mrs. F. E. Wright, 61 years old, missing from her home here since Wednesday, was found drowned in the Illinois River yesterday. A Coroner's jury found that she had ended her own life.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24.—Several thousand leading Theosophists from more than 40 countries gathered here today for their world congress and the annual convention of the American Theosophical Society.

A resolution to make universal brotherhood the sole aim of the group was prepared for presentation by Peter Freeman, member of the British Parliament from Wales.

Dr. Annie Besant, 82-year-old leader, will preside over the sessions. She warned that grave danger existed of a revolution in India unless its starving millions were given relief.

Even today, with all the prog of Europe's "stabilization," question keeps recurring in mind in all its significance.

We took lodgings in a working-class quarter and bought furniture on the installment plan. Our flat, $18 a month, contained luxuries never dreamed of by a European workman—electric light, a gas stove, a bathroom, telephone, a dumbwaiter for bringing things up, and a garbage chute for sending them down. These things "sold" New York to my children. The telephone soon became the center of their life.

Janitor Robbed Landlord.

Our janitor was a Negro. My wife paid him a quarter's rent in advance, but got no receipt because the landlord had taken the receipt-book away the previous day to verify the accounts. Two days later, when we moved in, we learned that the janitor had absconded with the rent paid by several tenants.

Besides the rent, we had entrusted him with various chattels, and our alarm can be imagined. It was a bad beginning.

But everything was intact. When we opened the wooden box containing our crockery, we found the rent money carefully wrapped up in a piece of paper. The janitor had stolen the rent only of those tenants who had received receipts in due form—he did not mind robbing the landlord, but was careful not to rob the tenants.

America was then in the throes of active preparation for war. As always, the pacificts were the best helpers in that direction. Their empty prattle about the advantages of peace always ended with the assurance that they would support the war "should it become necessary." Bryan was the leader of this school of "pacifist" agitation. The Socialists played second fiddle to the pacifists. It is a well-known fact that pacifists consider war an evil in peace-time only.

American vs. Europe.

After the rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany, the jingo chorus grew louder day by day. Pacific tenors and socialist falsettos did not interfere with its harmony. I had seen the same thing happen in Europe—the American mobilization of patriotism was nothing new to me. I recorded the various stages of this mobilization in my paper, and reflected on that greatest stupidity of human kind—the refusal to learn by the experience of others. There are more legends about my life in the United States, I believe, than about my life anywhere else. My only occupation in New York early in 1917, was that of revolutionary Socialist. And since it was in the days before the war for "democracy" and "liberty," that occupation was not regarded by the United States authorities as any worse than bootlegging.

I wrote articles, edited a paper, and spoke at workingmen's meetings. I kept busy all the time and lived completely at home. Much of my time I spent in one of the New York libraries, studying the economic organization of the country. The statistics showing the growth of American exports during the war struck me. They were simply a revelation. They indicated clearly not only the future international position of the United States in the world, but also its decisive position in the world after the war should be over.

I wrote several articles on the

HERE I was in New York, the city of prose and of the legend of capitalistic automatism, its architecture a triumph of cubism, its moral philosophy the worship of the Almighty Dollar. I found New York supremely impressive, for more than anything else in the world it expresses the spirit of our epoch.

We took lodgings in a working-man's quarter and bought furniture on the installment plan. Our flat, at $18 a month, contained luxuries never dreamed of by a European workman—electric light, a gas stove, a bathroom, telephone, a dumbwaiter for bringing things up, and a garbage chute for sending them down. These things "sold" New York to my children. The telephone soon became the center of their life.

Janitor Robbed Landlord.

Our janitor was a Negro. My wife paid him a quarter's rent in advance, but got no receipt because the landlord had taken the receipt-book away the previous day to verify the accounts. Two days later, when we moved in, we learned that the janitor had absconded with the rent paid by several tenants.

Besides the rent, we had entrusted him with various chattels, and our alarm can be imagined. It was a bad beginning.

But everything was intact. When we opened the wooden box containing our crockery, we found the rent money carefully wrapped up in a piece of paper. The janitor had stolen the rent only of those tenants who had received receipts in due form—he did not mind, robbing the landlord, but was careful not to rob the tenants. America was then in the throes of active preparation for war. As always, the pacifists were the best speakers in that direction. Their pious prattle about the advantages of peace always ended with the assurance that they would support the war "should it become necessary." Bryan was the leader of this school of "pacifist" agitation. The Socialists played second fiddle to the pacifists. It was a well-known fact that pacifists considered war an evil in peace-time only.

American vs. Europe.

After the rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany, the jingo clamor grew louder day by day. Pacifistic tenors and socialist falsettos did not interfere with its harmony. I had seen the same thing happen in Europe—the American mobilization of patriotism was nothing new to me. I recorded the various stages of this mobilization in my paper, and reacted on that greatest stupidity of human kind—the refusal to learn by the experience of others. There are more legends about my life in the United States, I believe, than about my life anywhere else. My only occupation in New York early in 1917, was that of revolutionary Socialist. And since it was in the days before the war for "democracy" and "liberty," that occupation was not regarded by the United States authorities as any worse than bootlegging.

I wrote articles, edited a paper, and spoke at workingmen's meetings. I kept busy all the time and lived completely at home. Much of my time I spent in one of the New York libraries, studying the economic organization of the country. The statistics showing the growth of American exports during the war struck me. They were for me a revelation. They indicated clearly not only the future intervention of the United States in the war, but also its decisive position in the world after the war should be over.

I wrote several articles on the subject at the time, and delivered a number of lectures about it. Since then the problem of "America vs. Europe" has held the center of my thoughts. It still forms the main focus of my interests; for the understanding of mankind's future fate there is no subject of greater importance.

No Democratic Illusions.

On the morrow of my landing in New York I wrote in the Russian paper "Novy Mir" (New World):

"I left blood-drenched Europe with profound faith in the coming revolution. And I stepped ashore in this fully 'New World' with no 'democratic illusions.'

Ten days later, at an international "welcome" meeting, I said:

"The paramount economic fact is that Europe is plunging to ruin on the very basis of her economic system whereas America is growing rich. And with envious eyes upon New York, I, who must still feel as a European, cannot help wondering with anxiety: Can Europe weather the storm? Will she not become one vast cemetery? Will not the world's economic and cultural center of gravity shift over here to America?"

Bukharin's Friendship.

One of the first friends we found in New York was Bukharin, who had just been expelled from Scandinavia. Bukharin had been a friend of ours since Vienna days, and he welcomes us with his characteristic childish exuberance.

Although the hour was late and we were still fatigued from the journey, Bukharin insisted on taking me and my wife to see a New York library. That was the beginning of a close association that warmed into an attachment on Bukharin's part toward me and grew steadily more intense until 1923—when suddenly it reversed into the opposite sentiment.

Bukharin is a vine that must always cling somewhere, must be always upheld and maintained by someone sturdier than himself. He becomes, in such circumstances, simply a medium through whom the other person speaks and acts. But the medium must never be allowed to get out of control, never out of sight for a moment or he will fall under another influence, though that other's idea may be the exact contrary of your own; and tomorrow, as the instrument of your enemy, he will be as ardent to destroy you as he was to defend you on the previous day.

I never took Bukharin too seriously. I left him to himself—which means to others. After Lenin's death, Bukharin became Zinoviev's medium, and later Stalin's. At the present writing I hear from friends that he is passing through a new crisis, and that new fluids, unknown to me, are penetrating him.

Madame Kolontai's Views.

Madame Kolontai also was then in the United States. She traveled much, and I did not meet her often. During the war she underwent a very extreme evolution toward the left wing of the Bolsheviks. Her knowledge of foreign languages and the quality called "temperament" made her an effective agitator. But her theoretical views have always been somewhat hazy.

During her New York period nothing was revolutionary enough for her. She was in correspon-

THE INSIDE OF PROHIBITION

By Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt

Final Chapter—CAN PROHIBITION BE MADE EFFECTIVE?

"NO DRY LAW CAN BE ENFORCED WITHOUT LOCAL CO-OPERATION".

Mrs. Willebrandt, in Her Final Chapter, Says This Is the One Practical and Definite Step to Be Taken to Insure Success for Prohibition—Five Other Recommendations Made Out of the Sum of Her Experiences as Assistant Attorney-General.

(In this, her concluding article, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney-General in charge of Prohibition, enumerates the changes she believes necessary to make Prohibition successful.)

"YOU admit that liquor is being sold in large quantities throughout the country," a Western lawyer said to me recently, "and you do not claim that it is much harder for a man who wants a drink to get it now than it was eight years ago, though millions and millions of dollars have been spent for enforcement. And if you still contend that the law can be enforced, how in h— do you propose to enforce it?"

I think that is a perfectly fair question, and I think the profanity is justified in view of the apparent inconsistency between the facts that I have related and my belief as to the possibilities of enforcement.

Prohibition is not being effectively enforced. I have stated some of the reasons. Because the prohibition law is being violated, often with and by the connivance and collusion of public officials, we are told by anti-prohibition organizations and by many newspapers that a new and alarming threat to our whole system of government has been created by the eighteenth amendment. I will not argue this other than simply to call attention to the undisputed fact that in the days of the open saloons and local or state option, there were countless violations of the laws regulating the liquor traffic.

The difference is that regulation was attempted with utter failure over a period of more than a century, while enforcement of the National Prohibition act has had less than 10 years' trial.

Another anti-prohibitionist said to me recently, "You are retiring from office after eight years' futile attempt to enforce an unenforceable law. Why not be honest and admit enforcement is impossible?"

Believes Law Enforceable.

My answer to that was and is that all my experience tends to strengthen the belief that the prohibition law is enforceable. It is as enforceable as any other law was in its early stages—the law against burglary, against murder, against embezzlement. I know of no law that is not violated, and frequently violated. A law is a failure not when there are frequent violations, but when it fails to protect society as a whole against destructive forces.

The mere fact that prohibition closed 178,000 saloons, where liquor might be obtained night or day in almost unlimited quantities, is the outstanding proof of prohibition worth. Even if proof could be adduced that for these saloons were substituted 178,000 bootleggers, or even 278,000, there would in my estimation still be justification for prohibition.

No one will seriously contend that the bootleggers, however numerous they may be, are selling as much liquor as the saloons. No one will seriously contend that the majority of people approve or fail to condemn the business of bootlegging. How many of my readers, or their friends, will knowingly entain a bootlegger in their family circle?

The sale of intoxicating liquor has not only been outlawed by law, but in the hearts and minds of the majority of the people of America. That one fact makes it possible to say with assurance that prohibition can be enforced.

But how?

How to Make the Law Work.

I shall now state as definitely and as concisely as possible some of the measures necessary to make prohibition enforcement really effective.

In the first place, let me deny that there is anything very complicated or intricate about the problem of enforcement of the prohibition law. The task of enforcing that law is in its essentials as simple as that of enforcing any other law. There is just one way to bring about enforcement of a law. That way is to definitely establish personal responsibility for enforcement.

Let me illustrate. In each county of the United States, there is one person whose responsibility it is to finally enforce the law against murder. If that person fails to prosecute murderers, or connives or conspires with murderers, his term of office will be short; the community will not tolerate a condition that is dangerous to it.

The failure of prohibition enforcement, its lack of effectiveness so far, is due very largely to failure to definitely center personal responsibility.

The condition was well illustrated in a cartoon drawn by J. N. Ding, entitled "When the Commission to investigate law enforcement begins to investigate (Exhibit A)."

The cartoon showed a party of distinguished gentlemen, with high hats, carrying note books, and in charge of a guide, making an investigation of "The Buckpassers' League." The "Buckpassers' League" was represented as a long row of men leaning back in their chairs, with their feet on their desks and blithely engaged in tossing about high in the air, from one to another, a straw man labeled Law Enforcement. Those who sat at the desks and who were engaged in this sport were labeled "Courts," "Police," "County Attorney," "Grand Jury," "Detective," "Sheriff," "Expert Witness," "Alienist," "District Attorney," "Jury," "City Government," etc.

The Crime Commission's Job.

This is a true picture of present conditions. It is a condition that can and should be corrected. I do not doubt that out of the investigation of the President's Law Enforcement Commission will come recommendations that will be of value in doing away with red tape and centralizing and definitely establishing responsibility. But long before that commission is ready to make its detailed report, a great deal can be done to put prohibition on an effective basis.

Every law, whether applying to a single village or the whole nation, must be locally enforced if it is to be effectively enforced.

I am not seeking by this statement to relieve the Federal Government of any responsibility for enforcement of the prohibition law. Every speech I made in the last presidential campaign was intended to drive home to the people the realization that the President of the United States can almost "make or break" the Constitution, not only with respect to prohibition enforcement, but enforcement of the other laws enacted under Federal authority, the antitrust laws, the pure food laws, the laws for the protection of men employed by railroads in interstate commerce, etc.

If the President (and I am speaking in general terms now and not of any particular President) is of such a disposition or temperament that he avoids conflict, or endeavors to assure his own re-election by incurring the favor of politicians controlling state delegations, he can make prohibition enforcement difficult or ineffective. He can appoint unfit Federal Judges, District Attorneys, marshals, and other officers of the law. He can fail to remove from office men who have deliberatey violated their pledge to enforce all laws, including the prohibition law. He can appoint to or retain in office men who are only half-hearted or incompetent in the administration of the prohibition law.

Need of Local Co-operation.

The President appoints the heads of various principal departments of the Government, including the Secretary of the Treasury who has general supervision over the work of the prohibition unit or division. The Secretary of the Treasury supervises the collectors of internal revenue, customs agents and inspectors, and various forces of investigation whose duty it is to detect violation of the Federal laws.

Furthermore, the President appoints the Attorney-General who supervises the United States District Attorneys through the country in prosecutions under the prohibition law and other Federal statutes. An indefinite or hostile or incompetent Attorney-General can prevent effective enforcement of the prohibition or anti-trust law, or any other Federal law of importance. The responsibility goes back to the President, in the final analysis.

No official in Washington, however—not even the President—can enforce the prohibition law or any other law throughout the United States, without local co-operation. The President, acting through his Attorney-General, may appoint an honest, sober, competent District Attorney in one of the larger cities of the country, but if the people in that city are indifferent to their obligations to veto, to keep or make the municipal and state governments honest and efficient, the United States Attorney will be hampered and thwarted in his efforts to enforce the law.

If the head of the city government is a mayor who appoints a chief of police who protects bootleggers and divides the graft with politicians large and small; if the county or state prosecuting attorney is of the same type as the mayor, the United States District Attorney cannot possibly hope to effectively enforce the prohibition law.

It is impossible for a comparatively small force of Federal prohibition agents to do the work of local police in small bootlegging cases, and when all such cases are diverted to the limited number of Federal courts, with only one or two Judges in a large district, jury trials cannot be had for months or even years. This enables bootleggers to continue to operate even while under indictment.

I have pointed out in another chapter what I now repeat here as one definite, practical step to insure more effective enforcement of prohibition. That is to systematically divide and apportion responsibility between the Federal Government and State and local governments so that there will be no overloading of part of the machinery of law enforcement and, on the other hand, no lack of a high type of personnel for difficult cases beyond the reach or strength of local authority.

I have been accused of resigning my posi-

Leave Half-Pint Cases To the Local Police

"TO local communities must be left responsibility for the kind of police work that will detect the half-pint and quart liquor peddlers. When the majority of Federal prohibition agents are men whose honesty and integrity are amply vouched for and who have brains and judgment as well as special training for the collection of legal evidence by means that will not endanger lives or outrage the feelings of law-abiding citizens, prohibition enforcement will gain 100 per cent in effectiveness. It really takes only the "will to do it" by some one person in authority to accomplish that.

"And, finally, when the United States district attorneys and their assistants are appointed principally on the basis of legal fitness, integrity and willingness and determination to enforce all the laws, instead of on the basis of political influence, which seeks 'selective law enforcement,' another 100 per cent will be added to the effectiveness of prohibition enforcement!"

How the Federal Farm Board Is Going About Its Task; 'Permanency' Keynote of Activities

With Capable Men Appointed by Hoover, Slow, but Effective Progress Is Being Made in Agricultural Problem.

By Charles G. Ross,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.

NOTWITHSTANDING the great volume of debates on the farm problem, it is doubtful whether the average city man, or the average farmer, either, realizes the scope of the effort which the Government, through the newly created Federal Farm Board, is making on behalf of agriculture. In the six weeks of its life the board has made clear the main outlines of its program. It conceives itself to be, as the farm relief act of June 15 gave it the right and duty to be, not only the holder of the purse strings of a $500,000,000 fund, but a board of efficiency engineers, whose duty it is to guide the farmer out of economic darkness into the sunlight of permanent prosperity.

The key word in this policy is "permanent." For this is no board created for a month or a year, to meet a temporary emergency by granting a few loans, but a permanent arm of the Government, designed to function continuously in the direct interest of one-third of the people of the United States and the indirect interest of all the rest. President Hoover did not overstate the case when he said the board was comparable in importance to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Reserve Board. If it succeeds measurably in its purpose, its members will deserve a high place in public esteem.

The personnel of the board is reassuring. Alexander Legge of Chicago, former president of the International Harvester Co., is chairman. He brings to the board a distinguished experience in business and finance. All the others of the eight members are men who have long played important parts in the farm co-operative movement.

Others on the Board.

James C. Stone of Kentucky was president of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association. Carl Williams of Oklahoma is a farm journalist who has been active in organizing cotton and wheat co-operative societies. C. C. Teague helped to bring the California Fruit Co-operative organizations to their high state of efficiency. C. B. Denman of Missouri is a former president of the National Live Stock Producers' Association. W. F. Schilling of Minnesota was head of the Twin City Milk Producers' Association.

C. S. Wilson of New York State, a farmer and apple grower, is a former state commissioner of agriculture. Samuel R. McKelvie, as Governor of Nebraska and editor of the Nebraska Farmer, proved himself familiar with the special problems of the grain growers. Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde is a member of the board ex-officio. All the main lines of agriculture are represented. Widespread commendation in the press and among the farmers greeted the announcement of the board's membership by President Hoover.

Reassuring, too, has been the character of the board's early activity. In one of its first statements, it laid down the rule that "the structure to be erected by the board must be of permanent character" and that therefore it would be deliberate in its action. This policy is being consistently followed. The board, for example, refused to adopt temporary expedients for raising the price of wheat, but advised the farmers to await the formation of the $20,000,000 farmer's national grain corporation which is soon to be organized under the board's auspices. Meantime, it advised the farmers to adopt the sound business policy of holding back their wheat instead of crowding it into the market.

Three Loans Approved.

From the half billion dollar revolving fund voted by Congress, of which $150,000,000 has been made immediately available, the board has approved three loans.

One of these, for $300,000, is to be made to Florida citrus fruit growers to enable them to meet Government regulations for controlling the Mediterranean fruit fly. This loan was classed as an emergency measure to meet an emergency marketing situation. Other requests for loans came from the Florida growers, but the board told them that before pressing these applications, they should unite on a common program for the benefit of the industry. Again the board emphasized its purpose of granting loans, except in emergency cases, only for such objects as would aid "the development of a permanent policy of marketing agricultural products through co-operative associations."

In the second instance, the board, in conjunction with several California banks, agreed to advance a maximum of $9,000,000 to California organizations engaged in the handling of raisin grapes and other grapes.

A third loan, the most significant to date, is to be made to cotton co-operative associations of the South to assist in the movement of this year's crop. It is expected that the advances on this account will run between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000. The action by the board in this case represents aid of the most practical character.

'Orderly Marketing.'

The associations already are able to obtain aid from the Federal intermediate credit banks up to 65 per cent of the value of their cotton. The farm board now proposes to add 25 per cent, so that the co-operatives will be able to obtain from these two Government agencies a sum almost equal to the market price of the crop. By adding 10 per cent from their own capital reserves, the cotton associations will be able to pay their members in full when they turn over their cotton for sale. At the same time, the associations will be able to feed the cotton into the market in a way that will bring the best possible prices. That is what is meant by "orderly marketing," as contrasted with the haphazard methods that produce market gluts and consequent low prices.

What is the practical effect of all this on the cotton grower? Often he is a man who has signed notes at the bank to carry him to harvest time. He is anxious for a quick sale in order to pay his debts. When the co-operatives could advance him only 75 per cent or less of the market price, he was naturally under a strong economic inducement in spite of sentimental attachment to the "co-ops," to throw his crop on the market for himself. This pressure works now in the other direction.

With the "co-ops" able to pay him in full for his crop at harvest time, and to offer, moreover, the chance of an additional profit if the price on the stored cotton should go up, there is every reason why the grower should deal with the "co-ops" rather than outsiders.

Strengthening 'Co-ops.'

Farmers' marketing organizations in the past have controlled but 9 per cent of the cotton crop. If the policy now inaugurated by the Farm Board—the new efficiency engineers of the industry—works out as expected, the cotton "co-ops" will expand rapidly and the whole system of cotton marketing will be revolutionized, to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

International Peace Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NOW that President Hoover has proclaimed the multilateral treaty for renunciation of war to be operative, it would seem as if every loyal citizen, regardless of party affiliation, would want to do all in his power to uphold our President in the admirable stand he has taken toward furthering the peace of the world. For the peace problem is not a partisan issue.

A special day will soon be here that will give everyone a splendid opportunity to evince loyalty to our country and enthusiasm for peace, namely, Aug. 27, the day when, a year ago, the peace pact was signed in Paris by the representatives of the original nations whose adherence was invited.

Two or three months ago authoritative word came from Europe that several nations there were making plans for the observance of this day as International Peace Day. Now the idea of the multilateral treaty originated in the United States. Shall our people not show as much and as keen interest as Europeans in commemorating the day on which the pledge was taken that, fulfilled, will free the entire world from the bondage of a custom that has cursed all mankind? Peace day could be made an unqualified success if the idea were taken up by peace societies, women's clubs, churches, summer camps for young people, et cetera. Parades, pageants, plays, recitations and music of suitable kinds are all available; and no town is too remote or village too small to give a program worthy of the occasion. Material in abundance is easily obtainable from public libraries and from the National Council for Prevention of War, Washington, D. C.

Public opinion has been mobilizing steadily for 10 years past in favor of peace. President Hoover's proclamation has given an impetus to the movement whose effect and strength will be world-wide and impossible to estimate. Now let every citizen in our country do his part in exerting personal influence in support of the treaty in public as well as in private. Let everybody rally to the standard of peace.

Notes on Censorship.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM tempted to point out one or two thoughts on the problem of censorship which have occurred to me. It is a one-sided state of affairs when the more realistic portions of an artistic work like "All Quiet on the Western Front" are hacked and deleted; when a book like "Candide" is barred for a time from the public—and at the same time literature of such nauseating contents that no European would think of sending into America is being sold daily over the counters of our drug stores and cigar stands.

I understand very well why the Government authorities prosecute a wag for sending through the mails a certain Bible story—but I cannot help making the customary ineffectual protest against what I consider the gross unfairness of our censors. Certainly I admit the argument that other countries exercise censorship (for reasons of state) and that they go about it more severely than even we do—Russia for example. But one expects greater things from America. The rest of the world had grown tired of tyranny and starvation—and men looked to America for freedom. The censors have truly given them a dusty answer. For many years we have made the world look to us enviously. We have led in natural beauty and wealth and mechanics—I do not see why we cannot lead in other things: Sanity and liberty.

WILLIAM WHARTON.

How to Grow Slim.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SEE a lot of bunk about women smoken to take off and keep off fat—grab a cigarett butt instid of a lollypop, etcetera. Now I kin give you somthin much better and that is good old-fashioned chawin or eaten terbaccer. I knowed a cole miner oncet that alers chawed terbaccer and got kicked in the face by a cole mine mule and got his teeth knocked out (there ain't no other way to git a terbaccer chawer's teeth out and him live to tell it), and this cole miner couldnt chaw terbaccer with his jaw bone broken and he gained 18 pounds in 18 daze, provin that eaten terbaccer will due the job. I knowed other simular cases.

Another thing, chawin terbaccer is healthy as it keeps a feller outside in the fresh air as it works better there, being a outdoor sport. Another thing it builds a repertation for brains as whin a feller with a good quid in his mush gits asked a question he kaint talk till he spits and that gives him time to think and thinkin makes a man smart if he has any brains to work on in the first place.

I admit my wife has fussed at me moren 20 yrs for indulgin in this innercent pastime. Now this is the bug under the chip whitch causes me to write and ask your help. If you can make it stylish for women to chaw terbaccer my wife'll lay offen me and you will make the women thinner and healthier and purtier and the men happy and all will forgit and forgive you for everything you have ever did before. A. HILL BILLY.

A WHOLESALE TARIFF STEAL.

Despite the elimination or softening of some of its worst provisions by the Senate Finance Committee, the Hawley tariff bill remains a vicious piece of legislation. It will add $500,000,000 or more to our living costs, largely for the benefit of industries which are already prosperous, and will make increasingly difficult our trade relations with the remainder of the world. Forty nations, including Canada, our best customer, have registered protests against the Hawley bill, pointing out the obvious economic lesson that if they are prevented from selling to us they will also lack the means to buy from us.

When Mr. Hoover called a special session he had in mind solely the relief of the farmer. It will be remembered that Senator Borah promised the farmer during the campaign, as the price of Republican votes, that he might expect a special session for the consideration of agricultural questions. Evidently, Borah did so with the consent of the candidate, for the session was forthcoming. But neither Mr. Hoover nor Senator Borah foresaw that a session designed for farm relief was destined to be perverted by a wholesale tariff steal for the benefit of industrialists.

Senator Borah's chagrin was apparent when he offered a resolution to restrict tariff revision to the agricultural and directly related schedules. It was beaten by a margin of one vote. Mr. Hoover, although treading softly, has thrown out hints that he is not in sympathy with the goings-on in the rooms of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee, where the bill was hatched and incubated. There is considerable trepidation among Republican leaders as to what Mr. Hoover will do with the bill, and there may well be. The President will have before him a general tariff bill, of which, according to Senator Smoot's figures, only 13 per cent of the increases are in the agricultural schedules. If enacted into law, the bill would leave the farmer in the same relative position he occupied before. Is that to be the result of the "farm relief session"?

Mr. Hoover has every reason to be pleased with the first half of the session, when a bill was passed creating the Farm Board and establishing a $500,000,000 fund for farm relief. That part of the President's program is already in operation. But the latter part of the session has degenerated into a shambles of log-rolling and back-scratching that accompany every occasion on which the Republicans, urged on by powerful lobbyists, are permitted to tinker with the tariff schedules. It is a shameful and depressing situation, and one in which the President has a great opportunity to prove his mettle.

COUNT KEYSERLING AND MISSOURI PEASANTRY.

We learn that Count Keyserling, in his whirlwind trip through Missouri in February, 1928, descended from the empyrean long enough to make a study of the rural Missourian. He writes his conclusions in the current Atlantic Monthly as follows:

> The Missourian is foremost a Missourian—which does not only mean, as the popular satirist will have it, that he wants to see a thing before he believes in it, that he is suspicious and close-fisted to a certain extent. He is essentially rooted in the Missourian soil; he is the one white American I have met of peasant-like qualities.

We are wondering just how and where the Count made the acquaintance of the rural Missourian. When in St. Louis he was entertained in a large and handsome home on Westmoreland Place. Is it possible the Count, wandering through Westmoreland's prim precincts, found a rural Missourian lurking there? He made his brilliant, but somewhat unintelligible, speech at the Chase Hotel. Are there to be found in the Chase lobby specimens of the Missouri hayseed? While here the Count received the young women of the Junior League. Is there among this dazzling collection of post-debs one who typifies pastoral Missouri?

We leave the question open. At any rate, we are willing to grant that Count Keyserling knows more about rural Missouri than rural Missouri knows about Count Keyserling. As they would say down in Chicken Bristle, Mo., "Whoinell is he?"

PUBLIC SENTIMENT AND DISARMAMENT.

Ambassador Dawes went to the heart of the disarmament problem in an address at Elgin, Scotland, last week, when he said that it is not a matter of diplomacy but one of public sentiment.

Said Mr. Dawes: "The smaller the compass into which the technical naval differences can be reduced, the clearer will be the public perception of the relative significance of what is involved, as compared with the total naval strength of the Powers, and the more general will be the demand that these smaller differences be fairly adjusted in order that the whole cause of world peace may not be jeopardized unjustifiably thereby."

This is not to say that so technical a matter as naval ratios can be reduced to such simple terms that everybody can understand them. Nevertheless, it is true that the subject can be translated into lay terms in such a way that the people can understand, as Mr. Dawes puts it, "what it is all about." There is a growing sentiment for naval disarmament in both the United States and England. It has its inspiration in the disposition of Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald to make headway in this difficult field. Nor is it a sentiment that is confined to these two countries. It is also strong in Japan. The big navy people are on the defensive everywhere, and it is the first time they have been. The incidence of Mr. Hoover in the White House and Mr. MacDonald in the Premiership has reversed the usual situation. Usually the sentiment for disarmament, branded as pacifist, is on the defensive.

Mr. Dawes is quite right. Disarmament does depend upon public sentiment, and it is the rising state of public sentiment that constitutes the present promise.

WHY NOT A PENGUIN RACE?

The London Times reports a "pretty and entertaining sight" which visitors see daily at the London Zoo. The ingenious keepers have built a runway through the penguin pens, and the sagacious aquatic birds are shooed behind a gate at one end of it when feeding time arrives. Part of their ration of fish is then placed at the other end, the gate is opened and the penguins waddle and swim across the greensward and the pool until they reach their dinners, while bystanders select their favorites and cheer them on. It is said the birds by this time understand very well what is intended, and have developed a genuine sporting spirit. When they have eaten all the fish in sight, more food is thrown into the other end of the penguin paddock, and another race takes place.

Since the St. Louis Zoo is one of the few places in the world where captive penguins in any number may be seen, we pass the idea on for whatever it may be worth. No doubt the scramble over land and water would be just as amusing here as it is in London.

FOR MISSOURI'S YOUTH.

Gov. Caulfield pleaded the cause of education in his State Fair address. It was an effective time and place to make that plea. His audience for the most part was made up of rural Missouri people. And they of all people know how urgent the need is for better educational opportunities in this state.

We all know this need as a fact. Competent and impartial experts have examined Missouri educationally and pronounced it wanting. We are rated far down in the national scale. The comparative statistics drive home the adverse verdict.

The people of rural Missouri know about our lack of educational advantages, not merely as a fact, but as a tragedy that blights the lives and destinies of their children. They see their children come up to young manhood and womanhood inadequately prepared for the competition of life. They see them leave the farms, some of them under the spur of ambition, many of them in sheer desperation, to seek fortunes in the crowded industrial ranks of the cities.

It is an old subject. Nothing new can be said about it. But something new can be done about it. And in Gov. Caulfield the youth of rural Missouri have found a man who, we believe, will do something new.

A survey is now being made, under the Governor's initiative, by appointees of his own choosing, to ascertain the State's educational needs. Following the report of this survey commission, the speaker predicted "inevitable action of the Legislature, backed by a strong and powerful public sentiment." To secure such legislative action and to mobilize such public sentiment leadership will be necessary. Gov. Caulfield can be counted on to supply that leadership.

It can be safely said, in our judgment, that the Caulfield administration will be distinctive in the State's history. The atmosphere of Jefferson City has been changed. Energy has supplanted lethargy, inaction has been superseded by action, decision has routed procrastination. In short, a man is on the job. The full fruition of his service is yet to come. And if, in his executive term, a fine, abundant educational policy for rural Missouri is formulated and maintenance provided, he will have won his place among our truly great Governors.

The preliminary steps to this educational policy are now being taken. We have no doubt that Henry Caulfield will see it through. Certainly in this effort he will have the enthusiastic, fighting support of every right thinking man and woman in Missouri.

Russian railroad officials deported from Manchuria deny that they were making propaganda against China. Maybe it was just the way they wore their whiskers.

SPEAKING OF THE WEATHER—

British meteorologists, now in convention in London, will spend the next week talking about the weather. But that will be no record; most laymen have discussed the subject all their lives. The hardy explorers of the Byrd party are no exception; for several months their dispatches have told of little else—and such grand weather!

Just now we have the dog days for conversation. The ancient Roman astronomers added them to the repertory when they first attributed that fried-out feeling of late summer to the simultaneous rising of the sun and Sirius, the dog star. The almanac says this double-header takes place daily from July 25 to Sept. 5, so we are well into the doldrums.

Lawns and straw hats, both beginning to turn brown around the edges, are visible proof. Ambition palls and the line of least resistance has new attractions. Tired mothers begin to wonder if school will never open. Dusty auto tourists turn wearily homeward on thread-bare tires, and the soda fountain business reaches its zenith. The old swimming hole bears a warning green scum, and the barefoot boy's soles have acquired the toughness of leather. Each heat wave is hailed hopefully as the last; but the breeze, as from an oven, bears little of promise.

It is the summer of our discontent, but there are better days to come. Soon late September and October will bring autumnal coolness, slumbering ambitions will revive and everyone will say what a short summer it has been and where has it gone anyhow.

Grover Cleveland came back, and why not Grover Cleveland Alexander?

100 YEARS OF LOCOMOTIVES.

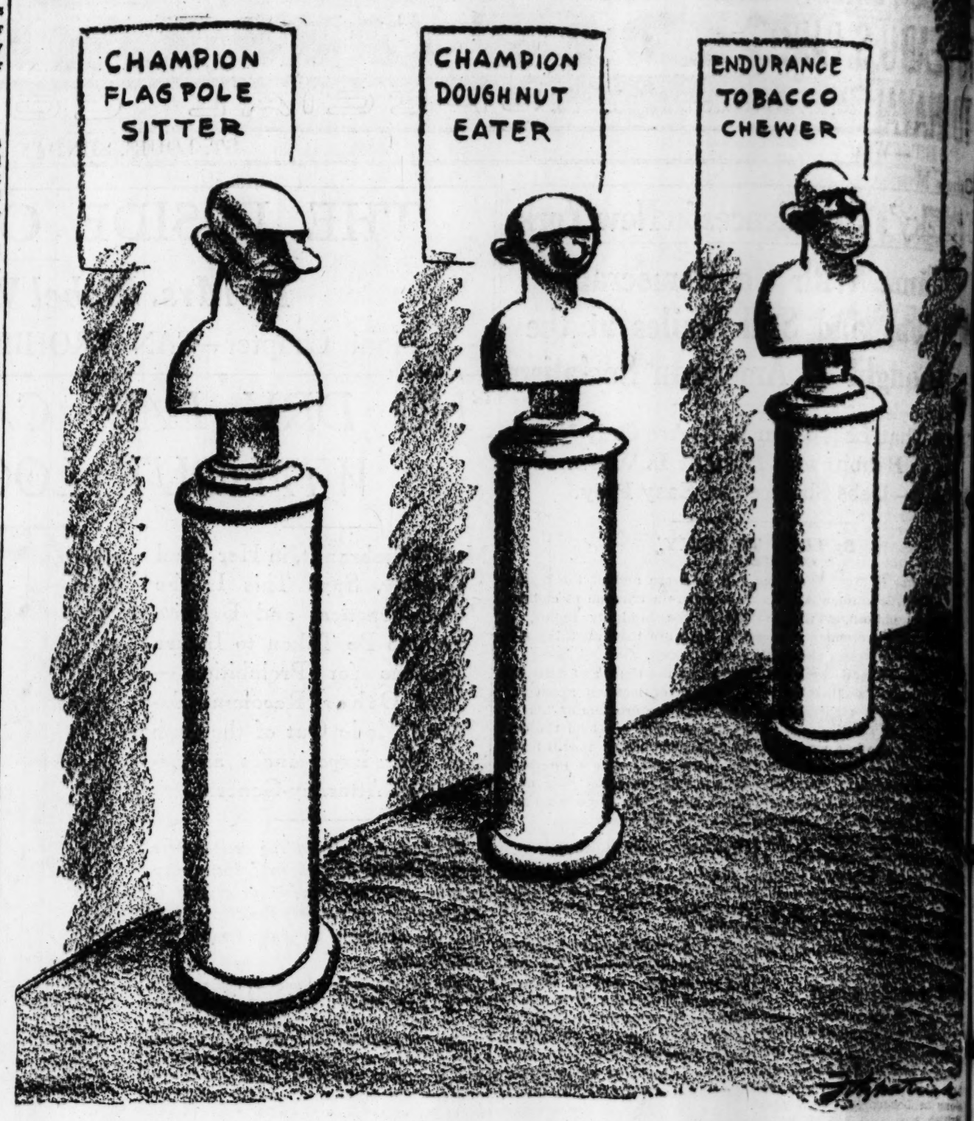
Before an astonished crowd near Liverpool, the first demonstration of a successful railway locomotive took place 100 years ago this fall, when Stephenson's "Rocket" won a $2500 prize by drawing a load over a 70-mile course. Creevey, the smart diarist of the late Georgian period, had been frankly skeptical of any machine taking the place of the reliable horses which drew cars over the railroads. He termed the invention "this infernal machine, the loco-motive Monster, navigated by a tail of smoke and sulphur."

After the test, even the sophisticated Creevey became enthusiastic and consented to try a ride with the infernal machine. He wrote of it:

> Today we have had a lark of a very high order. I had the satisfaction, for I can't call it pleasure, of taking a trip of five miles, which we did in just a quarter of an hour, that is 20 miles an hour . . . with ease as to motion and absence of friction. But the quickest motion is to me frightful, it is really flying. It gave me a headache which has not left me yet.

Mr. Creevey would forget about his headache if he could come back today and take a ride on one of our limited trains at 65 miles an hour. Since he became locomotive-minded after a ride with the Rocket, he would be interested in hearing of the Frisco's No. 4113, which recently finished a 25-day freight run in which it covered 7350 miles without having the fires drawn, setting a new record for locomotive endurance.

The locomotive has contributed a great deal to modern civilization since its first successful test 100 years ago. In opening up the American wilderness, the "iron horse" played an important part, and it is still the trusty servant of all mankind. Congratulations on this anniversary are well in order.



THE HALL OF FAME.

Our Vanishing Farm Lands

Floods do heavy property damage, but cause larger loss in washing away fertile soil; erosion annually destroys plant food potentially valued at $2,000,000,000; exhaustion of earth has caused famine and decadence in other nations, but U. S. pays little attention; planting trees and terracing fields suggested.

Hugh Hammond Bennett in North American Review

FLOODS belong to the natural order of things. From the remotest days of recorded history, mankind the world over has stood in awe of the sweeping fury and ruthless destructiveness of angry waters. In America, floods are becoming more frequent, and this phenomenon is not difficult to understand when we look carefully into the causes.

A contributing cause to the greater frequency of floods, and one that weighs heavily upon American agriculture, is the unrestrained erosion of the land by abrasive rainwater. The damage which has been done by this agency is so enormous that the mind is incapable of comprehending its significance. With our vast area of farm land and our rapidly expanding industrial life we have not concerned ourselves about the situation; have not recognized it nor thought of it.

Not so many years ago we were told with gleeful assurance that the soil was our one immutable, inexhaustible resource. When we have studied the situation with open eyes it becomes painfully apparent that the soundest part of this gem of intended wisdom is the rhythm of its meter.

The facts are that all the soil we cultivate and graze is susceptible to change by erosion and that much of it is susceptible, not only to rapid exhaustion, but to absolute destruction.

Says Representative Buchanan of Texas in this connection: "We have in our midst a master criminal, a gigantic thief, a highwayman. I want you to act as a jury, listen to the evidence, render a righteous verdict upon the destructive depredations of this, the master criminal of our age, and by your verdict not only find this criminal guilty, but condemn the inaction and neglect of the governments of States and Nation in not sooner apprehending and condemning to eternal confinement this master criminal, thereby stopping his depredation. The name of this master criminal is soil erosion."

The consequence of this waste of a natural resource—of soil lost by unrestrained erosion, of devastated forests, of streams run dry or choked with silt—is so clearly revealed in the impoverished lands throughout the world that no American, comprehending the danger, will refuse to join in national combat against the evil that lowered the Roman standard from its high place, brought depopulation to Asia Minor, afflicted much of China with indescribable poverty, and is now adding rapidly to our already large area of abandoned farm land and devegetated ranges.

A survey has shown that not less than half of the land now in cultivation in this country is subject to damaging rainwash. Half of this area, or more, is being washed so destructively that farms are being abandoned every year because the soil has been made too thin by erosion or gullying to warrant further cultivation. The damage is taking place gradually in many sections.

At least 126,000,000,000 pounds of potential plant food are being washed out of our fields every year. This loss exceeds the net loss in the crops removed by 21 times. Furthermore, the plant food taken by crops can be restored in the form of fertilizers; that taken by running water cannot be restored, for water takes not only the plant food but the soil that contains it.

The value of the loss in potential plant food alone amounts to $2,000,000,000 annually. Of this there is practically conclusive evidence that at least $200,000,000 is an actual, tangible yearly loss to the farmer. Part of this washed soil is spread over alluvial plains, where it is generally not needed and frequently damages the land while vast amounts pass out to tidewater. The Mississippi alone handles every year 428,000,000 tons of this traffic in wastage.

Take out of cultivation the severely eroded areas and the steeper sloping lands, plant them to trees on an extensive scale, and a long step will be made toward farm relief. Also, this would save much land, keep much silt out of stream channels and reservoirs, and protect much rich alluvium in the stream bottoms. On much of this land the trees will grow up without any planting if fires are prevented. Foresters tell us that the growing of trees on these areas would prove a good investment, one that would yield 4 or 5 per cent annually.

When one views the perfectly terraced slopes of the Rhine and the Mediterranean Basin, and sees grapes, olive trees and even bananas growing on walled benches, some of which were built 2000 years ago, one wonders why we of America, who are wasting our lands faster than any other people of the world, have not learned more from these conspicuous examples of land conservation. The answer comes back again to the vast expanse of good land we once had and should have preserved, the large area we still have; and, of course, to our characteristic indifference to conservation in general.

The Federal Government, co-operating with the States, is now putting in soil and rainfall conservation experimental and demonstrational stations in all the major soil regions of the country where losses of soil and water are excessive. Every effort will be made to show the farmers and ranchmen of the Nation how menacing are the wasting effects of erosion, and also how the evil may be controlled. Much research and experimental work remains to be carried out, but this will be attacked vigorously and persistently.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2[illegible]

FOREIGN diplomats in Washington had a much disturbed summer this year.

For one thing, President Hoover's attention to official duties, with his week-end trips to his Virginia fishing camp, made impossible the usual summer departure for cooler climates of Ambassadors and Ministers and their families and staffs.

They hardly could go away while the President remained in town, particularly with a special session of Congress sitting.

And when tariff changes were impending as a result of that session, certainly it behooved the diplomats to remain on the job this summer to a far greater extent than the writer ever remembers their having done before except in the war years.

Then along came the Kellogg treaty promulgation ceremonies and also the Sino-Russian crisis. Those two matters in any event, would have called back to Washington for a time at least all interested diplomats who had not taken leave of absence for trips home.

THOSE remaining in this country to a large extent followed the lead of the dean of the corps, Sir Esme Howard, and gave up vacation plans early in the spring when Mr. Hoover's purpose to remain in Washington was known. For the most part they compromised by leasing suburban villas in nearby Virginia or Maryland.

At that, the weather man seemed to be first to take special pity on the foreign and diplomatic officialdom cooped up in the capital this summer.

Down to mid-July it had been cool with only a hot day now and then. But times in early July it was so cool as to make open fires in houses stripped of curtains and carpets for the summer more enjoyable of evenings. Then Old Sol turned on the juice for a 10-day stretch of 90 degrees and up.

PROBABLY the diplomats will get an opportunity to return to their preferred summer haunts next year. There seems to be a feeling that Mr. Hoover plans a home vacation in California next summer. The summer White House, in that event, will be on the Stanford campus.

From that point, the President can go again by car over the California fishing grounds of his fancy. The newspaper men on White House assignment are looking forward to such a change of scenery.

The attendant reporters park themselves at some resort in the remote vicinity and rely on telephone contact with the lodge to hear what is going on. Their dispatches indicate that they don't hear very much until after the fact.

IN THEIR place, the writer would never fail to be nervous that something might happen. Imagine trying to get a big presidential news story out over the few commercial telegraph and telephone wires that could possibly be available in such circumstances. There are selfish reasons why the press to wish the President many peaceful week-ends.

STIMSON LIKELY TO HEAD U.S. PARTY TO NAVAL PARLEY

Others Mentioned for Delegation Include Dawes, Gibson and Rear Admiral Jones.

MEETING EXPECTED TO BE IN LONDON

Joseph P. Cotton, Undersecretary of State, to Stay at Home to Keep Hoover Informed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Secretary of State Stimson is expected by well-informed circles here to head the American delegation to the naval parley which is being discussed by Ambassador Dawes and Prime Minister MacDonald.

While there has been no decision as to the date or location of a disarmament conference, some consideration has been given by officials in both the State and Navy Departments to the personnel of the American delegation. Reports from London have stated that the conference will likely be held there, either late this year or early next year.

President Hoover and Secretary Stimson are well aware that the setting of a definite date for the conference necessarily must depend on the progress which is made by the British Premier and the Ambassador in securing some basis of settlement between Great Britain and the United States and on the basic factors and principles in the problems as they concern these two countries.

After these factors are determined—and hopes are held here that some definite arrangement can be reached in a matter of weeks—the other powers will be consulted.

Stimson Knows Problem.

Since Prime Minister MacDonald has been conducting the discussions in London on behalf of the British and is considered here to be the most likely one to head the British delegation at such a conference, it is felt in official and diplomatic circles that the United States should send to a parley a high ranking government official.

Secretary Stimson has been dealing intimately with the situation and has been in constant touch with Mr. Hoover and American naval experts. Officials here today pointed out that Stimson would be prepared to enter a conference thoroughly acquainted with both the American and British desires and viewpoints. To assist him there would be Ambassador Dawes and Hugh S. Gibson, American Ambassador to Belgium and head of the American delegation to the League of Nations Preparatory Disarmament Commission, who is particularly well informed on the viewpoints of other nations.

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, who retired some time ago as chairman of the General Board, is viewed by naval experts as a possible choice to assist the American delegation with the technical angles of the situation. He is considered well acquainted with the disarmament question and has played a large part in the Anglo-American negotiations. His advice and counsel frequently has been sought by the President and the other diplomatic officials on the question.

Cotton Not Likely to Go.

Admiral Jones also is well acquainted with the methods of handling naval parleys, having played a large part in the Tripartite Conference of 1927, where he served as principal assistant to Gibson, head of the American delegation.

Another naval expert who has been dealing intimately with the technical angles of the London negotiations is Commander H. C. Train.

Joseph P. Cotton, Undersecretary of State, has dealt more intimately with the whole problem than any other person in the Washington Government. Instructions to Ambassador Dawes are drafted by Cotton after consultation with the President, Secretary Stimson and the naval experts. Officials expressed some doubt, however, whether the President, in the event a conference is held abroad, would desire both his Secretary of State and Undersecretary to be absent at the same time. It was thought that Mr. Hoover would desire the presence in Washington of a diplomatic official intimately informed on the subject with whom he could confer during the course of the negotiations.

Charles Evans Hughes, white Secretary of State, headed the American delegation to the disarmament conference of 1921 and was assisted by a large staff from both the State and Navy Departments. In this instance, however, the conference was held in Washington and it was not necessary for any of the leading members of the Government to be absent for any period.

How the Missouri Devoured a Road Near Corning.

Corning, Once Prosperous, Goes Broke Over River

Denied Federal Aid, the Missouri Continues Devastation and Former Wealthy Community Is Helpless.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CORNING, Mo., Aug. 23.—The rampageous Missouri River, which was scooping its way in a destructive fury toward this town four weeks ago, has quieted down. But the river threat against Corning remains active and reaal.

Nine hundred feet southeast of the town the river courses almost placidly around Hemmie's Bend. At that point, July 28, its yellow waters tumbled ton after ton of loamy soil from the Walters farm and swept it away.

The swift torrent, plunging in a channel 52 feet deep, hurtled against the soft bank and dislodged dirt as effectively as exploding dynamite. For three days, the river cut toward the town. Then it changed its course, swept over half-a-dozen rich farms and destroyed 100 yards of roadway, which it reached only after wiping out a strip of countryside 200 feet wide and perhaps 300 feet long. It continued this latter offensive up to Aug. 16.

The Corning district lacks levees. Six years ago property holders attempted to control the river with retards and revetments. The stream yanked them out. Corning asked for Government aid at that time and was refused. Corning has asked again and has been refused.

The War Department, through its district board at Kansas City, has denied assistance to the community that went broke in 1923 after spending $100,000 on a levee project, which the Missouri carried into mid-stream.

Not "Navigation" Problem.

The town of Corning, now only 900 feet from the river, and its adjacent areas of threatened corn land, once valued at $150 an acre, do not constitute a problem in navigation, according to the Army Engineers. This fact puts the possibility of any War Department aid for Corning beyond the pale.

Overnight the pacific waters of the Missouri can take on the character of a vandalistic force, carrying fields, orchards and stretches of roadway into the swift current, residents of Corning say. Two months from now, after the September rains, the river will rise again. And when it rises, it will begin to cut into the banks. There will be no levees to oppose it. The War Department has washed its hands of "the Corning affair." And Corning, as a community, is "broke."

"The river has stopped cutting," Mayor Glen Schultz said. "We're safe for today at least. But wait until the autumn rains bring high water. The Missouri will begin to cut.

The population of Corning is today about 250. Many families have packed their effects and moved the last month. Property values in the town have declined 50 per cent or more, according to R. F. Buck, president of the Bank of Corning. Farm lands, formerly worth up to $150 an acre, are today worthless on the market. Ten years ago Corning was a prosperous community.

The attempt of Corning farmers to save their lands was a tragi-comedy. The Woods Bros. Construction Co. of Omaha, Neb., now holders of several contracts for Federal levee work between Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., installed six retards on the Nebraska side of the river, near Indian Bend, a few miles west of Corning, about 1921. Thereafter, according to John Heits, once wealthy farmer, who has lost all he owned in the river and the Corning levee project, the river began to cut ruthlessly on the Missouri side.

Formed a Levee District.

In 1922 farmers near Corning formed a levee district and took on obligations amounting to $100,000 in an effort to check the tempestuous river. The Woods Bros. Construction Co. was to build 14 retards along Hemmie's Bend. Each farmer mortgaged his property to the extent of about $48 an acre to authorize issuance of 20-year bonds. The bonds were to be sold through Compton & Co. of St. Louis. But when the project was finished, the river began to sweep it away. Within a few months the "levee" was just so much snagging, no longer cabled to the bank, but caught on a sandbar in midstream.

Efforts were made to collect on the bond mortgages, in the form of taxes, despite the failure of the project. Some of the farmers paid as much as $2000 on an indebtedness of $4800 or more. Then they refused to pay. They were sued by the contractors and won the case in the Circuit Court of Holt County.

A test case, involving the legality of financial arrangements for the $100,000 levee will soon come up in the Supreme Court. Approximately half of the land mortgaged in the levee district is now in the river.

74 and Savings Gone.

John Heits, 74-year-old farmer, father of nine children, and who was regarded as wealthy up to the time the levee district was financed, is now living as a tenant on a farm a mile away from the river. His money is gone. He is typical of many farmers despoiled by the Missouri River of their lands, and who put their savings into the retard project that was to salvage their acres.

Heits lost a $30,000 farm. Alice Walters a woman farmer, lost 250 acres to the river. She has 150 left, and their existence for another year is doubtful. Charley Dankers had a farm of 160 acres along Hemmie's Bend. Seventy acres have been claimed by the river. I. P. Moorehouse, whose land at one time was several hundred feet from the river bank, has lost 75 acres of his 80. F. L. Wren, of his 160-acre loamy farm, has left about 12 acres. The Whaler farm, regarded two years ago as completely out of reach of the river, has been despoiled of 15 acres. Whaler has 106 acres left which wouldn't bring a dime in the open market. A. Rosellus, wealthiest farmer in the Corning district, has thus far lost 220 acres of his 1000-acre farm. Ben Pearce has lost 100 acres of his 240-acre farm, and the river, which on occasion seems to Corning folk to have made up its mind to destroy the community, has lately taken to washing away farm land five miles below Hemmie's Bend, in the region south of Craig, the nearest town.

Last fall the stream cut dangerously in the direction of the town and stopped. Last spring it did the same thing. On July 27, at a point on the Walters farm, it began to gouge out the river bank in a direct line toward the town at the rate of five to 20 feet a day. It advanced 100 feet or more and then shifted its cutting in a southerly direction.

It advanced 200 feet across meadows and corn fields and began cutting into the highway between Corning and Craig. It attacked the highway about a half mile south of the town. Tons of earth crashed into the stream and the noise could be heard in the Corning stores. It destroyed 100 yards of roadway, necessitating a detour of more than a mile for travelers. Then, when several farmers were moving out, it shifted its attack to a sandbar on the Nebraska side. When the river ceased its thrust toward the town, at least eight barns or houses on farms near Corning had been moved out of the path of the flood.

Congressman David W. Hopkins of St. Joseph, Mo., has visited Corning several times. He called the attention of the War Department and of the district board of river (army) engineers to the town's danger. But the hands of the War Department are tied. Corning may be a problem in human beings and in destruction of property ($50,000 to date), but it is not strictly speaking "navigation."

How the Farm Board Is Going About Its Task

Governing all that the board has said and done, up to the present, is its announced policy of expanding and strengthening the cooperative movement. In following this policy it is conforming strictly to the purpose of the farm relief act.

As the Post-Dispatch has explained in previous articles on the farm problem, two different kinds of co-operation were proposed during the long discussion of relief measures. The McNary-Haugen bill, with its equalization fee system, contemplated a compulsory co-operation among farmers. It was said by its advocates that farmers would not join the co-operative movement in sufficient numbers to make it effective unless they were compelled to join it. The opposition, which had the support first of President Coolidge and then of President Hoover, said that the co-operatives, with the aid of the Federal Government, could be made so attractive that the great bulk of the farmers would flock voluntarily to the standard. This is the theory which forms the farm relief act passed by Congress last spring and it is the theory which the Farm Board is now trying to execute. By its encouragement of the Southern cotton organizations, the board has made a fine start in that direction.

Campaign Confusion.

The subject of farm relief was considerably befogged during the last national campaign. Rarely was the question discussed by any politician, on either side, without a good deal of political camouflage. The Post-Dispatch then sought to make clear, in an article described by Senator McNary as an accurate statement of the situation, that the McNary-Haugenites and the advocates of the voluntary system of co-operation had a common goal in view—the improvement of prices to the farmer through some form of crop control, similar to the control exercised in the field of manufacture.

This control means, in the end, a degree of price-fixing. The term price-fixing is in bad odor; hence the various euphemistic terms that have been used in its stead. But there is no reason why the fact should be blinked. The tariff is a species of price-fixing on behalf of the manufacturers. Trade associations engage in price-fixing. Why should not the farmer receive whatever benefits might accrue to him from a similar operation? At any rate, it is precisely these benefits—the benefits that arise from organization — that the Federal Farm Board is trying to give him, and in so doing the board is carrying out the plain intent of the relief act.

There is, of course, as Chairman Legge of the board has made clear, to be no effort at arbitrary raising of the price level of farm products. The rise in prices is expected to flow naturally from the control which the farmers, through their organizations, will be able to exercise over the marketing of their products. The prime object of the board is to assist the farmers in perfecting their co-operative societies. The loans now being made are for this purpose.

May Corner Markets.

But the board, under the farm act, has another string to its bow. Not only may it lend money and give advice to the co-operatives, but it may assist in the formation of "stabilization corporations, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled, which, with the approval of the board, may go into the open market and buy up a commodity—corner it, if you please—to the end that the farmer may have a higher price for his product.

Judging from what the Board has made known of its policies, it seems likely that this particular means of "stabilizing" the market will be used sparingly, and then only in emergencies. The first concern of the Board always will be to attain its ends through the normal working of the co-operatives. Its ideal is the improvement of prices of the farmer without a corresponding increase in prices to the consumer. In many instances, it has stated, it believes that this may be brought about through the elimination of waste and inefficiency in the marketing system.

Apart from all other considerations, there is this impelling reason why the board should go slowly in authorizing "stabilization" ventures on the market:

Money lent to the co-operatives is to be returned to the Government, but if money advanced by the Board for a "stabilization" operation is lost, the Government foots the bill. Too many losses of that kind would discredit the relief plan in the eyes of the public and bring about a demand for its repeal. All the statements of the Board point to a full realization of its responsibility not alone to the farmer, but to the consuming public.

Conception of Functions.

The Board's conception of its functions is well summed up in the following remarks by the chairman:

"I wish to say that the farmers and the public must be patient. The problems of agriculture are of long standing and cannot be solved overnight. On the contrary, there is always present the danger of increasing and aggravating our difficulties by unwise and premature action. I wish to assure you that the Federal Farm Board will move as quickly as is consistent with the assured and permanent improvement of agriculture. At the same time, the board will not undertake to force its program on any group of people. It will move only as fast as the farmers through their organizations are able and willing to accept the program.

"The improvement of agricultural conditions must be based on self-help. The board can contribute largely and will contribute to such improvement. In the long run, however, the board will render the greatest services to agriculture and to the nation by helping the farmer to help himself."

It is not an unwarranted inference from this statement that the administration of the relief act has been placed in excellent hands.

TO DEPORT CANADIAN FOR ILLEGAL ENTRY

Date for Sending George W. Fellowes Out of U. S. Being Arranged.

An order for the deportation of George W. Fellowes, Canadian war veteran, for illegally entering this country from Canada, was received yesterday by Immigration Inspector Nash from Washington. The date of deportation is being arranged with the Canadian Government.

At a hearing last March, after Fellowes had been arrested as a deportable alien, evidence was introduced that he had been in a Canadian insane asylum before entering the United States. He was employed here as circulation manager of a new society magazine and also worked as a private detective.

On his own initiative, Fellowes investigated local criminal cases, and once claimed to have solved the mysterious murder of Clifford Hicks, attorney and politician. Police scoffed at his solution. Later he engaged in several tilts with police, asserting on one occasion that police kidnaped him at a downtown building, took him into the county and beat him.

He is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. John de Pelzer, 2555 Meramec street, who for more than two years were annoyed by undertakers, florists, physicians, nurses, auto salesmen, Chinese and others arriving at their home in response to orders telephoned by some "practical joker."

Mrs. Willebrandt's Story Of "Inside of Prohibition"

tion in a pique because, as the report goes, the President refused to concentrate all prohibition enforcement activities in the Department of Justice and under my immediate supervision. Those who want to believe such a story can do so. I have never thought it worth while to deny all the baseless rumors about prohibition and prohibition enforcement that have gained circulation during the eight years that I was connected with the work. I most emphatically do believe responsibility for prohibition policies should be centered in some one place in the Government, and have long both so stated publicly and privately.

But there's nothing original with me about that idea. More than five years ago a committee of experts, appointed under congressional authority, made a report to Congress on reorganization of Government departments in the interest of efficiency. One of the six major recommendations of that committee was "the elimination of all nonfiscal functions from the Treasury Department." And there was specific recommendation by the same experts that the prohibition work be taken away from the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Furthermore, as long ago as 1920, a Secretary of the Treasury, David S. Houston, specifically recommended in his annual report for that year that the prohibition unit should be taken from the Treasury Department. He said that the Treasury Department and its officials had enough to do to take care of the tremendous fiscal responsibilities growing out of the war. Yet in a hit-or-miss manner the responsibility for prohibition enforcement has been delegated from time to time to the Secretary of the Treasury with an utter absence of logic or sound reason.

But, regardless of what the experts say, the reader will want to know the "why" of the proposal to centralize prohibition enforcement authority somewhere else than in the Treasury Department.

The "why" as I see it is that with responsibility divided as it is at present, there is no way for the President, Congress or the people to put a finger on the weak spot in enforcement. Even this discussion of mine, showing up weaknesses in efforts so far, although I have tried to make it definite is bound to leave the reader with a feeling of, "Well, to whom can I look to clean out politics from dominating United States Attorneys' offices, raise civil service standards for agents, compel co-ordination of border forces, tighten up on permits, and improve regulations?"

And the answer now is, "A dozen different people."

The result is constant buck-passing between them so fast that a person gets as dizzy trying to secure improvements as though watching a toe dancer whirl. The heads of the Prohibition Unit, Customs Service, Coast Guard Service and the Prosecution Division in the Department of Justice spend much of their time saying, in effect, "It wasn't I, it was the other fellow who fell down on the job and let the bootleggers slip through."

Not Money, but Better Men.

No great additional sum of money is needed to improve prohibition enforcement. There is plenty of mon power, though not all of the right kind. But the man power isn't made to work to the best advantage. For instance, there are six separate investigation units of the Treasury Department, besides one in the Postoffice Department, one in the Immigration Service, and one in the Department of Justice. If they were made to work together in the right way, with the proper exchange of information and personnel, there would be more of the bigger type of bootlegger caught and convicted; the men at the head of the big liquor rings.

Right in the Treasury Department itself, there is a scattering of responsibility that encourages "buck-passing" when anything goes wrong with prohibition enforcement. The Secretary of the Treasury necessarily must occupy most of his time with the financial affairs of the country. If he is really wrestling with problems of international finance, prohibition is bound to hit a blind spot!

The real solution of the enforcement problem is to secure the close grouping and proper co-ordination of the various evidence-collecting branches of the Treasury Department with the prosecuting genecies under the Department of Justice. There should be one head to determine policies. It doesn't have to be the Department of Justice, but certainly control should be centralized somewhere.

Plugging the Alcohol Leak.

It is essential that bootleggers be cut off from their supply of industrial, or specially denatured alcohol. Previously, I have stated in detail what the alcohol leak amounts to, and how it can be plugged by rewriting regulations and tightening up on permits. That the leak is a big one and that it can be stopped is amply proved by the work of Major Chester P. Mills, former prohibition administrator of the metropolitan district of New York. He resigned, he said, because political influence disrupted his force and his work. In presenting "the best and most practicable plan to make the eighteenth amendment effective," which won the $25,000 Durant prize award Major Mills said:

"In March, 1926, the withdrawal of such 'alcohol' permit holders in the Second Federal District was 660,000 gallons of specially denatured alcohol a month. By increasing vigilance and supervision of the activities of these permittees, their number was materially decreased and this volume was reduced within a year to approximately 351,000 gallons a month, a reduction of 309,000 gallons a month, representing alcohol previously diverted into illegal channels."

When the alcohol leak is plugged, there will be vastly less bootlegging in the Untied States of America than there is at present.

Another method of improving prohibition enforcement will be to cut off the flow of liquor from Canada and other points outside the United States. First, it will be necessary to convince the Canadian authorities of the honest intentions and integrity of our own officials, in order to secure more efective aid from Canada. A good start has been made in recent changes in the Customs Service at Detroit. Second, it will be necessary to strengthen our border patrol.

There are now two patrol organizations which might be coordinated or consolidated. There is a border patrol operating under the Commissioner of Customs in the Treasury Department, composed of about 700 men. This service is disorganized and decentralized, operating in local units under the political domination of the various collectors of customs.

There is another unit under the Secretary of Labor known as the Immigration Border Patrol. It consists of 400 men and operates under the direct supervision of the Commissioner of Immigration. A consolidated Border Patrol, or one co-ordinated by a capable administrator familiar with the border liquor situation, and working with the Department of Justice, could greatly lessen the smuggling of liquor into the United States.

Civil Service Standard Needed.

The fifth step toward making prohibition enforcement effective is complete elimination of political appointees from the enforcement organization. As long as one-third of the prohibition force is made up of people who have not qualified under proper civil service examinations, and political pull and influence are instrumental in keeping dishonest, untrained or stupid men in the service, there will be little possibility of the kind of enforcement that is required.

Securing civil service qualifications has not been wholly free from political influence. One Western attorney failed on the character examination for obvious reasons. After a number of political forces, including a dry Senator, had pleaded for him, he was reinstated and given a grade of 98—the highest on record! The first grading was correct. So politics must be kept away from the Civil Service Commission and standards for Civil Service qualifications materially raised.

To local communities must be left responsibility for the kind of police work that will detect the half-pint and quart liquor peddlers. When the majority of Federal prohibition agents are men whose honesty and integrity are amply vouched for and who have brains and judgment as well as special training for the collection of legal evidence by means that will not endanger lives or outrage the feelings of law-abiding citizens, prohibition enforcement will gain 100 per cent in effectiveness. It really takes only the "will to do it" by some one person in authority to accomplish that. Alf. Ottedal has built up that kind of a small group of trained agents under him. His methods might be extended.

Nation Must Help.

And, finally, when the United States District Attorneys and their assistants are appointed principally on the basis of legal fitness, integrity, and willingness and determination to enforce all the laws, instead of on the basis of political influence, which seeks "selective law enforcement," another 100 per cent will be added to the effectiveness of prohibition enforcement!

All these men, however, will have to be kept alive and faithful to their duty and responsibility, not alone by competent direction and supervision from Washington, but by alert and ever vigilant, politically-organized public sentiment for law enforcement in their districts.

On this last point, let me say again that prohibition will never be successfully enforced from Washington alone. It simply cannot be done. It is local opinion and vigilance that will bring about effectiveness in the districts throughout the country.

I well recall the difficulties that I had in directing prosecution of an important liquor conspiracy case involving local officials at Mobile, Ala. The United States District Attorney was a man who believed in prohibition enforcement, and was honest in his efforts. The liquor ring, however, secured his indictment by a state grand jury, and while that indictment (subsequently dismissed) was pending, we could not use him to prosecute the bootlegging ring. It was necessary, therefore, to secure the services of a special prosecutor.

We had the utmost difficulty in securing a competent lawyer, and one who could be depended upon to prosecute fearlessly and vigorously I insisted on naming a Democrat (which in a Republican administration is supposed to be a capital offense). Hugo Black, a young man of vigor and courage and since elected Senator from his State, was chosen. But weeks were consumed in finding a man of his type, and then more time was consumed in arranging details of his compensation.

In the end a special executor was put at work, and the cases were carried to successful conclusion, with the conviction of a number of the conspirators, including local officials. But these incidents (and there were many more of a like nature) have convinced me of the difficulty of doing the actual prosecuting from Washington. The responsibility is local, and only the general direction must be centralized and responsibility for policies accurately fixed in Washington.

Enforcement Possible.

I believe, based on my often disillusioning but illuminating experience and knowledge of the liquor situation, that prohibition can be enforced, and now. I was born in Kansas on the Western plains near the Panhandle of Texas. That strip of Texas territory was then a "No Man's Land." It had not been brought under the authority of State law, and no law was enforced there. It was a harbor for criminals. Just a few months before my birth, my father was almost killed and my uncle was slain in the defense of their homes from a lawless band that swept over from that law-defying area. The stories that my mother and father told concerning the situation had a deep influence on my life.

And so it seems to me that we now have throughout the country a "no man's land" which is the refuge for the dregs of society; the bootleggers, the thugs, the potential murderers, the bribers, the grafters and criminals of every description who live by preying on honest men and women. We have not effectively organized against them. These lawless elements took full advantage of the disorganization of governmental agencies and the relaxed grip of local communities on sturdy and normal enforcement of law during the confused period following the World War. Various legal phases of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act had to be tested in the courts, with uncertainty and confusion, until the points were settled. The force of prohibition agents created under the Volstead act was untrained, incompetent and sometimes dishonest. The bootlegger was not slow to turn all these things to his advantage. Liquor violators were therefore entrenched and in strong position for several years before enforcement activity was even fairly well organized. The bootleggers and their allies still have much of the initial advantage. But they can and will be routed!

Centralization Essential.

If one person is given centralized authority to co-ordinate forces and establish policies, if he be willing to face the difficulties and the infinite details of the task, and if he will stand up and take punishment and keep fighting he can carry the work on to success. He will have the backing of a President who has spent his life doing what timid men said was impossible.

It is a hard, thankless job. No one knows that better than I. But I have the comfort of knowing, too, that I have served in its most difficult period, and enforcement has made some advance.

There are some who will count me just another "out" in the game; others will say, "She made a sacrifice hit." What is said matters little because of my sure conviction that the man who follows me will advance the policies in which I believe.

In one sense I'm sorry to leave, even on the wings of the challenge of aviation law. For in looking back over the past eight years (the full measure of public service for any lawyer who doesn't want to get "governmentitis") I realize that I have had a lot of fun in the struggle itself, because, as President Roosevelt said,

"Aggressive fighting for the right is the noblest sport the world affords."

ENDS 50 YEARS WITH TERMINAL RAILROAD

Lyman W. Putnam, Commercial Agent, Receives Many Congratulatory Messages.

Lyman W. Putnam, Commercial Agent of the Terminal Railroad Association, whose duties carry him to many parts of the country in his solicitation of freight routings through the St. Louis gateway, yesterday completed a half century of continuous service, 35 years of which have been spent in the Traffic Department.

On his arrival at his office he found telegrams and letters from many friends. Terminal officials joined in their expressions of good will with traffic officials of the St. Louis lines generally.

Putnam, who was born in Carlyle, Ill., and who is listed as a lineal descendant of Gen. Israel Putnam, entered Terminal service in 1879 as a yard clerk in the old Twelfth street yards adjacent to the old Union Depot, which was abandoned in 1894 on the completion of the present passenger terminal. His first job was to take car numbers, trace movements and perform the other details required of the "mud hopper" as he was called in those days. In 1887 he was advanced to the post of collecting freight bills, and from that assignment was made assistant cashier at the old Twelfth street freight office. In 1895 he was made contracting agent and 10 years later was appointed commercial agent. During the Government operation, he served as service supervisor and on the return of the railways to their owners, he was put back in his old position.

Putnam is acquainted in thousands of railroad offices. Meeting other traffic officials and shippers constitutes his principal line of service and he is never at a loss to give good reasons why through freight should be routed by the St. Louis gateway. He is married and resides in St. Louis although his duties permit him to spend but a very small part of his time at home.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

International Peace Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

NOW that President Hoover has proclaimed the multilateral treaty for renunciation of war to be operative, it would seem as if every loyal citizen, regardless of party affiliation, would want to do all in his power to uphold our President in the admirable stand he has taken toward furthering the peace of the world. For the peace problem is not a partisan issue.

A special day will soon be here that will give everyone a splendid opportunity to evince loyalty to our country and enthusiasm for peace, namely, Aug. 27, the day when, a year ago, the peace pact was signed in Paris by the representatives of the original nations whose adherence was invited.

Two or three months ago authoritative word came from Europe that several nations there were making plans for the observance of this day as International Peace Day. Now the idea of the multilateral treaty originated in the United States. Shall our people not show as much and as keen interest as Europeans in commemorating the day on which the pledge was taken that, fulfilled, will free the entire world from the bondage of a custom that has cursed all mankind? Peace day could be made an unqualified success if the idea were taken up by peace societies, women's clubs, churches, summer camps for young people, et cetera. Parades, pageants, plays, recitations and music of suitable kinds are all available; and no town is too remote or village too small to give a program worthy of the occasion. Material in abundance is easily obtainable from public libraries and from the National Council for Prevention of War, Washington, D. C.

Public opinion has been mobilizing steadily for 10 years past in favor of peace. President Hoover's proclamation has given an impetus to the movement whose effect and strength will be world-wide and impossible to estimate. Now let every citizen in our country do his part in exerting personal influence in support of the treaty in public as well as in private. Let everybody rally to the standard of peace.

SUES FOR $66,200 COMMISSION ON $309,000 REALTY SALE

Earl Deane Claims Amount on Contract Though Owner Sold Delmar-Union Corner.

A suit to collect $66,200 as commission in an alleged $309,000 real estate transfer was filed in St. Louis Circuit Court yesterday by Earle Deane of the Earle Deane Realty & Mortgage Co., Kirkwood, against James H. Jones, 223 East Argonne drive, Kirkwood.

Deane's petition alleged that he contracted with Jones last March to sell for him a two-story store and apartment building on the southwest corner of Delmar and Union boulevards. It was also stated that Deane was to receive 5 per cent of the first $50,000 of the selling price, 3 per cent of any sum received in excess of that amount and that if he sold the property for more than $310,000 he was to receive one half of the sum.

A WHOLESALE TARIFF STEAL.

Despite the elimination or softening of some of its worst provisions by the Senate Finance Committee, the Hawley tariff bill remains a vicious piece of legislation. It will add $500,000,000 or more to our living costs, largely for the benefit of industries which are already prosperous, and will make increasingly difficult our trade relations with the remainder of the world. Forty nations, including Canada, our best customer, have registered protests against the Hawley bill, pointing out the obvious economic lesson that if they are prevented from selling to us they will also lack the means to buy from us.

When Mr. Hoover called a special session he had in mind solely the relief of the farmer. It will be remembered that Senator Borah promised the farmer during the campaign, as the price of Republican votes, that he might expect a special session for the consideration of agricultural questions. Evidently, Borah did so with the consent of the candidate, for the session was forthcoming. But neither Mr. Hoover nor Senator Borah foresaw that a session designed for farm relief was destined to be perverted by a wholesale tariff steal for the benefit of industrialists.

Senator Borah's chagrin was apparent when he offered a resolution to restrict tariff revision to the agricultural and directly related schedules. It was beaten by a margin of one vote. Mr. Hoover, although treading softly, has thrown out hints that he is not in sympathy with the goings-on in the rooms of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee, where the bill was hatched and incubated. There is considerable trepidation among Republican leaders as to what Mr. Hoover will do with the bill, and there may well be. The President will have before him a general tariff bill, of which, according to Senator Smoot's figures, only 15 cent of the increases are in the agricultural ...ules. Maj. Lambert dates his participation in the sport that grew into an industry from the Second International Balloon Races, held in St. Louis in 1907. While in Europe the year before, he qualified as a balloon pilot, receiving license No. 17 from the Federation Aeronautique Nationale. He returned to St. Louis to officiate at the balloon race.

Taught by Orville Wright.

Three years later, as president of the Aero Club of St. Louis, he supervised the Kinloch Park aviation meet, at which 12 airplanes, 90 per cent of the total number in the United States, participated. In the same year he purchased a Wright model "B" biplane and was taught to fly by Orville Wright. His airplane pilot's license, issued in 1910, was No. 61.

Motion pictures made during the Kinloch Park meet gave the name "The Death Reel" to a band of nine flyers, Lambert among them, who participated. Five of the number later died in airplane accidents, two are still alive and nothing is known of the other two.

Maj. Lambert's first airplane was specially equipped with two gas tanks to enable him to indulge in "cross-country" flying. The two tanks, with a combined capacity of about 30 gallons, enabled him to fly from Kinloch Park to the Glen Echo Country Club, and have a little left over for safety. Such was the efficiency of 1910 airplanes.

Took Mexicans Riding.

One of his last experiences as a pilot was during the fall of 1914, when he was employed by Thomas Benoist, who manufactured airplanes here for a time. One murky fall day, Johnson was instructed to take up a plane and demonstrate it for a delegation representing the Mexican Government.

He put five pints of ether in the gasoline tank, to insure the motor's performance, and with that assistance was able to take off and, dodging haystacks, subscribe a mile circle about the airport. The visitors were pleased with the performance and contracted for a large order of planes for their Government. Before they left St. Louis the Government was overthrown in a revolution and the order was canceled.

Johnson began flying in 1911, about the time when the present "tractor" type of planes were succeeding the old "pusher" models.

Has Front Yard Landing Field.

Vandivort is another to whom flying has become a memory. Now, at 45, he spends his time on a farm near the State Park at Montauk, Mo., but friends quote him as saying he "will never let farming interfere with his fishing."

A long meadow in front of his farmhouse is kept mowed and free of obstructions to permit his former aviation associates to land in his front yard when they feel inclined to hunt or fish with him, and on the roof of his home, directed toward the sky, is a large sign which reads, "Van's Ranch."

Vandivort in 1911 drifted into Kinloch Park while it was the center of flying activities in St. Louis and soon was engaged in building and flying aircraft. Like Johnson, he was for a time employed by Thomas Benoist as mechanic, demonstration and exhibition pilot.

Last May, when the Gardner Cup Air Races were held at Parks Airport Vandivort came to St. Louis and spent a day trying to persuade some one to take him into the air in a dual control machine. No one would take him up. They said it was too dangerous.

Uses Motorcycle Engine.

When he was 15, Bredouw, with two friends, built a Demoiselle monoplane, powered with a motorcycle engine. It could hop off the ground but was incapable of sustained flight. A few months after it was constructed, in the spring of 1912, the plane was wrecked and young Bredouw went "on the road" with Ralph E. McMillen, one of the old Curtiss exhibition pilots who has since been killed.

That fall Bredouw started construction of a biplane with ailerons mounted between the wings. He planned to put a motorcycle engine in it, but in his eagerness to try it out, persuaded a friend who worked in a garage to borrow an automobile and a 300-foot rope with which to tow the plane. ... blocks the glider ... the asphalt, pulled ... automobile. Trotzky's Experiences in New York

...ence with Lenin, keeping him informed of events in America, but ... all her reports were filtered ... prism of her extreme "left-... of the moment, he necessarily received a most distorted ... of American happenings.

One topic of her letters to Lenin concerned my own activities. Lenin's replies furnished multiple proofs of the misinformation that Mme. Kolontai had supplied him. In their fight against me, the "spigones" have not hesitated to make free uses of these utterances of Lenin's, although he himself subsequently withdrew them.

After her return to Russia Mme. Kolontai from the very outset took an extreme Left position, not only toward me, but toward Lenin himself. She waged many a fight against the "Lenin-Trotzky" regime—only to bow gracefully, later on, to the Stalin regime.

American Socialism.

The United States socialist party was extremely backward in its ideas, even in comparison with our European "social-patriotism." Nevertheless, the presumptuous superiority of the American press—which at that time was still the press of a neutral country—found its echo in the tone even of the American socialists.

Men like Hillquit posed as a sort of American socialist uncle who at the critical moment would descend upon Europe and settle all the differences between the various factions of the Second International.

American socialism makes me smile even today. Immigrants, who in the old days in Europe had played some part in the movement, soon lost the few ideas and theoretical postulates they had brought with them, in the rough and tumble scramble for success. There is an extensive category of successful and semisuccessful physicians, lawyers, dentists, engineers and other professional men in America who divide their valuable leisure between concerts of European musical stars and the American Socialist Party.

Their political wisdom is made up of the scraps and shreds they picked up in undergraduate days. As they almost all have their own motor cars, they are invariably elected on all the principal committees, subcommittees and delegations of the Socialist Party.

Only Varieties of Babbitt.

These men, eager for petty honors, leave their impress on American socialism. The authority of Wilson is greater in their eyes than that of Marx. In reality they are only varieties of Mr. Babbitt, who supplement their other Sunday recreations, after chasing the dollar through the week, by indulging in flabby talk about the future of humanity.

These men live in small national clans, where a solidarity of ideas serves chiefly as a cloak for business connections. Every clan has its chieftain, who usually is the Babbitt with the largest bank balance. They are extremely tolerant toward any ideas whatsoever, so long as those ideas do not threaten their traditional authority, and still less—Heaven preserve us!—their personal prosperity. The Babbitt of all Babbitts is Hillquit, the ideal leader of such a socialism as this.

My first contact with these men was enough to imbue them with an ineradicable hatred for me. My sentiments toward them, if less violent, did not err on the side of sympathy. We belong to two different worlds. In my view they were the rottenest part of the world which it was my mission to fight.

Debs Sincere, but a Romanticist.

Eugene Debs, among the elder generation, stood out sharply by reason of that unquenchable fire of socialist idealism that burned in his breast. A sincere revolutionist, but a romanticist and preacher, not a political leader, Debs was an easy prey for men by far his inferiors.

Hillquit's main achievement was to keep Debs on his left wing without breaking his business friendship with Gompers on the right. Personally, Debs was a charming man. He used to embrace me when we met. When the Babbitts declared their blockade against me, Debs took no part in it, he simply stood aside in sorrow.

Upon arriving, I had joined the editorial staff of the Russian daily Novy Mir (New World), where, besides Bukharin, there were also Volodarski (later assassinated by the Social Revolutionists near Petrograd), and Tchudnovski, who was wounded near Petrograd and afterward killed in the Ukraine.

That paper became the center of the revolutionary internationalist propaganda. There were Russian-speaking men in all the national federations of the Socialist party. Many members of the Russian federation, on the other hand, could speak English. Thus the ideals of Novy Mir made great headway among American labor.

Revolution Interrupted Plans.

The Mandarins became uneasy. Intriguing and caucusing began against this European newcomer, who did not understand American psychology, and was endeavoring to foist his fantastic theories upon American workingmen.

The struggle soon assumed a most acute form. In the Russian federation the "tried and tested" and "meritorious" (or emeritus) Mandarins were promptly ousted. In the German federation, old Schluter, editor of the Volkszeitung and friend of Hillquit, was slowly losing influence, to the advantage of the younger editor, Lore, who was one of us.

The Letts were entirely on our side. The Finnish federation were coming our way. We were making good progress with the powerful Jewish federation, with its imposing 14-story building, whence daily issued forth 200,000 copies of the Forward, with its musty flavor of sentimental, middle-class socialism, always ready for any treason to the cause.

We were less successful with the Americans, properly speaking, among whom socialism was weak at best, and our left wing brand particularly so. The English-speaking Socialist paper, The Call, was conducted on lines of empty pacifist neutralism. We decided to found a militant Marxist weekly. The plans were all laid but were interrupted by the outbreak of the Russian revolution.

Effect on Russians in New York.

After a mysterious silence of the telegraph for two or three days, reports began to come through of the revolution in Petrograd—reports full of confusion and chaos. All the different racial groups in New York were full of excitement. They hoped—and yet sarcely dared hope.

The American press rather lost its bearings. Reporters, interviewers, writers, besieged the offices of the "Novy Mir." For a short space our paper became the focus of New York journalism. The telephone was busy every minte with inquiries from socialist editors and organizations.

Meetings of unprecedented size and strange temper were held all over New York. The news that the Red Flag had been hoisted over the Winter Palace brought storms of cheers everywhere. Not only Russian immigrants, but their children who knew barely 10 words of Russian, came to those meetings to breathe this strange new air of Russian freedom.

When I telephoned to my wife from the newspaper office that there was a revolution in Petrograd, the younger boy was in bed with diphtheria. He was 9 years old, but had known for a long time that the revolution meant amnesty, return to Russia, and a thousand other good things. He jumped up and started dancing in his bed to celebrate the revolution. His convalescence began from that moment.

Just a Glimpse of U. S.

We were anxious to leave by the first possible steamer. I ran about to the Consulate for papers and visas. We embarked March 27 aboard the Norwegian steamer "Christianofjord." Our sendoff was marked with flowers. We were going to the country of the revolution.

It would be a gross exaggeration to say that I had grown to know New York, I had become too quickly engrossed in the affairs of American Socialism for that. The Russian revolution came too soon. All I had had time to catch was perhaps something of the rhythm of the monster called New York.

I departed for Europe with the feelings of a man who had just caught one glimpse of the interior of the workshop where the future fate of mankind will be hammered out. I consoled myself with the thought that some day I should return. Even today I have not abandoned that hope.

BROWNS H...

Karl Eitel ...

EASY WINNER IN THE FORT DEARBORN HANDICAP

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24. — Karl Eitel, Alderman John J. (Bath House) Coughlin's big chestnut thoroughbred, returned to the form that carried him to victory in the Fairmonut Derby in May, and today won the $10,000 Fort Dearborn handicap, blue ribbon event of the closing day of the Hawthorne track meeting.

The sleek son of Polymelian-Pinkie not only won the feature, but made a show of a field which included Montanaro, which was second three lengths back, and Easter Stockings, the Audley Farm's fine filly, which finished third, a length behind Montanaro.

Takes Early Lead.

Karl Eitel jumped into the lead at the start and made every post a winning one, and wound up by turning in the best race by any western three-year-old this season. He raced the mile and a furlong in 1:40 2-5, nearly a full second better than the track record hung up by Easter Stockings on the Crusader Handicap early in the week.

The race was worth $12,000 gross, of which $9,475 went to Karl Eitel's owner. He was the favorite and rewarded his backers with $5.04 to win, $4.08 to place and $3.24 to show. Montanaro was worth $7.28 to place, and $2.56 to show, while Easter Stockings' show price was $2.54.

Montanaro and Martin Flynn followed Karl Eitel for the first half mile, then Martie Flynn moved into second place, as they went into the stretch Martie Flynn and Montanaro regained second place where he remained to the finish. Martin Flynn was a distant fourth behind Easter Stockings, and Blackwood and Brown Flash, the other starters, never were contenders.

Easy for Jones.

Karl Eitel was ridden by Jockey Robert Jones who had little to do except sit still and hold the colt's head up. Second place was worth $2000 to M. Deatherage, Montanaro's owner. Easter Stocking brought the Audley Farm $1000 and fourth was worth $500 to Stuyvesant Peabody, Martie Flynn's owner.

SCHULTE AND MANUSH IMPROVING STEADILY

Heine Manush and Fred Schulte, the injured parties in the recent collision at Sportsman's Park are both up and around and improving steadily. Neither will suffer any ill effects from the crash, though Manush's nose is not as straight as it might be and Schulte's right eye maintains its sunset color-effect.

DEMOCRATS PLAN FIGHT ON PRESENT TARIFF RATES

Decide to Supplement Attack on Proposed Higher Levies—To Meet Daily to Draft Amendments.

G. O. P. THREATENS TO DEFER ACTION

Issues Warning in Case Filibuster Occurs—First Step in Retreat, Says Harrison.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The Democrats today disclosed plans to broaden the attack on the tariff bill as revised by Republican members of the Finance Committee.

The minority disclosed it intended to direct its fight against not only many proposed higher levies but also against scores of existing rates which it regards as unduly high and in need of revision downward.

Amendments will be prepared on virtually every industrial item in the measure. Details of these and other phases of the Democratic program will be worked out next week at daily meetings of the eight Democrats on the Finance Committee.

From the Republican camp word went out during the day that the tariff would be kept constantly before the Senate until disposed of, with no other business allowed to displace it.

Threatens Delay for Year.

In addition, high Republican councils issued a warning that, should a filibuster develop endangering passage of the proposed legislation at the special session or early in the regular session, a move would be made to defer action on the tariff for another year.

Under no circumstances, it was said, would the Republicans countenance any effort to postpone action far into the regular session beginning in December or until the time of the spring primary campaign for the next congressional elections.

Attributing this warning to Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, said the move was not surprising.

"This administration and those who have brought forth this tariff iniquity," he said, "are beginning to feel the aroused indignation of the American people.

"They have retreated step by step and now are only looking for some excuse to extricate themselves from the position they have taken."

Instead of a filibuster, Harrison said, there "is going to be orderly, reasonable debate." The Democrates, he added, would "not be bludgeoned by coercion or threats from a full and frank discussion of every item and a record vote on the various increases in present duties and on amendments that will be offered upon the floor."

"First Step in Retreat."

"That is what the country wants and that is what the Democratic minority will demand," he asserted, adding that the measure was indefensible, that the Republican leadership was beginning to see this and that "Leader Watson's move is the first step in the retreat."

Chairman Smoot said today that as one time saver he would not make an extensive speech in explanation of the bill at the opening of debate, but would confine his remarks to a brief explanation of proposed changes as each revised paragraph was reached.

He said he formally would introduce the bill Sept. 4, and ask that consideration begin the following day. The Senate probably will recess on the first meeting day out of respect to Senator Tyson, (Dem.), Tennessee, who died early today.

Earl Deane Claims Amount on Contract Though Owner Sold Delmar-Union Corner.

A suit to collect $56,200 as commission in an alleged $309,000 real estate transfer was filed in St. St. Louis Circuit Court yesterday by Earle Deane of the Earle Deane Realty & Mortgage Co., Kirkwood, against James H. Jones, 222 East Argonne drive, Kirkwood.

Deane's petition alleged that he contracted with Jones last March to sell for him a two-story store and apartment building on the southeast corner of Delmar and Union boulevards. It was also stated that Deane was to receive 5 per cent of the first $20,000 of the selling price, 3 per cent of any sum received in excess of that amount and that if he sold the property for more than $210,000, he was to receive one half of all in excess of this sum.

The petition states that Jones sold the property July 23, last, to L. M. Klein and has refused to pay the commission although the contract is alleged to have stipulated its payment regardless of who negotiated the sale.

Three St. Louisans in 'Early Bird' Club; Only 500 Persons in World Eligible

Aviation Experiences of Maj. Albert B. Lambert, B. Russell Shaw and Robert R. Johnson When Flying Was in Infancy.

THE men and women who flew during the infancy and early adolescence of aviation have formed a club, with only 500 persons in the world eligible for membership. When the last of them dies, the club will die also, for no one who is not already qualified can ever join the ranks of "The Early Birds."

Of the possible membership, 300, including five Missourians, have been enrolled since last December. Maj. Albert Bond Lambert, dean of St. Louis aviation, is a member. So are B. Russell Shaw, and Robert R. Johnson of St. Louis, Clifford C. Vandivort of Montauk, Mo., and Homer L. Bredouw of Kansas City.

Other names that loom large in the aviation industry and in areonautical history, are on the membership lists. Orville C. Wright, one of the builders of the first practical airplane. Glenn H. Curtiss, who first commercialized American aviation. Greely S. Curtis, who glided with Lilienthal in 1895. "Casey" Baldwin, who flew the airplanes of the Aerial Experiment Association. Ivy Baldwin, America's oldest living aeronaut. Walter R. Brookins, Wright stunt pilot, who made the vertical bank famous. Igor I. Sikorsky, Clyde V. Cessna, Anthony H. G. Fokker, Grover C. Loening, Edward A. Stinson and Guiseppe Bellanca, airplane manufacturers.

Even Lindbergh Barred.

Although most of the members have remained in aviation, there are notable exceptions. On the other hand, many noted flyers, including the most famous of them all, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, are not and never can be members. They didn't start flying soon enough.

Only persons who flew during the first 13 years of dynamic flight or before, are eligible to join. The rules of the club provide: "Membership shall be limited to those who piloted a glider, airplane, gas balloon or airship prior to Dec. 17, 1916 . . . except that nationals of countries other than the United States engaged in the World War must have met the foregoing conditions prior to Aug. 4, 1914."

The 1916 date is the thirteenth anniversary of the Wright brothers' first successful flight at Kittyhawk, N. C. The 1914 date is to exclude the flood of war-time aviators, who flew, not because they were pioneers in "avigation" as it was then called, but because their countries were at war.

Ernest Jones' Idea.

Ernest Jones, now chief of the Information Division, United States Department of Commerce, was the originator of the organization. As early as 1922, he discussed it with Shaw, but until December, 1928, the club was nothing but an idea. Then Jones wrote to a number of the old-timers and arranged a meeting in Chicago. Shaw presided. He was the only one present who knew any parliamentary law. The club was organized and officers were elected.

Since then, applications have poured in, accompanied by newspaper clippings, photographs, affidavits and other evidence that the applicants flew before Dec. 13, 1916.

Maj. Lambert dates his participation in the sport that grew into an industry from the Second International Balloon Races, held in St. Louis in 1907. While in Europe the year before, he qualified as a balloon pilot, receiving license No. 17 from the Federation Aeronautique Nationale. He returned to St. Louis to officiate at the balloon race.

Taught by Orville Wright.

Three years later, as president of the Aero Club of St. Louis, he supervised the Kinloch Park aviation meet, at which 12 airplanes, 90 per cent of the total number in the United States, participated. In the same year he purchased a Wright model "B" biplane and was taught to fly by Orville Wright. His airplane pilot's license, issued in 1910, was No. 61.

Motion pictures made during the Kinloch Park meet gave the name "The Death Reel" to a band of nine flyers, Lambert among them, who participated. Five of the number later died in airplane accidents, two are still alive and nothing is known of the other two.

Maj. Lambert's first airplane was specially equipped with two gas tanks to enable him to indulge in "cross-country" flying. The two tanks, with a combined capacity of about 30 gallons, enabled him to fly from Kinloch Park to the Glen Echo Country Club, and have a little left over for safety. Such was the efficiency of 1910 airplanes.

After the start of the World War, Lambert formed the Missouri Aeronautical Society to train balloon pilots for the Government. He was commissioned a Lieutenant and placed in charge of a balloon camp at Grand boulevard and Meramec street.

Establishes Bridgeton Field.

Under his direction 354 pilots received their training there. Maj. Lambert had received two promotions and was a Major when discharged in 1919.

A year later he established a flying field at Bridgeton, which was used for the International Air Races in 1923, and which is now Lambert-St. Louis Field. Maj. Lambert sold it to the city at cost.

He was chairman of the Technical Committee of the Temporary Airport Commission, resigning last year following a disagreement with city officials over technical matters.

Johnson hasn't flown an airplane since 1914, when he quit because "there wasn't any money in the business." For three years prior to that time he had acted as an exhibition and demonstration pilot, drawn to that field because of the element of novelty and risk.

Now he is sales manager for a coffee company, 40 years old, and lives at 4309 Delmar boulevard. He has been up in the air since 1914, but never as a pilot.

Took Mexicans Riding.

One of his last experiences as a pilot was during the fall of 1914, when he was employed by Thomas Benoist, who manufactured airplanes here for a time. One murky fall day, Johnson was instructed to take up a plane and demonstrate it for a delegation representing the Mexican Government.

He put five pints of ether in the gasoline tank, to insure the motor's performance, and with that assistance was able to take off and, dodging haystacks, subscribe a mile circle about the airport. The visitors were pleased with the performance and contracted for a large order of planes for their Government. Before they left St. Louis the Government was overthrown in a revolution and the order was canceled.

Johnson began flying in 1911, about the time when the present "tractor" type of planes were succeeding the old "pusher" models.

Has Front Yard Landing Field.

Vandivort is another to whom flying has become a memory. Now, at 45, he spends his time on a farm near the State Park at Montauk, Mo., but friends quote him as saying he "will never let farming interfere with his fishing."

A long meadow in front of his farmhouse is kept mowed and free of obstructions to permit his former aviation associates to land in his front yard when they feel inclined to hunt or fish with him, and on the roof of his home, directed toward the sky, is a large sign which reads, "Van's Ranch."

Vandivort in 1911 drifted into Kinloch Park while it was the center of flying activities in St. Louis and soon was engaged in building and flying aircraft. Like Johnson, he was for a time employed by Thomas Benoist as mechanic, demonstration and exhibition pilot.

Last May, when the Gardner Cup Air Races were held at Parks Airport Vandivort came to St. Louis and spent a day trying to persuade some one to take him into the air in a dual control machine. No one would take him up. They said it was too dangerous.

Uses Motorcycle Engine.

When he was 15, Bredouw, with two friends, built a Demoiselle monoplane, powered with a motorcycle engine. It could hop off the ground but was incapable of sustained flight. A few months after it was constructed, in the spring of 1912, the plane was wrecked and young Bredouw went "on the road" with Ralph E. McMillen, one of the old Curtiss exhibition pilots who has since been killed.

That fall Bredouw started construction of a biplane with ailerons mounted between the wings. He planned to put a motorcycle engine in it, but in his eagerness to try it out, persuaded a friend who worked in a garage to borrow an automobile and a 800-foot rope with which to tow the plane.

For three blocks the glider scraped along the asphalt, pulled by the automobile. But it did not rise. The driver turned the car around. "Faster," said Bredouw. Suddenly the glider lifted. It soared, diving from side to side, to an altitude of more than 50 feet. Then, with the automobile running at 20 miles an hour, the biplane dived into the branches of an oak tree, 40 feet above the ground. The plane fell to the ground, a wreck. The pilot, however, suffered only minor injuries.

Plane Designer in War.

During the war Bredouw went through the School of Military Aeronautics at Massachisuetts Institute of Technology, was sent overseas and assigned to the airplane design division of the technical section, doing test work. He still has a reserve commission in the air corps, and a transport pilot's license. He is president of the Bredouw-Hilliard Aeromotive Corporation, an airplane service and supply concern at Kansas City.

"I can remember very well," he wrote the Post-Dispatch, "in the early days when pilots had no instruments by which to fly, and before a ship would be taken into the air, we would tie one end of a rope to the ship and the other end to a tree with an ice scale hooked in between. The motor would be turned up and if it pulled a certain number of pounds, the ship was ready to take the air.

"I can remember two years that the sole topic of conversation was whether or not it was possible to loop the loop in an airplane and the opinion of most pilots was that it was impossible."

Builds Glider in 1908-09.

The spring that Shaw was 14, a group of business men in Coshocton, O., where he lived, constructed an airship. Young Shaw spent every minute possible watching the construction. He had never seen an airplane, but newspapers and magazines printed occasional pictures of the ungainly heavier-than-air craft.

"I saved all the pictures I could get my hands on," he recalled. "That winter, 1908-09, I built a glider. I still had never seen a plane. All of my measurements were scaled from photographs. When I got a picture of a man standing beside a plane, I assumed his height to be five feet eight inches, and measured the picture of the plane accordingly.

"I put a motor in my glider and got it off the ground. Then I rebuilt it. My folks moved to Newark, O., and there I built another flying machine. They moved to Indianapolis and I shipped it there, and in April, 1910, entered the first air meet held in the United States. The Wright brothers flew there and Walter Brookins broke the world altitude record by ascending 6175 feet. My plane got off the ground in short hops, but didn't really fly."

He Opens Scrap-Book.

Here Shaw opened a scrap-book of clippings and pointed at a newspaper photograph. "Maj. Lambert was official observer of that flight," he continued. "Look, there's a picture of him lying on his back on the ground. That thing like a telescope with numbers on the side is an altitude measuring device. He's measuring the altitude on Brookins' flight."

In 1913, Shaw built a monoplane for the Russian Government. He had his own plane company then, although he was only 20 years old. He received $7000 for the craft. That year he built his first flying boat.

In 1915 he entered the employ of the Wright brothers as a draughtsman. Flying was becoming more general then. The Wrights had retreated from their earlier position, when they wrote every flyer in the country, threatening to sue anyone who constructed or flew an airplane.

During the war Shaw served as director of flying at McCook Field, Dayton, O., and after the war went to New York and organized the Aeronautical Instrument Co., to manufacture a rate-of-climb instrument he had invented, the vertimeter. The instrument was used in great numbers by the Imperial Japanese Government, for which he served as consulting engineer for some time.

In the course of a long period of service with the Aero Club of America and its successor, the National Aeronautic Association, he handled the Pulitzer air races at Detroit, Dayton and St. Louis. He then went to the Ford Motor Co., in charge of air lines and airports, built an airport at Grand Rapids, Mich., and opened up air communication between Detroit and Grand Rapids. In 1927 he established his own company for the design of airports.

Trotzky's Experiences in New York

dence with Lenin, keeping him informed of events in America, but as all her reports were filtered the prism of her extreme "leftness" of the moment, he necessarily received a most distorted view of American happenings.

One topic of her letters to Lenin concerned my own activties. Lenin's replies furnished multiple proofs of the misinformation that Mme. Kolontai had supplied him. In their fight against me, the "epigones" have not hesitated to make free uses of these utterances of Lenin's, although he himself subsequently withdrew them.

After her return to Russia Mme. Kolontai from the very outset took an extreme Left position, not only toward me, but toward Lenin himself. She waged many a fight against the "Lenin-Trotzky" regime—only to bow gracefully, later on, to the Stalin regime.

American Socialism.

The United States socialist party was extremely backward in its ideas, even in comparison with our European "social-patriotism." Nevertheless, the presumptuous superiority of the American press—which at that time was still the press of a neutral country—found its echo in the tone even of the American socialists.

Men like Hillquit posed as a sort of American socialist uncle who at the critical moment would descend upon Europe and settle all the differences between the various factions of the Second International.

American socialism makes me smile even today. Immigrants, who in the old days in Europe had played some part in the movement, soon lost the few ideas and theoretical postulates they had brought with them, in the rough and tumble scramble for success. There is an extensive category of successful and semisuccessful physicians, lawyers, dentists, engineers and other professional men in America who divide their valuable leisure between concerts of European musical stars and the American Socialist Party.

Their political wisdom is made up of the scraps and shreds they picked up in undergraduate days. As they almost all have their own motor cars, they are invariably elected on all the principal committees, subcommittees and delegations of the Socialist Party.

Only Varieties of Babbitt.

These men, eager for petty honors, leave their impress on American socialism. The authority of Wilson is greater in their eyes than that of Marx. In reality they are only varieties of Mr. Babbitt, who supplement their other Sunday recreations, after chasing the dollar through the week, by indulging in flabby talk about the future of humanity.

These men live in small national clans, where a solidarity of ideas serves chiefly as a cloak for business connections. Every clan has its chieftain, who usually is the Babbitt with the largest bank balance. They are extremely tolerant toward any ideas whatsoever, so long as those ideas do not threaten their traditional authority, and still less—Heaven preserve us!—their personal prosperity. The Babbitt of all Babbitts is Hillquit, the ideal leader of such a socialism as this.

My first contact with these men was enough to imbue them with an ineradicable hatred for me. My sentiments toward them, if less violent, did not err on the side of sympathy. We belong to two different worlds. In my view they were the rottenest part of the world which it was my mission to fight.

Debs Sincere, but a Romanticist.

Eugene Debs, among the elder generation, stood out sharply by reason of that unquenchable fire of socialist idealism that burned in his breast. A sincere revolutionist, but a romanticist and preacher, not a political leader. Debs was an easy prey for men by far his inferiors.

Hillquit's main achievement was to keep Debs on his left wing without breaking his business friendship with Gompers on the right. Personally, Debs was a charming man. He used to embrace me when we met. When the Babbitts declared their blockade against me, Debs took no part in it, he simply stood aside in sorrow.

Upon arriving, I had joined the editorial staff of the Russian daily Novy Mir (New World), where, besides Bukharin, there were also Volodarski (later assassinated by the Social Revolutionists near Petrograd), and Tchudnovski, who was wounded near Petrograd and afterward killed in the Ukraine.

That paper became the center of the revolutionary internationalist propaganda. There were Russian-speaking men in all the national federations of the Socialist party. Many members ofthe Russian federation, on the other hand, could speak English. Thus the ideals of Novy Mir made great headway among American labor.

Revolution Interrupted Plans.

The Mandarins became uneasy Intriguing and caucusing began against this European newcomer, who did not understand American psychology, and was endeavoring to foist his fantastic theories upon American workingmen.

The struggle soon assumed a most acute form. In the Russian federation the "tried and tested" and "meritorious" (or emeritus) Mandarins were promptly ousted. In the German federation, old Schluter, editor of the Volkszeitung and friend of Hilliquit, was slowly losing influence, to the advantage of the younger editor, Lore, who was one of us.

The Letts were entirely on our side. The Finnish federation were coming our way. We were making good progress with the powerful Jewish federation, with its imposing 14-story building, whence daily issued forth 200,000 copies of the Forward, with its musty flavor of sentimental, middle-class socialism, always ready for any treason to the cause.

We were less successful with the Americans, properly speaking, among whom socialism was weak at best, and our left wing brand particulaly so. The English-speaking Socialist paper, The Call, was conducted on lines of empty pacifist neutralism. We decided to found a militant Marxist weekly. The plans were all laid but were interrupted by the outbreak of the Russian revolution.

Effect on Russians in New York.

After a mysterious silence of the telegraph for two or three days, reports began to come through of the revolution in Petrograd—reports full of confusion and chaos All the different racial groups in New York were full of excitement. They hoped—and yet sarcely dared hope.

The American press rather lost its bearings. Reporters, interviewers, writers, besieged the offices of the "Novy Mir." For a short space our paper became the focus of New York journalism. The telephone was busy every minte with inquiries from socialist editors and organizations.

Meetings of unprecedented size and strange temper were held all over New York. The news that the Red Flag had been hoisted over the Winter Palace brought storms of cheers everywhere. Not only Russian immigrants, but their children who knew barely 10 words of Russian, came to those meetings to breathe this strange new air of Russian freedom.

When I telephoned to my wife from the newspaper office that there was a revolution in Petrograd, the younger boy was in bed with diphtheria. He was 9 years old, but had known for a long time that the revolution meant amnesty, return to Russia, and a thousand other good things. He jumped up and started dancing in his bed to celebrate the revolution. His convalescence began from that moment.

Just a Glimpse of U. S.

We were anxious to leave by the first possible steamer. I ran about to the Consulate for papers and visas. We embarked March 27 aboard the Norwegian steamer "Christianofjord." Our sendoff was marked with flowers. We were going to the country of the revolution.

It would be a gross exaggeration to say that I had grown to know New York, I had become too quickly engrossed in the affairs of American Socialism for that. The Russian revolution came too soon. All I had had time to catch was perhaps something of the rhythm of the monster called New York.

I departed for Europe with the feelings of a man who had just caught one glimpse of the interior of the workshop where the future fate of mankind will be hammered out. I consoled myself with the thought that some day I should return. Even today I have not abandoned that hope.

Karl Eitel

EASY WINNER IN THE FORT DEARBORN HANDICAP

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24. — Karl Eitel, Alderman John J. (Bath House) Coughlin's big chestnut thoroughbred, returned to the form that carried him to victory in the Fairmonut Derby in May, and today won the $10,000 Fort Dearborn handicap, blue ribbon event of the closing day of the Hawthorne track meeting.

The sleek son of Polymelian-Pinkie not only won the feature, but made a show of a field which included Montanaro, which was second three lengths back, and Easter Stockings, the Audley Farm's fine filly, which finished third, a length behind Montanaro.

Takes Early Lead.

Karl Eitel jumped into the lead at the start and made every post a winning one, and wound up by turning in the best race by any western three-year-old this season. He raced the mile and a furlong in 1:40 2-5, nearly a full second better than the track record hung up by Easter Stockings on the Crusader Handicap early in the week.

The race was worth $12,000 gross, of which $9,475 went to Karl Eitel's owner. He was the favorite and rewarded his backers with $5.04 to win, $4.08 to place and $3.24 to show. Montanaro was worth $7.28 to place, and $2.58 to show, while Easter Stockings' show price was $2.54.

Montanaro and Martin Flynn followed Karl Eitel for the first half mile, then Martie Flynn moved into second place, as they went into the stretch Martie Flynn and Montanaro regained second place where he remained to the finish. Martin Flynn was a distant fourth behind Easter Stockings, and Blackwood and Brown Flash, the other starters, never were contenders.

Easy for Jones.

Karl Eitel was ridden by Jockey Robert Jones who had little to do except sit still and hold the colt's head up. Second place was worth $2000 to M. Deatherage, Montanaro's owner. Easter Stocking brought the Audley Farm $1000 and fourth was worth $500 to Stuyvesant Peabody, Martie Flynn's owner.

SCHULTE AND MANUSH IMPROVING STEADILY

Heine Manush and Fred Schulte, the injured parties in the recent collision at Sportsman's Park are both up and around and improving steadily. Neither will suffer any ill effects from the crash, though Manush's nose is not as straight as it might be and Schulte's right eye maintains its sunset color-effect.

MISS WILLS WINS U. S. TITLE SIXTH TIME

Beats Mrs. Watson In Final in Hardest Battle Since 1925

Associated Press Sports Writer.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 24.—In the hardest final round battle she has had since the English star, Kitty McKane, forced her to an extra set in 1925, Helen Wills won the National Women's Tennis championship for the sixth time before a gallery of 6000 at the West Side Stadium this afternoon.

Once again the stubborn challenge came from the hard-driving racquet of an English player and it was only after 40 minutes of hotly-fought and thrilling tennis that the queen of the courts overcame the gallant Mrs. Phoebe Watson of England's Wightman cup team by scores of 6—4, 6—2.

With this final victory went undisputed singles supremacy over the feminine players of the world for the third time in as many years as the Berkeley, Cal., tennis marvel previously this season has won the open championships of England and France.

Mrs. Watson Wins in Doubles.

Mrs. Watson's sterling tennis and sportsmanship gained their reward in the all-English final for the national women's doubles championship, as she and Mrs. Peggy Saunders Michell, the British titleholders, came from behind to beat out their compatriots, Mrs. Phyllis Covell and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd-Barron by scores of 2—6, 6—3, 6—4. The match was well played and held the fans in their seats until the final shot.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Michell had won their way into the final by defeating the Anglo-American combination of Betty Nuthall and Helen Jacobs by scores of 9—11, 6—3, 6—4. Although particip ting in her third hard match of the day, Mrs. Watson was a dominating figure in the doubles final, her well-aimed drives causing as much trouble for Mrs. Covell and Mrs. Shepherd-Barron as they had done for Miss Wills.

Taking six games from the champion, Mrs. Watson captured three times as many as Miss Wills' five opponents in the earlier rounds the week had been able to win together. In last year's final, Helen Jacobs tallied only three games and the previous season Betty Nuthall, the promising English youngster, could do no better than five.

So surprising a battle did Mrs. Watson put up that the stadium

By James M. Gould

Just what kind of meat the Browns have been feeding on that they have thus suddenly become so great is not known, but whatever it is, the diet is entirely successful. Yesterday, for the third day in succession, they not only defeated the Yankees, but they made it three shut-outs in a row. In the 27 Yankee innings of the series they have failed to score a run. On Thursday, Sam Gray beat them, 10—0; Friday George Blaeholder turned a 5—0 trick and yesterday, following in the efficiency footsteps of his pitching predecessors, Alvin Crowder gave them but two hits and defeated them, 4—0.

Shutting out the Yankees three times in a row has been, for years one of the things that just wasn't being done. When they came here for this series, they had not suffered two coats of whitewash in sucession; now, they are well plastered with three.

Only Two Hits Off Crowder.

Crowder was almost a perfect pitcher. The two hits made off him were both from the bat of Gene Robertson, a St. Louisan and a former Brownie. Gene doubled in the first and singled in the ninth. The other Yanks just spent the afternoon walking up to the plate and, like the good old King of France, "Marching Back Again." The only other Yank to see first during the game was Lazzeri who walked in the second.. Beginning with the third inning, Crowder retired 20 men in succession. Robertson's ninth-inning single put a stop to his record.

Crowder Drives in Two Runs.

A second-inning three-hit attack on Sherid by the Browns netted three runs, the component parts being a pass to McGowan, a single by Kress and doubles by Manion and Crowder. In the sixth, they scored their fourth and final tally on a double by Badgro and singles by McGowan and Kress.

The Yankees now have not scored in 29 innings. The last run they counted came in the seventh inning of their final game in Chicago.

Crowder used a slow ball with deadly effect throughout. His control was of the best as the issuance of one pass might indicate. He struck out but one.

"Red" Kress was the most frequent hitter of the Browns, sending singles to left his first three times up.

Browns Tighten Hold on Third.

The victory served to strengthen the hold of the Browns on third place as Cleveland could only break even with Boston. The Browns now have a full game margin for the "show" position.

About 9000 fans saw the great pitching of Crowder.

There was little action in the first inning. With one out, Robertson doubled but Dickey filed to McNeely and Ruth popped to O'Rourke. The Browns were hitless and runless in their half.

In the last of the second, the Browns went places and did things. McGowan walked as a starter and Kress singled him to second. O'Rourke fanned and Melillo filed out but Manion's short fly to left was good for a double and McGowan scored. Crowder then hit one off the screen for another two-bagger and Kress and Manion scored.

Crowder, pitching perfectly refused to let a Yank see first in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth seventh and eighth, while the Browns failed to bother Sherid again until the sixth. With one out in this inning, Badgro doubled to left. McGowan's single False Alarm.

THE crepe hangers already are after major league baseball. We read in a Chicago publication devoted to baseball and racing that "Baseball Is $600,000 in the red." With moans to the effect that the "game is dying as a result of this most disastrous year.

"Estimated losses for eight clubs of the two circuits are as follows," the article continues: "New York Giants $200,000, Yankees $150,000, Cincinnati $125,000, Chicago White Sox $100,000, St. Louis Browns, $100,000, Boston teams $50,000 each and Washington $25,000 The Phillies, the Robins and the Cardinals will break about even. It seems evident that baseball has passed its peak."

Sam Breadon chirped cheerfully in the face of this swan song. "You can't expect to clean up in baseball unless you're running within reach of the leaders most of the season," he commented, "but we will

R. F. Hoyt's "Imp" Wins Motorboat Gold Cup Event

By the Associated Press.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 24.—Cutting through the rough waters of Shrewsbury River at nearly 50 miles an hour the Imp, owned and driven by Richard F. Hoyt of New York, today whipped a field of America's fastest speed boats to win the twenty-seventh Gold Cup classic—symbolic of national motor boat supremacy.

Taking the lead at the start of the first of the three 30-mile heats over the rectangular course, the supremacy of the white and gold single step hydroplane never once was threatened. Picking up speed gradually, Hoyt drove his $25,000 speedster over the first 30 miles in 35:09.04 for an overage speed of 50.489 miles hour. During the sixth lap of three miles he sped around the course at 51.965 miles an hour, for the fastest time of the day.

Last Two Laps Slower.

The second heat was taken a little slower, but The Imp remained mistress of the battle at every turn. She covered the second dash around the course in 38.37 for an average speed of 46.57 miles per hour. Then in the third heat, with Sam B. Dunsford's Scotty pushing him during the early stages, Hoyt again stepped his water demon up to an average speed of 48.829 miles an hour for an elapsed time of 37:16:56.

Scotty, entered by Sam Dunsford of Wolfeboro, N. H., failed to finish the last heat, but piled up enough points in the first two phases of the race to take down second place.

Third went to Gerald Holbrook's radically constructed Jersey Lightning, which finished third in the second heat and second in the final dash, after dropping out of the opening 30 miles when her rudder was lost.

EDDIE HELD WINS CANADIAN GOLF TITLE

By the Associated Press.

ALBERTA, Sask., Aug. 24.—Eddie Held of New York, formerly of St. Louis, captured the Canadian amateur golf championship today, defeating his fellow townsman, Gardiner White, 3 and 2, in the final round.

Held succeeds C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont., who won the title last year but was eliminated in the first round of match play in the present tournament. At the same time Held becomes the first player from the United States who ever has succeeded in winning the Canadian amateur crown.

Held, the tournament medalist, led White, a middle-aged millionaire, by 3 up at the end of the first 18 holes and then was content to hold his advantage, finally ending the match on the thirty-fourth green.

BOBBY JONES PAIRS WITH CHICK EVANS AND WINS A MATCH

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24.—Bobby Jones, national amateur champion, making his first public appearance in the west in a golf match, paired with Charles "Chick" Evans, of Chicago, to defeat George Von Elm, of the Tam O'Shanter Club, Detroit, and Jack Neville, of Delmonte, Cal., by the decisive margin of 6 and 5, in an 18-hole exhibition today.

PECKINPAUGH SIGNED TO PILOT INDIANS FOR 1930 SEASON

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Americans, returned today from a two months European trip and his first official act was to sign Manager Roger Peckinpaugh to manage the team in 1930 at a substantial increase in salary.

BROWNS EQUAL SHUTOUT RECORD AGAINST ONE CLUB

SHUTTING out the New York Yankees three times in the last three days, the Browns have tied the all-time major league record for consecutive shutouts against one club.

The record for successive victories without allowing the opposition to score is six, made in the National League, and held by the Pittsburg club of 1903, which blanked New York twice in a row, Boston three times and the Philadelphia once before being scored against. In the American League, Cleveland's club of the same year defeated New York once and Washington three times without a run being scored by the opposition.

To the Yankees goes the empty honor of equaling an American League record for failing to score in three straight games. In the National League the mark for successive times shut out is six.

SCHMELING GUARDED AS HE SAILS FOR HOME

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—A bodyguard of huskies turned out today to protect Max Schmeling, heavyweight, and see him safely aboard the liner Albert Ballin, bound for Germany.

Despite all efforts to safeguard Schmeling whose triumphant quest of the vacant heavyweight title was cut short by controversies with his deposed German manager, Arthur Buelow, and the New York Athletic Commission, one small and completely awed messenger boy almost broke up the party. The boy almost succeeded in serving a summons on Schmeling in one of the many legal tangles now involving the boxer.

The husky guards, bolstered by friends who had come to see Schmeling off on his vacation to the homeland, formed a ring about the fighter and managed to keep the boy away. The youngster, however, shoved the legal papers into the hands of one of the party. The summons was hastily dropped and finally pigeon-holed in a fence surrounding the pier.

TILDEN DEFEATS LOTT AND WINS CUSHMAN TROPHY

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 24.—Playing before a hostile crowd, Big Bill Tilden displayed enough of his great fighting spirit to overcome George M. Lott Jr., of Chicago, in a long five-set tennis match here today in the final of the 13th Newport Casino invitation tournament. This victory gave the old master permanent possesion of the Cushman trophy, as he won his first two legs in 1926 and 1927. The scores were 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3.

The doubles final was won by Lott and Johnny Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., when they won 34 of the 64 games played. They played with Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Pa., and his brilliant partner, J. Gilbert Hall of Orange, N. J. The scores were 6-4, 7-9, 4-6, 11-9, 6-2

Tilden made a furious start against Lott, winning the first four games, three by love. The young Davis Cup player started on a court which contained a large slippery area and he was worried by the unsafe footing. After slipping several times he changed to spiked shoes and when these failed to keep him upright, he removed them and played in his socks until the sun dried the court.

Hisses for Former Champion.

The veteran's famous "Cannon Ball" service became erratic in the second set and Lott broke through his service twice. Several times during this set Tilden was displaced by unfavorable decisions made by line men and he delayed the play to chide them.

Before the final set started the referee called on the crowd, overwhelmingly for Lott, to refrain from applause. Tilden served a love in the first game and Lott held the second. During this game many of the crowd disregarded the referee's request and applauded Lott. Tilden turned and glared at the stands for almost a minute.

TOM ARMOUR WINS WESTERN OPEN TITLE WITH RECORD SCORE OF 273

PROFESSIONAL'S TOTAL SEVEN STROKES UNDER PAR; BEATS MARK SET BY ARTHUR SMITH IN 1905

By Paul R. Mickelson
Associated Press Sports Writer.

OZAUKEE COUNTRY CLUB, MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 24.—Tommy Armour, the fighting Scot whose professional shingle hangs from the Tam O'Shanter Club of Orchard Lake, Mich., romped away with the Western open golf championship today with 273 strokes, the lowest 72-hole medal score in the tournament's 29 years of play.

Horton Smith, the blond wizard from Joplin, Mo., was runnerup. Eight strokes to the rear; Willard Hutcheson, youthful assistant pro. from Glencoe, Ill., was third with 283, while Gene Sarazen, the tempermental Italian from Flushing, L. I., landed fourth with one stroke more. Other leaders were Joe Kirkwood, transient trick shot artist, and Frank Walsh of Appleton, Wis., Wisconsin open champion, 285; Jock Hutchison of Chicago, "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn of New York and the veteran Harry Hampton of Chicago, each of whom turned in 288 totals.

Armour All the Way.

Armour, one of the greatest manipulators of irons golf has ever known topped the brilliant field from start to finish. All told he was seven under par for his four rounds and his total eclipsed the Western open record, established by Arthur Smith of Columbus, O., on the Cincinnati golf club course, 24 years ago, by five healthy swats.

He was not only brilliant but steady. Only nine times did he require more than par for a hole and these mistakes he more than retaliated for by bagging 16 birdies His best round was the 65, five under par, which won him the tournament medal Thursday. His subsequent scores were 71-69 and a 68 today.

Here is record-breaking championship card:

Par out—454 353 443—35.
Par in — 444 435 344—35—70.

FIRST ROUND.
Out—445 243 443—33
In—443 424 344—32—65.

SECOND ROUND.
Out—544 543 453—37.
In—543 434 344—34—71—136.

THIRD ROUND.
Out—455 443 443—35.
In—344 435 344—34—69—205.

FOURTH ROUND.
Out—444 442 353—33.
In—444 434 354—35—68—273.

Smith's Putting.

Putting ruined Smith's hopes of catching Armour today. His drives were spectacular and his pitches far but his putting touch was lost when a mediocre stroke on the carpet would have given him birdies and at least par, forcing him to take a pair of 71's today, which was good golf but hardly his type on such a course as Ozaukee. Only once did the "Joplin Ghost" get started during the tournament and that was during the qualifying test when he scored a 66 to be second to Armour for the medal. On his second round he got a 73, his worst score of the week.

Willard Hutchison, the only dark horse to land well up among the leaders shot four steady rounds—69-72-71-71—while Sarazen lost what was a good opportunity to overtake Smith by losing his temper on the putting green. Yesterday Gene became angered when he missed a 10-foot putt and was so enraged that he took three more before the pellet dropped. Today he did the same thing on the par three ninth hole where he got a five when steadiness would have given him a four anyway.

Defending Champion Blows Up.

Abe Espinosa of Chicago, the defending champion, blew up today to take 76 strokes in the morning and 77 in the afternoon for a 295 total.

In addition to Armour, five shattered par today—Densmore Shute, Canton, O.; George Smith, St. Paul; and Mehlhorn, who got 69's; Ed Dudley of Concordville, Pa., who scored 67 and Walter Murray, Gary, Ind., pro, who topped the day with a 66. Murray's score, which came in the morning, pushed him into a tie with Horton Smith, at the three-quarter way mark, but he blew up in the afternoon, taking a 79 for a 289 total. Another feature was a hole in scored by Dick Nelson of Indianapolis, on the par three, 145 yard, sixteenth hole.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 24.—Sam L. Jenny of Highland, Ill., was crowned amateur doubles champion at clay birds here today, when he broke 191 out of 200 targets, while shooting at two birds, thrown at one time.

More than 300 participated in the event, and none was close to the Illinois gunner.

The doubles event was the feature shoot on the closing day of the thirtieth Grand American Handicap tournament here.

Rush Razee of Denver, took the professional doubles trophy with a score of 179. Mrs. J. E. Wright of Atlanta, Ga., took the women's doubles championship with a score of 60 out of 100 targets. G. T. Peter of Phoenix, Ariz., shot a 96 to win the international hundred and C. A. Spanhorst of Jefferson City, Mo., made a 96 to win the consolation prize.

COAST LEAGUERS DRAW 66,000 FOR 8 GAMES

Business is not all to the bad in the Pacific Coast League as evinced in the recent series between San Francisco and the Missions, when 66,000 persons witnessed the eight games. This as an average of 9300 a day. The set included one double-header.

Jennings Goes Into Final Round In Park's Tourney

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Players from Los Angeles, Chicago and Washington, D. C., will do battle for title honors in the final round of the seventh annual National Public Parks Tennis championships here tomorrow. George J. Jennings Jr., Chicago southpaw, defending champion, will oppose Jack R. Delara, Los Angeles, University of Southern California player, in the final round of the singles event.

In the final round of the men's doubles Charles and Leo Lejeck of Chicago will oppose Jennings and Robert B. Considine of Washington, D. C.

Delara fought an uphill battle to reach the final round of the singles today. He defeated Jack Castle, veteran Buffalo player, in one of the semifinal singles encounters, 6—8, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2, 6—1.

In the other singles semifinal, Jennings smashed his way to a straight-set victory over Considine, 8—6, 6—3, 6—1. The semifinal round match of the doubles between the Philadelphia team of Milford J. Meyer and Gus G. Amsterdam, and the Chicago-Washington combination of Jennings and Considine resulted in a thrilling five-set battle, 6—3, 6—1, 3—6, 6—8, 7—5. Jennings and Considine took the final game of the deciding set by good overhead shots.

In the other doubles semifinal the Lejeck brothers eliminated the Cleveland team of Harold Bartel and Bert Clough in straight sets, 8—6, 8—3, 7—5. Steadiness enabled the Chicago team to win the victory.

"Queen" and the Hand That Rules the Tennis World

Miss Helen Wills, whose wonderful playing in the U. S. Championships against American and foreign players again proved her to be in a class alone. Miss Wills has the most powerful forehand of any woman player in the game, as her strong looking hand and wrist indicate. Her backhand (above, at right) is almost impenetrable.

WRAY'S COLUMN

make money this year. I have just had some figures assembled which seem to indicate the gentleman from Chicago has bats in his belfry. Of the 65 games we played on the road this year, including the last Brooklyn series, we have played to few more than 10,000 paid admissions MORE than we had last year, at this time.

Weak Teams Improving.

"WE HAVE some good games on our away-from-home schedule still remaining and those at Chicago will be before packed stands. We see no basis for pessimism. The league is looking up, wfth Philadelphia going well and Brooklyn making a stronger showing. Boston is doing well and will make money, I think. Last year and for three years before we had a ding-dong fight right up to the last game and naturally everybody profited.

"Miller Huggins told me that he was having a good season on the road, this year, and that Cleveland and Detroit were enjoying fine crowds. He also said he expected his club to make money, instead of losing it, on the season.

"Our home customers have fallen away about 25 per cent but that was to be expected. We can't have them storming the gates when we are not going well. There is nothing wrong with baseball, except that the races have not been attractive. With one team far out in front in each major organization, attendance is sure to suffer some."

Weak Heart.

THE real cause of the weak circulation of money among the major league clubs, this year, is that the heart of baseball has slowed up—the New York clubs have fallen down. When New York clubs are up there in striking distance or leaders, golden streams are pumped throughout the entire major league baseball world. The weak clubs depend upon New York money for subsistence. When New York yawns at its ball clubs, the leagues feel instant reaction. That is happening now.

It's not a healt..ful situation and some day something will be done about it. One wonders what Cincinnati, for example, with a population around 500,000 is doing in a league with New York, with several million to draw from. Newark, across the river from New York, has a greater population than Cincinnati.

Circuit Changes Inevitable?

THERE are plenty of incongruities in the baseball map today and it is not reasonable to suppose the present plan will endure. It is not too wild a guess to visualize ONE major league of eight clubs some day, made up of population centers more nearly equal. At this time the only arrangement equalizing population centers would seem to include something like this:

EAST: Boston and environs (with 2,000,000 population), New York and Brooklyn (two teams), Philadelphia. WEST: Chicago (two teams), Detroit and Cleveland.

Because the two baseball leagues are operating separately, circuit changes will be hard to effect. But if the big clubs find the burden of carrying the small towns too great, some day they will kick over the traces and a new alignment will be made.

Pro vs. Amateur.

THE little tangle between our own "pro" and amateur golfers over "who is who, and who is it," in local circles, is finding a national echo, it appears. Robert Harlow, who "ghost writes" for Horton Smith, tells of an "indignation meeting," held Friday night, in a hotel lobby at Milwaukee, following the day's play in the Western Open tourney, Smith is made to say: "A lot of tournament playing professionals here put the United States Golf Association on the pan, especially some of the officers. The boys object to having the amateurs classified as "Mister" and themselves as plain Smith or Brown; but personally I don't give a rap. I know a lot of fine professionals who do not have to be classified, they have no inferiority complexes which require that they should be designated as 'amateurs.' I believe, however, that at the National Professional Championship some of the boys will make official complaint."

The professionals should worry. Even if the amateur wins the tournament, all he gets is the privilege of being called "Mister," plus a 14-karat gold medal. The "pro" gets the coin.

The fact of the matter seems to be that here and there throughout the country the amateurs are getting a bit too strong for the professionals and naturally the jealousy is not in regard to a social inferiority complex, but one of playing ability.

Aside from a dozen or so stars, professionals devote less time to playing than many amateurs. Many professionals' playing time is so hampered by instruction requirements that they get very little chance to play.

Not So Good.

A BOXING publication, undertaking to classify the heavyweight fighters, has picked George Godfrey, giant Negro, as No. 1 for his list, which names the following candidates in order, after Godfrey: Tommy Loughran, Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Ernie Schaaf, Young Stribling, etc.

That's an indictment of the heavyweight fight division. Godfrey has done little to deserve especial mention. He is a messy fighter and size and weight are his principal assets. He has been unable seriously to damage many opponents. This year he trimmed a bunch of quesos, such as Francisco Cruz, Jimmy Byrne, Farmer Lodge and Chuck Wiggins. He is rough and foul, at times, not a clean puncher or a fighter who looks well in action.

However: The second best, Loughran, is uninteresting in a different way. Sharkey is a powderpuff boy and Schmeling is green.

Max looks the best of the lot, today, and appears the only one, possibly excepting Schaaf, who shows prospects of improvement.

CRABBE RETAINS A. A. U. HONORS IN SWIM MEET

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—A slim miss from New York City and a tall blonde boy from Honolulu skimmed over Flashhacker Pool today to establish two records in the National A. A. U. swimming championships.

To little Eleanor Holm of the New York Women's Swimming Association, went the honor of setting a new time in the 110-yard backstroke for women. She led an imposing field to the finish in the time of 1 minute, 22 1-5 seconds to crack the old mark of 1 minute, 30 1-5 seconds. Her effort also bettered the 100-meter record of 1 minute, 22 3-5 seconds.

Before the powerful strokes of Clarence "Buster" Crabbe, Outrigger Canoe Club star, the 300-meter medley world's mark became a figure of the past. He covered the course in 4 minutes, 12 1-5 seconds to retain the title he won here last year. The former record was 4 minutes, 14 3-5 seconds.

Crabbe's victory today assured him individual high point honors in the meet.

Morris gave out eight hits but had sterling support all the way.

SPORT SALAD

by Ed Danville

Limerick Luke's Luck.

THERE was a young fellow named Nation
Who went on a well-earned vacation,
Where mosquitos for weeks
In his hide sank their beaks
As though he were some filling station.

They sent for their friends and relations
To come and get in the rations
They syphoned and drilled
Till their tanks were all filled
And now he's fed up on vacations.

Too True.

IF you want to make a vacation a success pitch your tent by the side of a brook, preferably one that purls and then vacate before the mosquitos arrive in force.

There is a superstition that mosquitos don't like pennyroyal. They love it. We have never seen a mosquito that wouldn't fly a mile for a nip of its favorite weed.

Hearing that coal oil was bad for mosquitos we took along a can and put it in the tent. That night the mosquitos would come around and lap up a tankful and then go off and refuel lightning bugs with it.

The chigger or chigre if you're that particular is another little feller that looks forward with delight to the vacation season. You may not be unduly sensitive but those babies can certainly get under your skin.

Next to the anticipation the best part of a vacation is when you get back on the job and tell the boys what a grand and glorious time you had.

And why not? After telling about it for a week or so you almost believe it yourself.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUER GETS 15 HITS IN A ROW

George Quellich, outfielder of the Reading club of the International League, established a new record for successive hits when he rapped out 15 straight safeties, good for a total of 31 bases. He drove in a dozen runs. The major league mahk for successive hits is 11, made by Tris Speaker, now manager at Newark.

In the safe smashes were five homers and a double.

MISS WILLS WINS TENNIS TITLE FOR SIXTH STRAIGHT TIME

rang with applause and outright cheers. Her every winning shot was hailed with excited acclaim while those of Miss Wills were met with polite handclapping. The contest from start to finish provided the unusual spectacle of an American crowd at an American championship frankly and vociferously taking the side of the foreign player against the American titleholder.

In many of the long, deep court interchanges which marked the match and held the gallery enthralled, Mrs. Watson's strokes carried more sting and accuracy than those of the champion. Peppering the corner and playing to Miss Wills' backhand whenever possible, Mrs. Watson again and again was able to work her out of position and finish the rally by punching over a placement.

The wonderful sharp-shooting of the English player is indicated by the fact that she scored 12 placements in the two sets to Miss Wills' five. The strong service of the American girl proved an important factor, producing three aces in the opening set at moments when they were needed badly.

The greatest excitement came soon after the match began and again shortly before the end.

How the Battle Waged.

Almost before the gallery could realize what was taking place, Mrs. Watson, starting service, had won the opening game. Hitting out boldly she had taken the offensive and was forcing Miss Wills into costly errors. Bedlam broke loose when, after dropping the next two games, she pierced the champion's famous cannon-ball service, then forced ahead on her own delivery.

But here Miss Wills rallied her forces with the cool courage that marks the champion and pouncing upon those sizzling drives, she sent them whistling back so fast that Mrs. Watson dropped three games in a row. Still fighting, she pulled out her next service game, but Miss Wills raced through the next at love for the set.

In the longest game of the match, Mrs. Watson took her service after Miss Wills had reeled off the first two of the second set, but the champion was playing at top speed now. Five of the first six games in this set went to Miss Wills and then, with almost certain defeat staring her in the face, Mrs. Watson came up from love-40 to win her service and get a moment's reprieve.

At match point for the fourth time in the next game, Miss Wills again was beating back before she finally outmaneuvered her foe for the deciding point.

ATHLETICS END LOSING STREAK, WINNING, 5-2, FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—The losing streak of the Athletics was halted at four here today, when Rube Walberg held the White Sox to seven well-scattered hits as the Athletics pounded the veteran Ed Faber for enough hits to win, 5 to 2. Grady Adkins pitched the last inning for the Sox. It was Walberg's seventeenth victory of the season.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Giants defeated the Pirates in both games of a double-header here today by 14 to 8 and 7 to 6. Despite the hard hitting two Giant pitchers turned in complete games, Fred Fitzsimmons in the opener and Carl Hubbell in the nightcap. Ed Roush's homer with one on in the ninth decided the second game.

BRAVES FIELD, Aug. 24.—Sylvester Johnson's strong right arm and the devastating bat of Ernesto Rudolfo Orsatti gave the Cardinals a victory over the Boston Braves this afternoon in the third game of the series. Sylvester, the Scandinavian, held the Braves to four hits and Ernesto, the Italian, started two productive rallies and the Red Birds finished with three runs, while the Boston chaps were able to fashion only one off the slants of Johnson.

Sylvester ran into a worthy opponent in Sox Seibold. The former Philadelphia American League hurler was a master pitcher for six innings, holding the Red Birds to one lone safety. But in the seventh Ernesto Rudolfo slapped a single to right for the second St. Louis safety, scurried to third on Bottomley's single to the same field and scored when Chick Hafey punched a single to left.

High ended this rally with a line drive to Seibold, whose throw to Maranville doubled Bottomley off second.

The Winning Runs.

Seibold breezed through the eighth inning as though that uprising had been a mere accident, but in the ninth, after Holm had been put out, he had to face Orsatti again. This time the little Italian slammed a double against the fence in left center. Frankie Frisch, wearing his red undershirt in deference to Boston's cool weather also cracked a double to center and Orsatti raced home. Bottomley followed with a triple against the right field wall and Frisch scored.

Bernie Cantwell was called from the bull pen to relieve Seibold and struck out Hafey and got High on a foul to end the inning, but the Cardinals had one more run than they needed.

Johnson was in rare form. Jimmy Welsh opened the game with a foul blown double that fell out of Bill Sisler's reach in left center and Maranville singled to right sending Welsh to third. Richbourg's long sacrifice fly to Orsatti sent Welsh home with the Braves one run.

Bell opened the second with a single, but was still on first when the inning ended, Johnson turning back 13 batters in succession before Welsh singled to center for the fourth and final Boston safety. The only Brave to see base after that was Maranville, who was safe on Bottomley's fumble with two out in the ninth.

Redbird Notes.

Charley Gelbert worked out before the game and indicated that he soon would be ready for duty again.

Bill Sherdel, who pitched a masterpiece against the Dodgers last Tuesday, will face the Braves tomorrow in the series final. Bennie Cantwell, a right-hander, or Percy Jones, a southpaw, will be his opponent.

Threatening weather held down the attendance but about 7500 persons attended this afternoon.

Hafey doubled against the fence in left center with one gone in the second and took third on High's sacrifice fly, but Maguire made a fine catch of Wilson's line drive to end the inning.

Orsatti played just behind the infield for Maranville in the third inning and was able to rob the Rabbit of a hit by taking his low liner on the run.

Taylor Douthit, after playing through 1928 and all previous games of this season without missing an inning, was forced to the bench because of an injured left hand. Taylor fell when trying for a shoestring catch yesterday and reported today with the hand badly swollen.

MASTERMINDING FOR THE CUBS

—By Burris Jenkins Jr.

Cubs' Pilot Tells Secret Of Success—There Is None

All You Need Is Some Real Players, McCarthy Explains in Talk About Team.

"I Wish All Men Were as Easy to Get Along With As Hornsby," Manager Comments.

By BURRIS JENKINS JR.

Copyright, 1929, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.

EVEN "master minds" must shave occasionally.

"Excuse my lather," said Joe McCarthy, the spectacularly successful manager of the Chicago Cubs, as he greeted his visitor yesterday afternoon, "but these double-headers even raise the hair on your chin."

"You're not worrying, are you?" we began, seated safely out of range of the shaving brush. Mr. McCarthy uses a short grip on his shaving brush, but takes a full swing. "Aren't you confident that the race is in?"

"There are a lot of ball games to win yet. It won't be cinched for a couple of weeks yet—after the series with the Pirates—that's where the race will end. But of course, we're confident—just as confident as the first day of the season. The boys have been sure of this pennant all year."

"I suppose Chicago is all steamed up over the possibility," we suggested.

The answer burst enthusiastically from a two-inch layer of lather. "Why, do you know the other day we turned away 20,000 people who couldn't find seats! And I mean 20,000, not just a guess. The park seats about 41,000, but we could have filled it twice if the public were sure of seats. You never saw such a town for enthusiastic fans. For three years now we have bro' en all annual attendance records—over 1,000,000 a year. That's more than the Yankees, with an a traction like Ruth, have been able to do. This y[illegible] we will break all records—I think we have already; 1,400,000 possibly. The sight of a pennant brings them in. You know we've been near the top for two years now. Last year we won 91 games—that's enough to win a pennant most of the time."

The next question was the obvious one. "How do you do it? What's the secret?"

The man who about three years was manager of the Louisville club of the American Association—a man who had never "been in the big leagues" and yet took hold in Chicago and in that short space of time out-master-minded the stereotyped ones and brought the Cubs up on top, was at this moment engaged with that dangerous portion just below the lower lip. So that his answer accurately reported was,

"Mpff gotph hapth plahth soapth."

No Secret at All.

SHORTLY afterward he interpreted this into "There's no secret. Real players. Pitchers. Morale. Fairly strict training. And baseball. That's all there is to it."

"But didn't you find it different coming from the minors to the majors——?"

"Why?" interrupted Joe McCarthy, leveling his safety at us. "People seem to forget that big league players weren't born in the big leagues. They all have to come through the minors, don't they? The boys in the minors know all the fellows in the majors just as well as they know themselves. Why, I was playing in the American Association and the International League when guys like Babe Ruth were only kids. Naturally I know more baseball and more people playing baseball than those who haven't been in it as long."

"Did you play when you went to Louisville as Manager?"

"For a year or two, while my playing was still up to scratch. But it's very hard to be a player-manager. For one thing, a manager shouldn't play unless he is better than anybody else on the team. You can't blame a player for not listening to you when you bawl him out for swinging at bad ones and you may be doing it yourself. I remember having trouble with an iron head. I called him everything I could think of in criticizing his batting mistakes. But his comeback was, "Well, I don't see you doing so well yourself," and the truth of the matter was that I was batting only .252 and he had an average well up in .300.

"They are two separate jobs, playing and managing. The best ball players, as you know, don't always make the best managers. And the other way round, I guess." McCarthy won the pennant for Louisville and was called to the Cubs.

"How do you account for the fact that you have taken two or three men discarded by other clubs as 'trouble makers' and made stars out of them for Chicago?" we asked.

"I don't know," McCarthy answered, candadly enough. "There's no trouble at all in our outfit as it stands now. No hard feeling or dissension. Arguments? Sure, but all about baseball—a missed hit-and-run signal and that sort of thing. But the argument is forgotten after we leave the ball field. I couldn't ask for a better spirit than we've got. Everybody working together—for the other fellow."

"What happens," we inquired, "when you can't whip a man into line?"

Praises Hornsby Highly.

"THE answer is simple" said McCarthy, "we separate. If I can't do anything with him, there's nothing else to it. He goes." And he snapped one of the grimmest jaws, freshly shaven, ever seen off or on a ball field. You wouldn't think a master mind could be impressive without his shirt But Joe McCarthy would be impressive with less, for behind his jaw and his steady eye he has a mean-looking right bicep.

"Hornsby?" we queried.

"There never was a better fellow," McCarthy said bluntly. "I wish all ball players were as easy to get along with. I would like a whole team of Hornsbys The players all like him and he is a great help to the team."

The Master Mind of the Middle West was chary of distributing too much praise to Hornsby.

"You can't give any one on the team all the credit. Each one of 'em deserves credit. Cuyler? No he hasn't made any trouble. I suppose it was just a disagreement between him and Bush. And yet I have never heard him say one word against Bush. He's been right in there trying with us all the time.

"Alex? Why bring that up? That whole thing has been discussed and is past. Alex and our policy of training couldn't agree, that's all. As I say, when we can't agree, there's nothing to do but separate.

"Are we very strict about training? No, I wouldn't say so. But we have to have rules. Train travel interferes some with sleep, so we don't have much card playing. Just a little game of rummy or pinochle. But no gambling. There's a rule agains that. Why? We just think it best. There are card-playing clubs that win pennants as well as non-playing teams. It's a small matter."

The last touch that convinced us that the new master mind was entirely human was when he shook down a heaping teaspoonful of what looked like bicarb of soda before starting for dinner. "No, it's not soda," he explained, "but it's for the same thing. During double-headers I always chew too much tobacco. Try it some time, after a double-header."

McCarthy explained how he happened to sign a youngster like 13-year-old Sam Solomon to the major leagues. "Well, of course, we have hopes that he'll develop into a real big leaguer, but right now we want to give the junior circuit where the kid was picked the best player and manager for the year a boost. You know the kids have been wiring and writing in steadily about him. It's a great thing for the youngsters to know that one of them is actually signed in the big leagues."

Hockey Club to Change Hands, Winter Garden to Be Remodeled

Frank D. McDonald Jr., who was the business manager of the St. Louis Flyers, the ice hockey team which represented this city in the American Association last winter, told the Post-Dispatch by telegraph yesterday that he would not be connected with the hockey club this winter, but that ice hockey would be played at the Winter Garden and St. Louis would have a team in the American Association.

McDonald's telegram follows:

"St. Louis Hockey Club has been reorganized and refinanced but manager has not been appointed. Moose Jamieson of Duluth, has been considered for coach but definite arrangements have not been completed. He would be a good man for the place due to his long experience. He was connected with Cleveland Club from 1908 until purchased by Duluth. I will not be personally connected with the team. Changes are to be made in the rink so that seats will be more comfortable and new faces will be added to the team to strengthen it. Understand that negotiations are now on for several good players."

The reference to Jamieson follows an inquiry into a report from Duluth that Jamieson had been named coach of the hockey club, which dispatch from that city quoting Tom Ernst, secretary of the league, to that effect.

Rumors have been current here through the summer that radical changes would be made in the management of the hockey club next season.

No arrangements have been made for new control of the club, and who the interested party, or parties, is has not been announced. It was said that an entire new company will be in control, one which will be able to bring the players to this city needed to put the club on a par with other teams in the circuit.

One of the chief causes for the financial losses suffered by the company last winter, aside from the poor showing of the team, was the poor seating arrangement at the Winter Garden.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TULSA, Ok., Oct. 24.—The American Hockey Association probably will continue as a six-club organization, despite efforts throughout the summer to raise the membership to seven teams, William Grant, part owner, manager and coach of the Kansas City Plamors and secretary of the league, indicated here today.

Grant has been negotiating with interests at Columbus, O.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis., and Oklahoma City, Ok., one of which was to have entered as the seventh league club, but none will be ready for a franchise this winter.

"All four cities seem interested in entering the league, and Chicago—Paddy Harmon, to be exact—is, too, but none of them has plans far enough along at this time to make it appear that they will be ready for a franchise this year. One of the four will be ready for the 1930-31 campaign, however," Grant said.

The league membership will be Tulsa, 1928-29 champions; Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and St. Louis.

CUBS PUT ON FOUR-RUN RALLY IN NINTH TO BEAT PHILLIES

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—The Cubs defeated the Phillies 9 to 6 here this afternoon as their parting shot at the East for the season. A four-run assault on Koupal and Willoughby in the ninth prevented the home team from registering a 6 to 5 victory. The Cubs won 31 and lost only 13 in their tours along the Atlantic seaboard this season.

The Cubs gained one and one-half games as the Pirates lost twice to the Giants. The Chicago margin now is 12½ games.

Frank O'Doul helped the Phillies gain a lead by smashing out his 26th home run and a double. Art Nehf started for Joe McCarthy, but Ken Penner and Mike Cvengros finished out the string for him. Cvengros got credit for the victory, his second of the series.

The Cubs boarded a train immediately after the game for a dash to Cincinnati where the Reds will be met in two games tomorrow.

DODGERS AND REDS SPLIT DOUBLE-HEADER

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Cincinnati divided its last two games in the East here today, triumphing over Dazzy Vance in the first game by 5 to 2, but falling a victim to the shut-out pitching of Ray Moss by 3 to 0 in the second. The even split gave Brooklyn the series, two victories to one.

Jakie May held the Dodgers to four hits in the first game, while infield errors weighed heavily against Vance. Bissonette's home run with one on in the first inning of the second contest started Ash on the way to defeat.

This was the second successive shutout for Moss, who blanked the Cardinals earlier in the week.

Browns Hand Yankees Third Straight Shut-Out

put him on third and he scored when Kress singled to left for his third hit in succession. O'Rourke filed out and, after Melillo's single off Sherid's glove had filled the bases, Manion forced Melillo.

Ruth Pops Out for 3rd Time.

In the seventh, Dickey died on a fly to McNeely and Ruth, for the third time in the game, went out on a high fly—this time, a foul to Blue. Melillo took Comb's smash after it had nicked Crowder's glove and threw him out. The "General" was still in command. Sherid was just as efficient in the last portion.

Gehrig was first up in the eighth and again proved helpless with an easy roller to Melillo. Lazzeri tapped slowly to O'Rourke and Blue made a great stop of O'Rourke's mean throw to retire the runner after which Melillo took a possible hit away from Durocher with a remarkable stop behind second and a perfect throw to first. For the Browns in the eighth Badgro struck out and McGowan raised a fly to short left, of which Durocher made a startling running catch. Kress then tapped to Sherid.

Koenig batted for Sherid in the Yanks' ninth and filed to McNeely. Cedric Durst then batted for Byrd and Crowder took his bunt and threw him out. Robertson then singled to left for his and the Yanks' second hit of the game, but it was all over when Dickey lifted a fly which Badgro caught after a short run.

Brownie Notes.

When the Yankees say their 1929 farewell to St. Louis today they will present as their pitcher Ed Wells, who is a southpaw and once was with Detroit. Howley will oppose Wells with his only left-handed type—Walter Stewart.

It might be a good rule for all managers to put their catchers in third place in the batting order. Dickey of the Yanks and Cochrane of the Athletics bat in that spot and though their teams have been going poorly of late, they are still one-two in the league.

The Cardinals once had Roy Sherid, the Yankees' starter yesterday. The story goes that Sherid signed a contract with them while he was a minor and that Judge Landis later declared him a free agent. He also was a football star at Albright Collge in Pennsylvania and was rated one of the best kickers in the East.

After today's game the Browns will have three off days. They resume with the Detroit Tigers Thursday, are idle Friday and finish their home stay with games Saturday and Sunday. There is no major league baseball here Labor day. The Browns are in Cleveland and the Cardinals in Chicago.

Ruth blames the scribes' home run pool for his batting slump. He had a chance to drive in a run in the first yesterday, but popped to O'Rourke for the third out.

O'Rourke put on a big-time juggling act with Durocher's grounder in the second, but handed the ball to Melillo in time to force Lazzeri at second and end the inning.

Manion's double in the second which scored the first St. Louis run in the second was a sort of pop-affair which Ruth couldn't get to but Crowder's which followed, was a high drive off the screen in right.

McGowan can cover plenty of ground. In the third, he wandered in fairly close to second to take Dickey's short fly.

Just two Yanks got on in the first eight innings. Robertson doubled in the first and Lazzeri walked in the second.

Durocher made a marvelous stop of Kress' grounder in last of the fourth but was in no position to throw "Red" out on his second hit in a row. The same Durocher then started a double-play on O'Rourke's bounder.

When the sluggers slump—they slump. Gehrig, in his first two shots at Crowder's pitching, hit back to Crowder and fouled out to Blue. To match him, Ruth popped out twice.

The Yankees on the bench began to yell at Crowder in the sixth when the count was three-and-one on Sam Byrd. The laugh was reversed when Byrd popped out.

Eleven Brownies had been retired in a row after their second-inning rally when Badgro shot a double to left in the last half of the sixth.

Kress likes Sherid's pitching. The red-headed shortstop of the Browns hammered three singles to l ft his first three times up.

Jim Dandy broke slowly, was taken very wide all the way, closed with a rush in the stretch and won going away. Mokatam broke last, handled his weight well, moved up fast on the outside, but bumped badly right at the finish. He was probably short. Caruso, well up, had no mishaps. Sarazen II had early speed, but tired.

Odds: Jim Dandy, win 30-1, place 12-1, show 6-1; Mokatam, place 5-2, show 6-5; Caruso, show 4-5.

SARATOGA RACE TRACK, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Over a muddy track and under Johnny Maiben's excellent ride, C. Earl's Jim Dandy, a Western colt, and an added starter, scored in the Grand Union Hotel stakes here today, defeating the cream of the Eastern 2-year-olds.

Jim Dandy paid 30 to 1.

The Rancocas Stable's Mokatam, also an added starter, was second and W. R. Coe's Caruso third. The race carried a net value of $13,725.

H. P. Whitney's Wichone and his Prometheus were scratched because of the heavy going and Jim Dandy, Mokatam, Peto and Mr. Sponge were added. Mokatam carried 130 pounds and ran a great race.

The start was good. Mokatam was away last and Jim Dandy next to last. Hi-Jack was away flying and led for five furlongs, then there was a general closing up on the leader. In the final sixteenth Mokatam and Jim Dandy both closed with a rush on the outside and Jim Dandy, with a pull in the weights, won in a drive by half a length. Mokatam beat Caruso three lengths for the place.

Jim Dandy's time for the three-quarters was 1:15 4-5.

The two-year-old situation in the East was not cleared as regards a possible champion of that division by the running of the Grand Union Hotel Stakes at Saratoga yesterday. A muddy track kept the event from being the medium for furnishing an accurate line on the juveniles as it resulted in the Whitney pair, Whichone and Prometheous being withdrawn, while Jim Dandy, from the C. Earl Stable, an added starter, reveled in the going and held Mokatum, a Rancocas Stable colt, safe for the big end of the prize. There were four added starters, Peto and Mr. Sponge being added as well as the two that finished first and second. Caruso, winner of the United States Hotel Stakes in the mud, was third, but does not particularly lose cast by this defeat as another meeting of these colts over a fast track might see another result.

At Hawthorne, however, the meeting closed with a possible champion among the three-year-olds looming up strongly in Karl Eitel, winner of this year's Fairmount Derby. The Cuchulin colt, which performed so well in that event, and which recently ran an impressive race behind My Dandy in the Hawthorne Handicap after a considerable layoff from racing, won so decisively yesterday that there was no doubt as to his superiority. Giving away weight to many in the field, he forced the pace all the way and broke the track record for a mile and furlong, which he ran in 1:49 2-5. Many admirers of this handsome chestnut will be sorry to learn that he is not eligible for the Lawrence Realization, the principal three-year-old stake fixture of eastern autumn racing. This is made more regrettable when the probable field for the race begins to shape up. The Nut, on the dry, and African, in the mud, appear to be the best choices among the easterners, according to an eastern writer. That Karl Eitel would have a chance there is no disputing.

Horses With the Jumps.

Dancing Fool, a well-known old plater which raced with great success over the Maryland and Canadian tracks a few seasons back, winning quite a few purses for his then owner, Benny Chapman, has been turned into a steeplechaser and ran second in a race over the jumps at Saratoga Friday. He was a very sturdy racer on the flat, winning over the toughest of tracks, but was a bad post actor. He was sold with a view of making a hunter of him, but his trials over the obstacles were so impressive that it was decided to race him as a steeplechaser. It is said he was found to be a "veritable jumping demon." Another sour-tempered horse, Nicholas, the gray racer from which much was expected as a three-year-old, has also been made a jumper and ran in the same event with Dancing Fool Friday, showing much speed until he fell.

George Odom kept R. L. Gerry's Ironsides at Saratoga to run in the Merchants and Citizens' handicap there yesterday instead of sending him to Chicago to run in the $10,000 stake won by Karl Eitel. He would have had as tough a game at Chicago as he had at Saratoga, where he was unplaced for although this 4-year-old is a good racer he would have had little success with Karl Eitel at equal weights, 110 pounds, which was his assignment in the Chicago event.

CLARKE MORSE NOT TO PLAY AT KANSAS CITY

By W. J. McGoogan

Clarke Morse, Missouri open champion, of the Forest Park Golf Club, and Art Longworth, St. Louis Country Club, will not be able to play with the team of eight St. Louis professionals at Kansas City tomorrow and their places will be taken by Jim Fogarty of Osage Hills and Tommy Kelleher of North Hills.

Longworth is going to make the trip with the team, but is still suffering from a broken second toe on his left foot and feels it would be better for him not to play.

Morse is unable to leave his place at present because of the enforced absence of Ed Duwe from the shop at Forest Park.

With these two exceptions the St. Louis team will be the same as the one which defeated Kansas City here in June, 21 to 13. John Manion, Sunset Hill, is captain, and the other members are Walter Kossman, St. Clair; Ben Richter, Triple A; Francis and Bill Schwartz, Midland Valley, and Jack Burns, Creve Coeur.

The match is to be played over the Mission Hills or Fill Crest course. There will be eight individual matches of 36 holes, 18 in the morning and 18 in the afternoon. One point will be counted for each nine holes, one point for each 18 holes and one point for the 36 holes, making a possible total of seven points for each match or an aggregate of 56 for the team.

Draw for opponents will be made when the St. Louisans reach Kansas City tomorrow morning. The Kansas City team is expected to be the same as the one which played here. It was composed of Harold Gibson, Bill Wotherspoon, Harold McSpaden, Chick Trout, Hank Decker, Joe Mathews, Wolff Rimann and Harold Gilbert.

Handicap Meet Friday.

The fifth amateur handicap tournament of the season is to be held at the St. Louis Country Club Friday. Entries must be in Chick Irwin's hands at the Pierce Building by Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, when the pairings are to be made.

It is expected that this tournament will attract the largest entry of any event of the kind so far this season. More than 150 competed in the May tournament held at Sunset Hill, but Irwin states that the number of inquiries he has received relative to this week's tournament causes him to believe that a record will be set at the Country Club Friday.

Elliott Whitbread, Missouri amateur champion; Clarence Wolff, St. Louis district champion, and Chester O'Brien, Westborough, who played in nearly all of the handicap tournaments so far this season, will be missing, for they have gone to Pebble Beach, Cal., for the National Amateur tournament.

Many golf enthusiasts had hopes of seeing Babe Ruth of the New York Yankees play a local course while his team was in town this week, but as there were no open dates he was unable to do so. Babe doesn't play golf on days when baseball games are scheduled, not that Miller Huggins, the Yankee manager, objects, for he says he is perfectly willing for Ruth to play golf any day but on days when he has to play ball. Then Ruth would have to pay a greens fee of $500 into the Yankee treasury if he played golf.

Two foursomes decked out in Scotch costumes, kilts and everything, will play at the Normandie Golf Club tomorrow. In one of them will be Sandy Auchterlonie, club professional; Don Anderson, former Missouri amateur champion; Edwin Wambaugh and Monroe B. Marshall. In the other will be Burt Boaz, John Rowan and John Hunsacker, with the fourth to be named today.

In order to make the day entirely Scotch, there will be a Scotch luncheon, whatever that is, and music later by baggipes. As to the drinks, the favorite Scotch beverage is now banned in this country, so a substitute, probably water, will be used.

The "Scotch golfers" are to play 36 holes, 18 in the morning and 18 in the afternoon.

BABE RUTH ALL-AMERICA TEAM CONTEST ENDS SATURDAY NIGHT

LETTERS BEARING POSTMARK EARLIER THAN MIDNIGHT THAT DAY ARE TO BE CONSIDERED

Rules Governing Babe Ruth's All-America Team Contest

THE contest is open to everyone, except employes of the Post-Dispatch and their families.

Entries will close Aug. 31 at midnight and letters bearing postmark up to that time will be considered eligible.

The contestant naming the same players in the same positions and batting order as Babe Ruth wins the first prize; but in event no contestant duplicates Ruth's picks, the one nearest will be considered the winner.

In addition to naming the players to conform to those chosen by Ruth, contestants must arrange them in the same batting order as Babe Ruth. The Babe has agreed to place his choices in the order in which he thinks they should go to the plate.

This feature is new. Previously it was sufficient to name the men according to position only.

An explanatory letter of not more than 250 words must accompany the selections and will be passed upon by the judges. This is as important as selecting the players. Babe himself will write an explanation of his choices. In event of tie, excellence of the compositions would determine the winner. (Write on one side of the paper only and make your selections on a separate sheet.)

Ten players will make up the team, two pitchers and eight other players, one for each position. Only one team may be submitted by each contestant.

No corrections will be accepted once an entry has been received and filed.

Babe Ruth is not eligible. He will not pick himself.

Players must be selected on the basis of their play in the 1929 season only. Performances of previous years do not count.

A player may be placed in a position other than the one he regularly occupies, provided he has played such position in one or more championship games. Otherwise regular positions must be rigidly adhered to. For instance, a regular left fielder may not be placed in right field, unless he has played there at least once in 1929.

The trophies will be $100 cash for first, $75 for second and $50 for the third, $25 for the fourth and five others of $10 each. A dozen autographed Babe Ruth bats and another dozen autographed baseballs mounted.

By Damon Kerby

The fifth annual Babe Ruth All-American team contest enters its third and final week today. All-star teams in letters bearing postmarks earlier than Saturday at midnight will be judged by the committee in charge.

From a modest beginning, the annual Babe Ruth contest has grown to be one that attracts nation-wide interest. Ruth's team is coming to be recognized in baseball as Walter Camp's All-American elevens were in football. Players consider it, and rightly, a decided honor to be named on his team.

This year the competition has been keener than ever before. The statement is made regardless of the rule against using superlatives. There is a real fight on for most of the positions on the team. In the major league clubhouses the players themselves can't agree on who should be selected by Ruth.

New Feature.

Having contestants arrange their choices in the same batting order as Ruth will, has brought in a new and difficult factor in this year's contest. Then fielding is to be considered. A good defense is half the game in baseball.

Making the contest more difficult has added to the interest of the affair. It is a real test of baseball knowledge to name an All-America team—one that calls for careful study of the averages—for the Babe has shown in the past that he pays to a great extent on the records of players.

If the contest is harder, the rewards are greater. The list of awards has been increased materially this year. The first award will be $100 cash, $75 for second, $50 for third, $25 for fourth and five others of $10 each. Also, 12 autographed Babe Ruth bats and the same number of autographed Babe Ruth balls will be given as high awards.

Essays Important.

With the large number of awards it will be seen that the accompanying essays of not more than 250 words will play an important part in judging the contest. It is of greatest importance that the essays be neat and concise.

And only ONE all-star team may be sent in by each contestant. To send more than one team from a contestant would be unfair to those who have submitted only one.

Selections should be mailed to Babe Ruth Contest Editor, care of the Post-Dispatch.

Since the sultry summer of 1926, the respective merits of Rogers Hornsby and Tony Lazzeri have caused endless debates among the followers of baseball. Fuel was added to the argument when Hornsby went to the Giants as a starter attraction to Ruth, Lazzeri and other Yankee stars, and again when the Texan was shipped to Boston, with Lazzeri still holding the fort at second base for Miller Huggins. Now Hornsby is on a possible pennant winner and Chicago and the controversies have been stirred with renewed vigor.

Ruth answered the question himself, in '26 and again last year, by selecting Hornsby on his all-star team. Hornsby also was named to the team in 1925, before Lazzeri had reached the majors. In 1927 Frank Frisch of the Cardinals received the honor. Lazzeri has never been recognized by Ruth on his all-star teams.

It will be recalled that the work of previous years does not count in the contest; the players are to be voted on the basis of their work this season.

Another Close Race.

This year Lazzeri and Hornsby are running more even than ever before in their general play. Many contestants have passed up Hornsby and Lazzeri on their All-America selections in favor of Frank, Oscar Melillo, Hughey Critz and Freddy Maguire, and excellent arguments have been advanced for so doing. All the players named have been of value to their teams. All things considered, the battle for second base is as warm and interesting as any being fought for positions on Ruth's team.

With the contest closing Saturday night at midnight, the selections of contestants who have waited until late in the contest, purposely, are pouring in to the contest editor.

Even at this late day, with the contest two weeks old, some have failed to obey the rulps that have been published daily. It is important that each rule be followed carefully.

From All Sections.

As in former years, the contest has not been confined to the St. Louis district. Selections are now on file from every sections of the United States. Last year an all-star team was submitted from Germany.

Nor is the contest confined to men and boys. Many women have entered and have shown a keen insight into the game in making selections. Their essays, as a general rule, have been neater than those received from male contestants.

Two strong line-ups, with neat accompanying essays, from two women entrants. Miss Pauline Chapman, 2839A Cherokee street, and Miss Violet Desson, 952 Harlan avenue, are herewith printed.

Miss Chapman's selections were:
Traynor, third base.
Hornsby, second base.
Herman, right field.
Foxx, first base.
Cochrane, catcher.
Kress, shortstop.
Grove, pitch.
Bush, pitch.

Miss Desson's all-star team:
Douthit, center field.
Traynor, third base.
Hornsby, second base.
Foxx, first base.
Herman, right field.
Cochrane, catcher.
Grove, pitch.
Bush, pitch.

Old Guard Spitball Pitcher Is Honored

"Red" Faber, at left, Babe Ruth, at right. The veteran White Sox hurler, one of the few remaining spitball pitchers allowed to do their stuff in the major leagues, recently had a "day" at White Sox Park, the anniversary of his sixteenth year with the team. Red is 40 years old and has been in harness a total of 21 years. His "day" netted him $2750 in gold, a radio, a diamond ring, flowers and plenty of cheers.

Sunday Schools End Series in 3-Cornered Tie

The Sunday School Baseball League round-robin series yesterday afternoon ended in a three-cornered tie for the championship between Hamilton Christian, Union Methodist Episcopal and Memorial M. E. This came about as Memorial lost to Hamilton, 10 to 2, and Union defeated Wagoner, 6 to 5.

Memorial and Union will meet next Saturday on grounds No. 12, Forest Park, to decide which team will oppose Hamilton on Labor Day for the league championship.

NEW STANDS TO ENABLE BEARS TO ACCOMMODATE 25,000 PERSONS

Arrangements have been completed for the enlarging of Francis Field so that it may accommodate approximately 25,000 persons at each of the six football games on the 1929 home schedule, Arthur E. Eilers, business manager of athletics at Washington University, announced yesterday.

A wooden grand stand is now being erected on the north side of Francis Field, which will be completed around Oct. 1. The stand will extend the entire length of the football field and rise to approximately the same height as Francis Gymnasium, which adjoins it.

The new stand, along with the old concrete stands and the temporary bleachers to be erected at the west and east ends, will provide enough seats to take care of the throngs expected for the Carnegie Teach, Missouri, Drake and St. Louis University games.

With night football scheduled for October it is expected that the crowds to the Illinois College and Drury games will be much larger than usual. Drake, winner of the 1928 Valley championship and expected to again have one of the outstanding aggregations in the Middle West, is sure to draw well at night.

Along with the seating announcements, Eilers stated that ticket application blanks would be mailed out late this week and that the general ticket sale for the public would open Sept. 1.

Meanwhile, preliminary preparations are being made for the opening of football practice, Gale Bullman, line coach, has set Saturday, Sept. 14, as the date for the first work. Over 50 candidates are expected to report. Bullman expects to have everything in readiness by the time Al Sharpe, head coach, arrives, and is now engaged with Johnny Davis, backfield coach, in checking player lists and the new equipment.

Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, who for many years piloted the Future City Athletic Club through its ups and downs of fight promotion, and who retired from the game several years ago, will be back in harness again, next month, as matchmaker for a local fight club.

According to an announcement made yesterday, Sullivan has been appointed matchmaker for the Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion which plans a big season of boxing shows at the Coliseum. Sullivan has accepted the appointment, officials of the Post said.

Plans completed at a meeting yesterday call for fifteen boxing dates at the Coliseum under the Stockham Post's auspices, the first one to be held late in September.

In the Old Days.

Sullivan's venture as a promoter began about 20 years ago when, with the backing of Marion Lambert, he launched the Future City Athletic Club, with headquarters on Pine street between Eighteenth and Nineteenth. There, with many ups and downs, the game went through various phases of building up and breaking down, but many famous fights were held there.

It was there that Benny Leonard, then a budding champion, fought a furious 12-round battle with Harvey Thorpe, finally stopping him just at the limit. It was there that Bobby Burns, a classful bantamweight, wrought one of the queerest knockouts in history. He struck the Zulu Kid in the back of the leg, as Zulu turned to avoid a low lead, and it landed on the sciatic nerve and paralyzed the Kid's leg. He was in bed for several weeks.

Many great fighters, champions, too, appeared before Sullivan's club. But lean times came and Tommy closed up. He reopened and closed several times. His best and most profitable promotion came about 1920 at the Coliseum, when he put on several big fights. Aided by prices of $10 for ringside seats, Tommy went over the top for a $25,000 profit—the best year in his history.

Sullivan plans to bring high-class fighters to St. Louis for the fall campaign, and sees a return of successful fight promotion.

EIGHT TEAMS REMAIN IN COMPETITION FOR MUNY BASEBALL TITL

TOWER GROVES DEFEAT SEEDED TEAM, 5 TO 2; KOLSTERS WIN

The Tower Grove nine upset the dope in the Municipal Baseball League eliminations yesterday when it defeated the seeded Victor team, 5 to 2. A total of eight games was played and the winners will meet in the quarter finals this afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

The Victors were able to score in only two innings, so effective was the pitching of "Lefty" George. The Tower Groves scored three runs in the second and two in the fifth. It was in the latter frame that Hathaway hit his home-run with one on base.

The Our Savior team, of the Walther League, furnished another surprise when they defeated the Winters team, of the South Grand League, 8 to 7 in 10 innings at Carondelet No. 1. The game remained tied until the tenth inning when the Winters scored one run on a base on balls and a triple by Bieber. The Walther leaguers refused to be stopped and scored two runs in the final half of the tenth to win the game.

St. Anthonys Win.

The St. Anthony team of the Polish Roman Catholic Union League defeated the North Broadway team, of the Public Service League, 3 to 2, at Forest Park No. 8. M. Krygiel's home run in the fifth gave the Saints the first run of the game. North Broadway scored two runs when Lacey singled, Kieselman doubled and both runners scored on Hager's single. The Polish team tied the score in the seventh.

Kroemecke's Lose.

The Polish Falcons put the Kroemeke team out of the Muny elimination when they handed them a 14 to 2 defeat. Great pitching by Porter, who held the Commercial League entry to five hits and fanned seven batters coupled with hard and timely hitting by the Falcons who gathered 16 hits off Blumenthal and Brackett including a double, three triples and a home run. Sueme, Falcon pitcher, led the hitters with a double, a triple and two singles in five times at bat.

Lindsay Wins Title.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Aug. 24.—James Lindsay, young Scot from Falkirk, today won the boys' amateur golf championship, defeating a compatriot, Scott Riddell of Duff House Royal, six and four, in the 36-hole final.

Joe Turnesa Sets Course Mark.

RANGELEY, Me., Aug. 24.—Joe Turnesa set a new course record for the Rangeley Golf Club here when he scored a 67 while playing with C. Erling against William Ryan and Tom Lamey. Turnesa and Erling won the match.

Jimmy Once Was a Flyweight—Now Look at Him!

Jimmy Wilde, the Mighty Atom of ten years ago, returns to America as a tourist, accompanied by his wife and two boys, David and Verdun. Jimmy fought at 100 pounds and even less. When he came to this country on a barnstorming tour he fought Babe Asher in St. Louis and weighed 106 pounds. Pound for pound, he probably owned the greatest punch in history and was knocking out bantams, when he weighed only 96.

28 TO COMPETE IN MERAMEC SWIM TODAY

A strong field of 28 entries, including four leading swimmers of Kansas City, will compete in the Meramec River swim of a mile and a half which starts at Lincoln Lodge at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The race will be a handicap affair. Scratch men entered are George Ernst, Downtown Y. M. C. A.; Harold Groh, New Coliseum A. C.; Charles Roth, unattached, and Max Cogdill and Carl Hawver, of the Missouri Athletic Club of Kansas City. Two other Kansas City swimmers, Lloyd Seiberling and Louis Silverman, also are entered.

Cogdill, youthful Kansas Cityan, and one of the strong contenders, is contemplating entering Washington University this year. He has been swimming less than three years and Al Fox, swimming instructor of the Missouri Athletic Club, predicts he will soon take rank as one of the country's great water athletes.

His first major competition was in the Western A. A. U. meet held on the Meramec in 1927. He finished second in this two and one-half mile event. He won the annual Swope Park lagoon swim of one and one-half miles length in Kansas City the following year and in the various city meets there this season has won every event in which he has entered excepting the 50-yard free style.

Last Sunday he won the Lake Lotawan swim, which is 200 yards less than two miles, in 45 minutes, 27 seconds.

The exact handicap will be posted at the start this afternoon.

Clark-Cushing Wedding a Social Event at Newport

Tennis Tournament at the Casino—Notes of Sojourners at Watch Hill and Other Places.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 24.

THE most important wedding solemnized at Newport for several years was that of Miss Lily Dulany Cushing, daughter of Mrs. James Dennison Sawyer and George Crawford Clark Jr., New York, which took place last Saturday in Trinity Church. Miss Cushing has spent much of her life at Newport and the church was crowded with representatives of all the older Newport families. St. Louis was represented in the group of ushers by George S. Tiffany Jr., who came down from the Tiffany summer home at Dark Harbor, Islesboro, where the summer home of Mr. Clark's parents is located.

Miss Kitty Wickes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth Wickes, New York, was presented to society last Saturday evening at a dance given by the Clambake Club. A round of dinners preceded the dance, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney having 40 guests at her villa on Bellevue avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Wickes 50 at Zee Rust. Among those present at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Speaker and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. James B. Duke, Miss Doris Duke, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Jones, St. Louis; the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman Jr., Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Jones, St. Louis, entertained at dinner at the Clambake Club, most of their guests remaining for the Wickes dance.

The past week has been devoted to the finals tournament at the Casino, where for weeks every box has been sold out and even the umbrella seats have been at a premium. A brilliant field, including most of the ranking men players of the country, were among the contestants, as well as several English players who came over for the intercollegiate tournament earlier in the season.

A feature of the recent Newport Horse Show was the tally-ho class in which four-in-hands were entered by Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church, William Henry Vanderbilt and Benjamin L. Cook, Providence. Among the guests in Mr. Cook's coach were the daughters of Vice-President Curtis, Mrs. Webster Knight and Mrs. Edward E. Gann, while with Mrs. Church were Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman Jr., Boston, and Mrs. Daniel W. Jones, St. Louis, while Mr. Jones was on the driving seat with Mr. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, who has returned from a two months' stay in Europe, is with her son, William H. Vanderbilt, at Oakland Farm.

WATCH HILL, R. I., Aug. 24.

THE annual Horse Show of the Watch Hill Riding and Polo Club was one of the most delightful affairs of the summer. Miss Caroline Gatch, St. Louis, received the ribbon for second prize in the class for beginners from 7 to 11 years old, much to the delight of her mother, Mrs. Hayward Gatch, and her grandmother, Mrs. J. G. Miller, who were watching from the side lines.

The annual putting tournament on the clock golf course of the Ocean House was held last week. In the qualifying round W. G. Yantis, St. Louis, was second low scorer with a 25 and 26 for a total of 51. Mrs. Yantis qualified with a 53. Drawing up from third to first place on subsequent days, Mr. Yantis, by a low score on Friday, won the tournament. This is the ninth consecutive year that guests of the Ocean House have played for the silver loving cup donated by S. G. Dunham, Hartford, Conn.

John Betts, St. Louis, has joined his family at The Chalet, their cottage on the Westerly road, to remain until the close of the season.

Mrs. Hayward Gatch, St. Louis, is entertaining Mrs. Brooks Knight, New Haven, at Wildwood, the summer home of her parents, Col. and Mrs. J. G. Miller, St. Louis.

A sport popular with the Watch Hill cottage colony is trap shooting at the South County Rod and Gun Club, where competitions are held three mornings each week. Bradford Gatchie, St. Louis, is one of the experts of the club, as is also his brother, A. Clifford Gatchie, Cincinnati, O.

Mrs. John Overall, St. Louis, entertained a party of 14 at the buffet luncheon at the Pequamicut Golf Club Sunday.

A large and brilliant audience greeted the Waterly Players on Wednesday and Friday evening last week at the United States Theater when they presented "Two Girls Wanted" in the interest of the Free Bed Fund of the Westerly Hospital Aid Association. AGAINST HUNTING IN AUTOS

Londoners Say African Animals Are Chased Until Nearly Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Scores of persons who once wrote to the newspapers protesting against the mounting toll of pedestrians killed or injured in London's traffic are asking their editors now why something isn't done to protect the lions and giraffes from the ravages of the automobile in Africa.

Hunters cruise the Serengeti Plains of Tanganyika in motor cars, it is alleged, chasing their quarry for miles and administering the fatal shot after the fleeing animal is practically dead from overexertion.

The game law of the territory prohibits shooting from automobiles, but the Government is "indifferent" as to enforcement, it is charged.

AGAINST HUNTING IN AUTOS

Londoners Say African Animals Are Chased Until Nearly Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Scores of persons who once wrote to the newspapers protesting against the mounting toll of pedestrians killed or injured in London's traffic are asking their editors now why something isn't done to protect the lions and giraffes from the ravages of the automobile in Africa.

Hunters cruise the Seringeti Plains of Tanganyika in motor cars, it is alleged, chasing their quarry for miles and administering the fatal shot after the fleeing animal is practically dead from overexertion.

The game law of the territory prohibits shooting from automobiles, but the Government is "indifferent" as to enforcement, it is charged.

COMPLETING 17 YEARS' WORK ON ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL

Workers Now Installing Organ; Thanksgiving Service in June Planned.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Seventeen years' work of renovating and strengthening St. Paul's Cathedral is gradually nearing an end.

The reinstatement of the huge electric organ, a four months' task, has been started, while the final finishing touches probably will be complete in a year. The temporary barriers that have shut off nearly half the historic church from the public will be removed next June and plans are already being made for a Thanksgiving service to be held at the end of the month.

After the installation of the organ, which has been electrified and modernized in every respect, the principal work to be completed is the refacing of the strengthened columns supporting the dome, and their recarving.

The Cathedral, the third St. Paul's built on the site, was started in 1668 by Sir Christopher Wren. In 1925 city authorities condemned the structure as unsafe and Dean Inge was informed that the hollow pillars supporting the dome were badly cracked and in serious danger of crumbling. Constant traffic and excavations for subways and new buildings had caused the weakening of the pillars.

Church Picnic on Wednesday.

The annual picnic of Immaculate Conception Catholic Parish of West Alton, Mo., will be held Wednesday on the church grounds. West Alton is 16 miles north of Baden.

WHAT RADIO AUDIENCE HEARD

French President's Refusal of Cognac Amuses Listeners.

VERDUN, Aug. 24.—Supersensitive microphones gave France a good laugh during the very solemn ceremony attending the celebration of the "Rebirth of Verdun."

The President of the Republic, the Premier, seven Cabinet Ministers, five ambassadors, the Archbishop of Besançon and the Bishop of Verdun had sat down to the official luncheon. Coffee time had come and a million or more radio sets were tuned to listen to the address of President Doumergue, at the left of whom now stood M. Becq de Fouquieres, chief of the protocol. With bated breath France waited the words of the President. What it heard was this: "No cognac in my coffee, Fouquieres, you know it hurts me."

Italy Reducing Illiteracy.

ROME, Aug. 24.—The Italian Government's steady fight against illiteracy is beginning to show results in census figures. In 1921, before the Fascist Government came into power, illiteracy in Italy reached 31 per cent. This figure has been reduced to 27 per cent, as of the end of 1927, when the census started.

FRENCH BATTLEFIELDS YIELD RICH HARVEST OF METAL

ARRAS, France, Aug. 24.—Farms hereabouts that were battlefields are yielding a harvest of metal almost as valuable as their harvests of food.

Copper, lead and iron shot by gathered by a peace-time army of gathered by a peacetime army of 5000 men and women. Other thousands of boys and girls help out family budgets with their daily load of metal.

For 10 years this has been going on and it probably will continue another five years. Every time a field is plowed or harrowed more metal comes to the surface.

The Government, theoretically, owns all this but contractors have bought the right to it. There are crews of expert workers who pass from farm to farm, sometimes picking up the metal themselves and sometimes buying the heap already gathered by the farmer and his family.

A million pounds of copper and lead were found last year in one department. Of iron and steel there were seven times as much.

The enormous quantity of copper, thousands of tons, consists mostly of empty cartridges, an evidence of the millions and millions of shots fired by the armies that fought over this ground for more than four years.

PEONS GET 25 CENTS A DAY

Those Who Work the Longest Receive the Least.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 24.—Publication of the industrial survey made by the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor showed that the daily average wage of peons in more than 400 sections of the country ranged from 12 to 25 cents in American money.

Furthermore, the report showed that about 35 per cent of the laboring class was required to toil beyond the legal limit of working hours daily and that it was those who worked longest who received the least. The investigators' report stated flatly that the small pay given to workers was insufficient for bare living under present conditions in Mexico, even though food which the peons eat is usually cheap.

AN ARMY OFFICER AT 107

Negro in Argentine Now Strives to Get Pension.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS, AIRES, Aug. 24.—A record for military service is claimed by Juan Jeronimo Rodriguez, Second Lieutenant in the army of the Argentine Republic. He recently celebrated his one hundred and seventh birthday and is still in active service, although his officer's pay has been stopped and the military authorities have neglected to give him an active assignment.

Lieut. Rodriguez is the son of an African slave imported by the Argentine tryant Rosas. Until he was 20, he polished the boots of South America's most famed dictator. After that he helped fight the enemies of Rosas and has worn a uniform since. The old Negro now spends his time in the waiting rooms of the Government Palace, hoping to receive a pension.

20-FOOT PAVING ON 8 MILES OF NATURAL BRIDGE

Bids to Be Received Sept. 11—Completion of Task Before Cold Weather Sets in Is Contemplated.

REVIEW OF WORK UNDER BOND ISSUE

$1,263,556 in Improvements Have Been Completed or Are Under Contract, Engineer Says.

Of the $10,000,000 road bond issue voted in 1927 by St. Louis County, $1,263,556 in road improvements have been completed or are under contract and an additional $425,000 in contracts will be let within the next 30 days, County Highway Engineer Jablonsky said yesterday. By the end of the construction season the total under contract or completed will reach $2,000,000 he added.

The largest single road improvements immediately contemplated is the laying of a 20-foot concrete slab on Natural Brdige road between Florissant road, Normandy, and St. Charles road, a distance of eight and one-half miles, at an estimated cost of $335,000. Bids for this project, which will provide a permanent, hard-surfaced highway for most of the distance between St. Louis and Lambert-St. Louis Field, the municipal airport, will be received Sept. 11. In order to complete the work before cold weather sets in, contractors will be asked to bid on four sections of the road under separate bids.

About 14 miles of the concrete or asphaltic pavement, costing approximately $471,000, have been laid to date, and eight miles more are under contract and should be completed by winter, Jablonsky stated. This does not include the Natural Bridge work or 1.6 miles of paving in Kirkwood and Oakland which, when under contract within the next month, will bring the total to more than 32 miles.

Improvements Under Contract.

In addition to the paving jobs, which are being handled under 26 separate contracts, 33 smaller projects are under contract for improvements such as grading, draining, macadamizing and construction of bridges and culverts. Several of these also have been completed.

Of the 26 paving contracts, 14 are in incorporated cities, to be paid for out of an allotment of $1,900,000 from the bond issue, designated for expenditure only in these towns. All of these contracts provide for a 20-foot concrete slab except an .8-mile strip of Big Bend road in Maplewood between Manchester road and River des Peres where asphaltic pavement was laid over existing concrete at a cost of $28,760.

Projects for which bids were advertised last week in Kirkwood and Oakland, which will bring the total of contracts in the towns to 16, are: Adams avenue in Kirkwood, a concrete slab between Geyer road and the eastern city limits, 1.4 miles, to cost about $73,000, and Argonne drive in Oakland between Sappington road and Holmes avenue, a one-quarter-mile concrete strip to cost about $17,000.

Progress on the Work.

Other jobs under contract in the towns, with information as to limits of improvements, length, contract price and present progress towards completion, are:

Big Bend road, Maplewood, between Manchester road and a point 2500 feet north, $15,203.61, completed.

Hanley road, University City, between southern city limits and Olive Street road, 1.3 miles, $35,318, 25 per cent completed.

Liberty Street Crossing Granted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 24.—Establishment of a grade crossing at the intersection of Liberty street with the tracks of the Creve Coeur line, in University City, was authorized today by the Missouri Public Service Commission, in an order granting an application filed by University City. Construction of the crossing was opposed by the St. Louis Publice Service Co. on the ground that it would create a hazard for traffic.

PAVING SOUTHWEST AVENUE

Strip of 504 Feet Will Be Completed—Residents Complained.

Preparations for paving the final 504 feet of Southwest Avenue, between city limits and the Missouri Pacific tracks, were started by the city last week after residents of the neighborhood complained about the roughness of the stretch of roadway.

Paving of the western end of Southwest Avenue to the Missouri Pacific tracks was completed several weeks ago, but the 504-foot strip was not included in that contract. The cost of paving the strip, which will be covered with Warrenite, is $14,560. Southwest Avenue, connecting with Manchester Avenue and the new Arsenal Street viaduct, is a traffic thoroughfare.

PLAYGROUND FESTIVAL FOR 12,000 CHILDREN

Athletic Contests Games and Pantomine in Forest Park on Tuesday.

Twelve thousand or more boys and girls who have been enjoying the recreation facilities afforded by the city playgrounds during the school vacation will participate in the twenty-third annual playground festival at Forest Park Tuesday.

Athletic contests, games and other entertainments will fill the day from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. on the big cricket field in the central northern part of the park. Then the scene will shift to the nearby Municipal Theater, where 1000 of the children will act in pantomime the familiar fairy tale, "Sleeping Beauty."

The festival was arranged, as in the past, by the city Division of Parks and Recreation, under the direction of Commissioner Pape. Special street cars will be provided to carry the children between the park and their respective playgrounds, where they will assemble in the morning and disband in the evening.

In the morning there will be championship baseball games by the boys' senior and intermediate classes, winners in the northern and southern halves of the city meeting. The team from Gamble Playground will meet that from Buder Playground in the senior class and Columbus and Soulard will compete in the other group. Among other boys' games will be horseshoe pitching championships.

For girls, in the morning, Mullanphy and Soulard will meet for net handball honors, and Carr and Soulard will oppose each other in volley ball. The morning program includes a Negro track meet, with teams from Tandy, Leffingwell and Columbus playgrounds.

Thirteen track and field events will occupy the afternoon. Included will be a 75-yard dash for senior boys, a 60-yard dash for senior girls, a tug-of-war for senior boys, the junior dodge ball championship, the end ball championship for junior girls and a volley ball throw for senior girls.

Oscar Heitzer of Concordia Playground, Angelo George of Sublette and Sol Adelstein of Carr have made the 75-yard dash in 9.5 seconds and Adelstein has made 32 feet, 11 inches in the hop, step and jump trials, besting his nearest follower by 10 inches. Mary Lindly of Franz Playground and Lilly Wolf of Yeatman have done the 60-yard dash in 8.4 seconds. Marie Berger of Concordia has thrown the volley ball 76 feet, 10 inches, in trials, or a yard more than the next best girl.

Teams from Shaw and Columbus Playgrounds will fight out the tug-of-war, with Shaw the favorite on its past record.

The playground whose children make the greatest total of points in the various events will be awarded the Buder trophy, which is provided by G. A. Buder, lawyer and publisher. Buder Playground has won this four times in the past, Carnegie three times and Columbus once, when the trophy first was offered in 1921.

Children who will take part in the pantomime have been trained at the playgrounds and at Sherman Park Community Center. The play will be in two acts. Costumes have been carefully planned. Althea Seagrave of the Sherman Dramatic Class will have the title role.

The festival is financed by the Park Division, but for years the children, who bring their own lunches, have been given special refreshments by the Park and Playground Association. The association joined the Community Fund in 1927 and has been unable to finance this activity since, under the fund rules. Last year Commissioner Pape raised $1100 from 11 business men for the refreshments. This year the "Times Goodfellows" will provide the money, by arrangement of G. A. Buder. Therefore, each child at the festival will get ice cream, a bag of cakes and some candy.

ST. LOUIS BOY LEADS CADETS IN REVIEW BEFORE ADMIRALS

John Soest, Officer at Culver, Son of Superintendent of Bellefontaine Farms.

When the graduating naval cadets at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., passed in review before a group of visiting Admirals during the commencement program last week, they took their commands from a St. Louis boy, John S. Soest, son of Carl Soest, superintendent of the Bellefontaine Farms.

The ceremony was the second graduation on the Lake Maxinkuckee academy parade ground for young Soest, who as lieutenant-commander and regimental commander led the graduating class in its formal drill. Three years ago he finished the course offered in the cavalry school. In all he has spent six summers at Culver, whose naval school ranks high enough to command for its superintendent Admiral Hugh R. Rodman, retired, United States Navy. The rank Soest held is the highest a cadet may attain.

The new Lamps, designed with classic simplicity of line, have shades of silk in neutral shades which cast a soft and welcoming glow.

The tailored silk shade with its simple fringe or shirred band has definitely supplanted the ornate parchment.

ST. LOUIS BOY SCOUTS ON TOUR OF YELLOWSTONE

Activities of Boy Scouts

SCOUTMASTERS FAMILY CAMP AT IRONDALE

Three-Day Session Will Close Activities for the Summer.

Camp Irondale, summer setting of St. Louis Boy Scout activities, will close the 1929 season next week with a three-day scoutmasters' family camp.

The camp, from Saturday morning till Monday evening, will be the last to be held at Irondale until the Christmas Winter Camp, in contrast to former years when post-season camps were held during the fall. The camp also will differ from most Irondale camps in that it is intended primarily for recreation, instead of for scout work and advancement. While a skeleton program of games, treasure hunts, and campfire stunts has been arranged for the leaders and their families, most of the time has been left free.

Arrangements have been made, however, to pass any tests if a leader should so wish, or to make up any credits needed to complete one of the training courses that have been given by the local scout council for several winters. Test passing, however, will be done only upon the leader's direct request. The camp also will count automatically as the overnight hike required to complete a training course.

The camp is scheduled to open Saturday morning, immediately after the scout members of the seventh and last regular section of the reservation have departed. Scouts of this section, however, are eligible to attend the Labor day camp, and many are expected to do so.

Reservations for the camp will be accepted at headquarters, 505 Chemical Building, until Thursday, according to H. T. Swanson, activities director of the St. Louis Council. The fee for the three days will be $5, exclusive of transportation.

The Winter camp will be held in the open-front Adirondack shacks of the Ranger camp from Dec. 26 to Jan. 1. It is open only to higher rank scouts with previous camping experience.

Troop Notes

North District.

Eleven scouts and four officers were present at the meeting of Troop 3 at the Grace Holy Cross Church last week. Scoutmaster Simons spoke on "Is Scouting Work or Play?" and Assistant Scoutmaster Hunt talked on the camping merit badge. The Flying Eagle patrol was awarded a prize for winning an interpatrol contest last month. Plans also were made for an overnight hike to the Lions' Den, the week-end camp of the St. Louis Scout Council near Imperial, Mo. The program for the meeting was arranged by Scout Jack Hunt.

Troop 69 of the St. Elizabeth Church will leave tomorrow morning for a seven-day encampment in the La Barque hills. A prize will be given the patrol which has the most scouts attending. A talk on the camp was given by Troop Committee Chairman J. P. Micheau at the last meeting. Scoutmaster C. E. Sampson of the troop returned last week from a short vacation in the East. Sampson spent part of his visit studying scouting in Eastern cities, visiting national scout headquarters in New York and the council headquarters in a number of other cities.

West District.

The scouts of Troop 11, of the Y. M. H. A., hiked to the Chain of Rocks last Sunday. While on the way up a nature study observation contest was held, during which trees, rocks and birds were noted and studied. Camp was made on the banks of the Mississippi above the waterworks, and dinner cooked over open fires. The remainder of the day was spent around camp playing games, working on tests and other scout activities.

Troop activities at Troop 11, minimized during the warm weather and vacation periods, are being resumed. The officers of the troop are at present at work on a program for the coming winter.

The final event of a five weeks' contest to select a senior patrol leader for Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A., will take place at the meeting this week, when Scout Elliot Gillerman will take charge of the program and activities in an effort to conduct a better meeting than did his competitors. The contest called for each participant to take charge of one meeting, with the senior patrol leader office to be awarded for the best. The winner will be announced within the next two weeks. The other scout contestants, who have already held their meetings, are Melvin Hertzman, Edward Hopper, Francis Klein and Stanley Lopata.

Troop 113 of the Church of the Messiah added three new scouts and a new junior assistant to the troop membership last week. Bernard Hysinger, who has six years' scouting to his credit, is the new junior officer, while the new recuits are Elmer Green, Edward Greene and Fred Kunze. An initiation for the new scouts will be held in two weeks. The troop is planning a hike soon. Copies of the last edition of the troop newspaper were distributed at the last meeting. Scout H. Hochstein is now scribe of the troop.

South District.

Scouts of Troop 51, of Our Lady of Sorrows Church, are building a three-room cabin large enough to accommodate 40 boys on the troop camp site near Fenton, Mo. The scouts have been spending every Saturday afternoon this summer at the camp, clearing the ground and working on the building. The site was obtained through the efforts of the Troop Committee last year, while funds to build the cabin were obtained at plays and entertainments given by the troop last winter. The troop orchestra, under the leadership of John Zuzach, furnished music at these performances. Troop 51 is only one year old. John P. Broderick is scoutmaster.

Thoop 168 of St. Pius' Church took an automobile trip to Portage des Sioux, the former home of Committeeman Stratmann, Sunday. The hike was led by Assistant Scoutmaster Feldatto, taking the place of Scoutmaster Metzger, who was ill. Feldatto also supervised the passing of a number of tests. Father Meagher, troop adviser, has returned from Colorado, where he spent his vacation.

Final orgranization of the new scout troop being formed at St. Luke's Methodist Church, Hereford street and Oleatha boulevard, will be accomplished within the next two weeks. This troop is located at the above church, instead of the St. Louis Methodist Church, as previously reported.

Suburban District.

An overnight hike, planned and led by the new assistant scoutmaster of Troop Overland 1, James Patterson, was taken by the troop last week-end. Patterson was assisted by Junior Assistant Oscar Sutter Jr. A number of tests were passed, among them being a 14-mile hike, accomplished by Scout Dick Heebel. Scout Heebel was accompanied by Scout Taville Williams of Overland 2. Scouts Art Wilhelm and Jim Johns were the principals in a snipe hunt after dark. The hunt, as usual, proved unsuccessful. Scouts Ray Reese and Frank Grossenbacher have returned from the Ranger Camp at Irondale, where they were members of the 250-mile Ranger ride through the Ozarks the first part of this month. Overland 1 is beginning its sixth year as a troop.

JAMBOREE TROOP NEARS HOME

Scouts Expected to Dock at New York Tomorrow.

The Spirit of St. Louis troop, St. Louis Boy Scout delegates to the International Boy Scout Jamboree at Birkenhead, England, this summer, are due to dock at New York tomorrow. The troop left Southampton on the Arabic, Aug. 17, and stopped at Halifax before coming on to New York. The scouts probably will spend a day or two in New York before leaving for St. Louis.

The Spirit of St. Louis troop, 35 boys and four officers, led by Scout Commissioner H. D. McBride, left St. Louis July 8, in time to make a tour of the continent before the Jamboree opened. France, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland and England were visited before the troop went into camp at Birkenhead. The Jamboree was a world-wide scouting rally, in which more than 50,000 scouts from 40 countries participated.

OIL DEALER'S DEATH SUICIDE

Coroner's Verdict in Case of Albert Reid Chappell.

A Coroner's verdict of suicide was returned yesterday at Overland in the death of Albert Reid Chappell, head of the A. R. Chappell Co., an oil distribution agency, who was found dead Friday in his garage which was filled with carbon monoxide fumes from the exhausts of two automobiles. Chappel lived at 7478 Stratford avenue, University City.

His brother-in-law, Capt. Paul Brickey, of the United States Army Medical Corps, testified that Chappell had told him when he arrived for a visit Tuesday that he was in financial difficulties. The oil dealer rleft a note for his wife in which he said that financial matters were making him "crazy."

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT OF 90,000 EXPECTED

Three New Buildings Are Ready for Opening on Sept. 3.

A city wide enrollment of approximately 90,000 children is expected when the public schools open, Sept. 3. Last year there were 88,268 pupils in the first week of the term.

Three new school buildings will be put into use—the new Lindenwood School, 2735 McCausland avenue, 12 rooms and kindergarten; the North Pointe portable school, Nimitz and Astra avenues, seven rooms; and Kansas Avenue portable, Finkman and Kansas avenue, six rooms.

Renewing a custom inaugurated by the late Dr. Louis F. Soldan, Acting Superintendent Gerling has called a get-together meeting for principals and teachers Sept. 2 at Soldan High School. The program for the year will be outlined to the meeting by Dr. Gerling and Assistant Superintendents T. E. Spencer, Leslie M. Purdon and Lillie Ernst.

According to the report of the Director of the Division of Hygiene, 1488 pre-kindergarten children were examined physically during the summer. Of these, 62.7 per cent were found to have physical defects, 38 per cent had dental caries, 8 per cent had adenoids, 22.3 per cent had diseased tonsils, 5.7 per cent had defective vision which required correction, 1.4 per cent had defective hearing, 1 per cent had heart ailments, 1.9 per cent had orthopedic defects and 2.8 hernia.

SWIFT TO PAY EMPLOYES WHILE SERVING ON JURIES

Regular Hourly Wages to Continue for Any of 30,000 Workers.

Regular hourly wages will continue during future jury service of any of the 30,000 employes of Swift & Co., J. H. Hall, manager of the local plant, announced today.

Representatives of employes in plant assembly suggested the innovation, which was approved after study by a committee. Hall, who considered this "a notable forward step in industry," said that employes should notify plant officials in advance of service, report for work whenever possible, and receive regularly hourly wages on the basis of a 48-hour week regardless of time spent in jury service.

LEAPS FROM HOSPITAL WINDOW TO DEATH

Nurse at Jewish Institution Hears Mrs. Bertelsmeier's Cry, "I'm Going Crazy."

Mrs. Emma Bertelsmeier, 28 years old, of 8214A Water Street, leaped to her death early yesterday from a window of Jewish Hospital where she had been under treatment a week for kidney trouble.

Miss Helen Stracht, a nurse, hearing Mrs. Bertelsmeier cry out, "I'm going crazy," at 3:15 a. m., went to the patient's room on the fourth floor and found the screen removed from the window. Mrs. Bertelsmeier was lying on the roof of a one-story building below the window. She died an hour later of internal injuries and a fractured skull.

Suicide Verdict in Death of Woman at Sanitarium.

A coroner's verdict of suicide was returned yesterday in the case of Mrs. Ida Berese, 46 years old, a patient at City Sanitarium, who jumped from a fourth floor window of the institution to her death Friday afternoon. Mrs. Berese's husband, Louis, a tailor, and their five children live at 1322A Goodfellow Avenue.

East St. Louis Salesman Files Second Suit—Case Against Brother-in-Law Still Pending.

Michael O. Lindenberger, East St. Louis salesman, who has a $100,000 alienation suit pending against his brother-in-law, Frank J. Klapp, wealthy East St. Louis shoe merchant, filed suit yesterday against his estranged wife, Mrs. Eda M. Lindenberger, for an accounting of their joint savings.

Lindenberger, married in 1909, says he and his wife invested their income in real estate and securities which amounted to about $30,000 in 1926 when, he charges, his wife took everything, refusing to give him his share. He asks for an accounting and for an injunction to prevent her disposing of the $30,000.

Lindenberger and Klapp married sisters. After Mrs. Klapp died, Lindenberger and his wife went to the Klapp home to live. Lindenberger later departed and filed the alienation suit. A jury awarded him $90,000, the trial judge cut it to $45,000 and the appellate court remanded the case for a new trial.

SEEKS TO ENJOIN MAYOR RUTH

Dominic Cerulo Wants Soft Drink Parlor Protected.

A petition for a temporary injunction to prevent Mayor Ruth of University City and Chief of Police Ward from interfering with the operation of his soft drink parlor was filed in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday by Dominic Cerulo, whose store is at 6652 Delmar boulevard.

Cerulo contends that he paid $32 on July 11 for a license which he received. On Aug. 16, he states, he got a letter from Mayor Ruth telling him his license would be revoked on the ground that he had not observed Ordinance 867, which forbids liquor on the premises and grants the Mayor power to revoke a license if the ordinance is not obeyed.

Cerulo says he is not charged with liquor violation by the State or Government, and that he has not had liquor on his place, but that Chief Ward has threatened to arrest him. Cerulo's license was revoked yesterday.

DRUNKEN DRIVING CHARGE

George Zauf, 28 years old, an automobile trimmer, 2640 Russell boulevard, was charged with driving while intoxicated, felonious wounding and felonious flight in warrants issued by the Circuit Attorney yesterday.

Zauf was identified as the driver of a machine which struck Mrs. Ruth Umlauf, 34, of 2924 Miami street, at Jefferson and Eads avenues, Thursday night. Mrs. Umlauf, who was boarding a street car, suffered a fractured right leg. Zauf was chased by a policeman in another machine and arrested in front of 2435 Lafayette avenue. He was examined at City Hospital.

OPEN VERDICT IN AUTO DEATH

An open verdict was returned yesterday by a Coroner's jury in the death of Peter M. Flatres, 50 years old, of 2011½ North Broadway, who died at City Hospital Thursday evening of fractured skull suffered earlier in the evening when he was struck by an automobile at Eighteenth and Olive streets.

Witnesses testified that he apparently became confused and walked into the path of the auto. The driver, John C. Kemp, residing at the Downtown Y. M. C. A., was not held following the inquest.

Man Killed Defending Women.

QUINCY, Ill., Aug. 24.—Guy Peyton, a bridge worker, was stabbed to death Thursday by a drunken man who had broken into a rooming house and was frightening women. Peyton, whose home was in Jacksonville, Mo., was aroused by the women's screams. He went to their aid and grappled with the man who drew a knife and slashed Peyton's abdomen. The killer fled.

Foreclosure on Convict's Home.

MARION, Ill., Aug. 24.—A $12,000 mortgage on the home and property of Arlie O. Boswell, former Williamson County State's Attorney, now serving a Federal prison term for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, has been scheduled for foreclosure in Chancery Court here.

Radio Program Exchan With Germany Pl

Experiments to Begin Immediately of Conferences Between German tion and Officials of NBC—Sho Transmitters Will Be Used.

Experiments in interchange of radio programs betwe States and Germany are to begin immediately. A de schedule has been arranged following conferences in New a group of German radio officials and executives of Broadcasting Co.

The German delegation consisted of Willy Steinkopf the Ways and Means Committee of the Reichstag; Dr. Kurt Magnus, director of the Reichs Rundfunk Gesellschaft (controlling company of all German broadcasting); Hans Bodenstadt, general director of the North German Broadcasting Corporation, and Friederich Blonck, chairman of the executive committee of the latter organization. M. H. Aylesworth, president; John W. Elwood, vice president, and C. W. Horn, general engineer, represented the National Broadcasting Co.

The German delegates arrived in the United States July 22 aboard the new German liner Bremen. They came for the express purpose of surveying broadcast possibilities on this side of the Atlantic, with a view to a series of rebroadcasting experiments.

All four visitors expressed deep appreciation of the radio system in this country. In addition to extensive tours of inspection through the New York studios of the NBC they visited the Washington and Chicago quarters of the company, as well as KDKA, Pittsburg and WGY, Schenectady.

The ease with which programs are transmitted to all parts of the United States simultaneously came in for special praise from the visitors. Most European countries, they remarked, are not so well equipped for distance work.

They watched with great interest the result of the speech by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, who broadcast a special message to Germany when the dirigible arrived at the United States Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., recently.

In addition, three of the visitors spoke to their associates in Germany shortly after their arrival here. These talks, like that of Dr. Eckener, were broadcast by the National Broadcasting Co. through shortwave transmitters at Pittsburg and Schenectady.

The types of programs from Germany which would awaken American interest, and those from America which would be desirable in Germany, were discussed.

In Germany, it was pointed out, radio programs include extensive productions of serious musical compositions. Frequently several days are devoted to music festivals, dedicated to the works of German composers. Operatic works and symphonic productions are given in great detail, and frequent "pick-ups" are made from theaters, music halls and out-of-door stadiums.

The German delegation manifested chief interest in American programs of typically American nature, especially what they termed the "folk-music" of the United States, mostly Negro spirituals.

They were also interested in musical epics reflecting American life, such as "Casey Jones," which they regarded as exclusively an American type of production.

"Americans should present their own music, not Europe's, if they want Old World radio audiences to hear them do anything more than cheer boxing matches and Graf Zeppelin landings," Dr. Magnus is quoted as saying.

"German radio stations want to pick up and re-broadcast concerts that are characteristically American, not our own German operas.

Radio Program Exchange With Germany Planned

Experiments to Begin Immediately as Result of Conferences Between German Delegation and Officials of NBC—Short Wave Transmitters Will Be Used.

Experiments in interchange of radio programs between the United States and Germany are to begin immediately. A definite working schedule has been arranged following conferences in New York between a group of German radio officials and executives of the National Broadcasting Co.

The German delegation consisted of Willy Steinkopf, a member of the Ways and Means Committee of the Reichstag; Dr. Kurt Magnus, director of the Reichs Rundfunk Gesellschaft (controlling company of all German broadcasting); Hans Bredmadt, general director of the North German Broadcasting Corporation, and Friederich Blonck, chairman of the executive committee of the latter organization. M. H. Aylesworth, president; John W. Elwood, vice president, and C. W. Horn, general engineer, represented the National Broadcasting Co.

La Fount Sees Menace to Radio In "Canned Music"

Predicts Hampering of Program Development, Unless Trend Is Checked.

Radio Commissioner Harold La-Fount has just issued a statement on the broadcasting of "canned music" and the failure clearly to announce mechanical reproductions. He foresees deterioration of programs, unless the rapid ride to popularity of mechanical reproductions as sponsored program material is checked. Here's what he says about it:

"While the broadcasting of music performed through the agency of mechanical reproduction, such as records or perforated rolls, is not in itself objectionable, the failure clearly to announce the nature of such broadcasting is in some instances working what is in effect a fraud upon the listening public.

"In view of the scarcity of channels these valuable Government franchises should be used in such manner as to render the broadcast public service.

"The basic reason back of the general orders requiring announcements of phonograph records is the fact that the public in large cities can easily purchase and use at its leisure phonograph records of the ordinary commercial type. A station which devotes the main portion of its hours of operation to broadcasting such phonograph records is not giving the public anything which it cannot readily have without such a station. If the station is located in a city where there are large resources in program material, the continued operation of the station means that some other station is being kept out of existence which might put to use original program material.

"Of course the situation is not the same in some of the smaller towns and farming communities, where first-class original program resources are not available.

"Ingenious and subtle methods are often resorted to by broadcasters to hide the fact that mechanical reproductions are being used. But the most alarming feature of the situation is the fact that stations using phonograph records, which programs are sponsored by advertisers, are able to quote such low prices that other stations using original material cannot compete with them.

"The result is there is a decided drift of advertisers apparently to stations offering low advertising prices because of the extensive use of phonograph records, so that there is grave danger that the present high grade original programs of stations not connected with chains may soon be seriously hampered for lack of sponsors.

"Because of the fixed Government policy not to tax listeners broadcasting in this country depends to a large extent upon revenue from advertisers. If the advertiser feels he can get fair results from a small outlay by sponsoring phonograph record programs, then he is not in the market as a sponsor for an original program, with high educational and entertainment value.

"Unless this situation is remedied, broadcasting programs will rapidly deteriorate in this country."

Pan-American Radio Program Exchange Project Endorsed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Radio fans with a flair for fine music and distance enthusiasts in Terre Haute, Topeka or Walla Walla will be tuning in, probably within a year, on a broadcast delicacy something like this:

"This is station ——, in Buenos Aires, the Paris of the western hemisphere, sending you a concert by the world famous chorus of the Colon opera house."

For the plan of the Pan-American union for an international exchange of good will programs between the United States and South America is being accorded spontaneous approval by broadcasters and musicians in Latin American countries, says Franklin P. Adams, counselor of the union. Cuba, as well as the South American republics, is interested in the project and probably will participate.

Concerts given in the Pan-American union building here by Latin-American artists and the army and navy bands will be sent on short waves for South American listeners.

Orders Truck Fleets To Drive 100 Feet Apart

In an effort to prevent accidents resulting from motor trucks traveling over the state highways in close convoy formation, E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles in Maryland, sent a request to all owners of truck fleets to instruct their drivers not to operate them closer together than 100 feet.

ONE OF THE REASONS FOR MOTORING TO THE TETON MOUNTAINS

U. S. to Mark Its Highways as Aid to Aviators

Numbers Will Be Placed on Pavement Where Important Roads Intersect.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—"U. S. No. 40" painted large on the highway below him is going to be one of the navigational aids for the airman of the near future, according to a program undertaken by the United States Department of Commerce in co-operation with civilian agencies. The marking of highways in such a way that the airman can follow them as effectively as does the motor tourist is an undertaking of considerable magnitude. That it is distinctly worth while is felt in all authoritative quarters of Washington.

The system to be followed is that of painting the highway numbers at all points where important roads intersect, giving both Federal and State numerical designations. How the markings will stand up beneath the wheels of countless automobiles is a question, but it is assumed that adequate maintenance and use of the best materials will solve this problem.

Only one method, and that rather costly, has been found for preserving highway markings of this character. The paints generally used are subject to a process of effacement technically known as "bleeding." Specifications for the marking task have not yet been completed. It is believed that they will call for the highest type materials, possibly some new development.

Present Government maps used in aerial navigation include important Federal and State roads which, even when not marked for the airman, are valuable as navigation aids. After the road marking program is under way, the maps will include the numerical designations of the highways which appear on them.

The air-marking of highways is expected to be of great help to the private flyer. It is pointed out that his training will include handling a plane rather than navigating it and, to do the latter efficiently, he must have all the navigation facilities that can be given him.

Following the highway below will be a conventional practice when private flying gains more converts, and if the highway is marked the practice will be that much easier.

Grand Teton One of World's Finest Peaks

Further facts about the Teton Mountains, which have been mentioned from time to time in this section as the finest single range in this country, are contained in a Government bulletin describing the Grand Teton National Forest which was established by act of Congress last February. These mountains, which lie south of Yellowstone Park, may be viewed in the course of a tour to or from Yellowstone Park, or offer camping motorists opportunity for a vacation lasting into the weeks.

In addition to the sublime mountains of the Teton Range, the Grand Teton Park contains five large lakes and many smaller bodies of water, extensive forests of pine, fir, and spruce, and groves of aspen, as well as glaciers and snow fields. Much of its area is above timberline, the Tetons rising 3000 to 7000 feet above the floor of the Jackson Hole, which they border on the west. The range is granite, as contrasted with the volcanic mountains of the Yellowstone.

The Grand Teton Mountain group, scenic climax of the park, is one of the noblest in the world, and of the few that can be described accurately as cathedral-like. Its great central spire is formed by the summit of the Grand Teton itself. On approaching this mountain group from the north, the visitors beheld a vast cathedral, built of granite and shaped by glaciers, of which the remnants are still at work. From the east and south it strikingly resembles the Matterhorn of the Alps.

Mount Owen is a sister pinnacle of the Grand Teton, and was named in honor of W. O. Owen, the Wyoming pioneer whose party made the first fully proved ascent of the Grand Teton. Mount Moran is the monolith rising above Jackson and Leigh Lakes in the northern part of the park. In the order of height the great peaks are Grand Teton, 13,747 feet elevation; Mount Owen, 12,910 feet, and Mount Moran, 12,000 feet.

The lakes—Leigh, Jenny, Bradley, Taggart and Phelps—are exquisitely beautiful as they nestle in the forests at the foot of the Tetons and mirror the towering summits in their quiet waters. Only Jenny and Leigh Lakes are accessible by automobile. String is the little lake connecting these two. Jackson Lake, which formerly was the most beautiful in the region, has been spoiled scenically by the building of a dam which has raised the water level and left large areas of dead trees standing in the water.

Toward Jackson Hole, the Teton Range presents one of the most precipitous mountain fronts in the world. Except at Teton Pass, near its southern end, the range is virtually an insuperable barrier. Forty miles long, it rises abruptly from Jackson Hole and within a few miles attains elevations of 9000 to 13,900 feet above the sea and towering 3000 to 7000 feet above the floor of Jackson Hole. Most of the range is above timberline in the region of perpetual snow and in its deeper recesses small glaciers still linger. Most of Jenny Lake, the Tetons culminate in a central group of spires. The grandeur of the beetling gray crags, sheer precipices, perpetual snow fields is greatly enhanced by the total absence of foothills and by contrast with the relatively flat floor of the Jackson Hole.

The contrast between the east and west sides of the Teton Range is similar to that between the two sides of the Sierra Nevada in California.

In few mountains can one find a greater variety of glacial canyons than in the Tetons. They range

One-Day Tour Covers Calhoun County Region

River, Hill and Bluff Scenery on Way to Illinois Apple Orchards.

By F. A. BEHYMER

With apple time here, there is no more interesting one-day tour than to Calhoun County, Ill., where the apples grow. Even for those, if any, who do not like apples and do not care to see them grow. For the journey to the Kingdom of Calhoun is through a pleasant Illinois countryside and, once there, the scenery of hills and rivers is such as may not easily be found in a day's travel.

The start from St. Louis is over the Municipal Bridge unless one of the shorter but more expensive toll bridge ways is preferred, across the McKinley Bridge or the twin Alton bridges or the new one at Chain of Rocks. One of the east side hindrances that has encouraged the use of the toll bridges has now been removed. The strip of new paving between Brooklyn and Venice has been finished and thrown open, completing the paved way from East St. Louis to Alton, so it is no longer necessary to use the rough and disagreeable detour across the railroad tracks and over Main street in Venice.

There is, however, a better way, if avoidance of traffic is desired, although it involves the use of a stretch of cinder road which is uneven in places. This route is to continue north over Ninth street, from St. Clair avenue, in East St. Louis, over Route 11, instead of turning left toward the Stock Yards, passing under the Ninth Street viaduct and turning left at the Y beyond the viaduct, following the uncompleted paved road to where the paving ends at Eagle Park and turning left there into the cinder road which leads past McKinley Junction and connects with Washington street in Madison.

Washington street is followed to Seventh street, where there is a jog of one block to the right, passing public school buildings on the right, entering the Edwardsville road at a left angle, coming presently to the end of the cinder gap and following the concrete past the coke works, which curves left into Nameoki avenue and connects with U. S. Highway No. 3 at the Granite City Community High School, with Nameoki just ahead.

From there to Alton the road is brick except where it has been patched with concrete, which is in a good many places. At Mitchell there is a turn to the left across the railroad tracks, then on through Hartford and past the Standard Oil refinery, through Wood River and on to East Alton. Beyond the Wood River bridge there is a choice of routes, through the business section of Alton or through the lighter traffic of Upper Alton. The latter route, if chosen, is plainly marked over Milton road to Brown street, to Clawson street, to College avenue, on past Rock Spring Park, turning right at the Middletown square and following Elm street to North Alton, where there is a jog of one block to the right and a turn left

Where to Go for Labor Day Week-End Out of St. Louis

Suggestions for Tours in All Directions for the Three-Day Holiday—Virtually All Trips Listed Go Over Paved or Graveled Roads.—Something of Interest on Every Trip.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

"Where can we go over the Labor day holiday, next week?" is a question on the lips of many St. Louisans. The Post-Dispatch endeavors herewith to furnish an answer—a whole series of answers, in fact.

These are only suggestions, and variations from the details given will be easy for those who read the map or know the country.

Touring Maps At Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau

FREE information as to fishing in Missouri lakes and streams and weather conditions throughout the United States and Canada, and railroad, bus and automobile information may be obtained at the Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

A part of this service is the distribution of maps and of these the 50-page atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, priced at 50 cents and 60 cents, mailed, is in great demand.

Pocket-size State road maps sell at 10 and 12 cents. St. Louis and vicinity charts, showing lakes, streams, towns and roads, cost 20 and 24 cents, mailed.

City guides, showing location of public buildings, schools and churches, are distributed for 25 cents and 30 cents, mailed. Maps showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Kirkwood, Webster Groves, University City and Ferguson, retail at 40 cents and 45 cents, mailed.

The list is not all-inclusive, and doubtless many interesting places are not mentioned, particularly those close to the city, with which many persons are familiar. However, there is something of interest as the goal of every trip proposed, and attractive scenery on the way. In some cases magnificent landscapes will be encountered.

It is impracticable to give detailed road conditions in this compilation, but many of the tours are on pavement for all or a considerable part of the way. Nearly all of the remaining stretches are on gravel, there being only a few instances of roads which would be bad if it rained.

One day of hard driving would cover even the longest of the trips suggested, while quite a number of them can be made easily in a day. For the longer ones it doubtless would be better to utilize both days of the holiday period. The larger towns given as goals have excellent hotels, while some of the smaller places have acceptable hostelries. A number of the places have good resort accommodations and in the Ozark Mountain section, of course, numerous resorts are to be found. It would be advisable to make reservations in advance at most places.

Camping facilites are provided in the various State parks, and many persons will take delight in sleeping under the stars.

In the following list, which some readers will wish to save for future reference, approximate mileages for the round trip from St. Louis are given:

Ste. Genevieve, Mo.—Picturesque oldest town in the State; on the Mississippi River. Route No. 61 (Lemay Ferry road) and No. 25. Return can be made via No. 25 to Perryville, No. 51 to Claryville, ferry to Chester, Ill., and No. 3 to East St. Louis. (140 miles.)

Cape Girardeau, Mo.—Lively little city on the Mississippi; "capital" of Southeastern Missouri. No. 61 (Lemay Ferry road), with all-weather detour between Farmington and Fredericktown, or Nos. 61 and 25, to Jackson, thence No. 61. (280 miles.)

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—Sizeable little city on the fringe between the Ozarks and the level southeastern section. No. 61 (Lemay Ferry road), with all-weather detour to Fredericktown, thence No. 67. (350 miles.)

Sam A. Baker State Park, near Piedmont, Mo.—Beautiful, wild tract of several thousand acres, containing a game sanctuary, with granite mountains, creeks tumbling through canyons, and the upper reach of the St. Francis River. Same route as Poplar Bluff, but leave No. 67 at Silvia and follow No. 34 to Patterson. Also can be reached by No. 61, No. 21 through De Soto and Ironton to Glover, No. 49 to Piedmont and east on No. 34, with about eight miles of poor road north of Piedmont. (300 miles.)

Ironton and Arcadia, Mo.—Attractive Ozark resort section, with Lake Killarney, the "Shut-ins," the "Royal gorge" and the view from Tip Top Mountain in the vicinity; also near Pilot Knob and the adjacent battlefield and the granite boulders at Graniteville. No. 61

Side Journey From New York To the Catskills

Inspiring Views Along Hudson River and Among Storied Mountains.

Motorists who are planning tours East will do well to consider a side trip north from New York City up the West bank of the Hudson River to the Catskill Mountains. This offers scenery different from anything to be seen in the Middle West. It also has the further appeal of having been the scene of the adventures through which Washington Irving put Rip Van Winkle, who probably is more familiar to many persons through the play in which Joe Jefferson starred.

The Catskills cover some 500 square miles, extending westward about 40 miles from the villages of Coxsackie, Catskill and Saugerties. The descent into the valley of the Hudson River, which they approach within eight miles, is abrupt, with a cliff escarpment of 1500 to 3000 feet elevation. There are numerous wooded summits, deep gorges or "cloves," and a number of water falls, including Kaaterskill, 180 and 80 feet high, and Haines Falls, 150 and 50 feet high. The view from South Mountain, also known as Pine Orchard Mountain, at an elevation of 2225 feet, is one of the finest in the eastern part of this country. The summit is reached by a railroad. There are any number of resorts in the Catskills region.

Slide Mountain and Hunter Mountain, both 4025 feet above the sea, are the highest in the Catskills. Other peaks include Black Dome, 3990 feet; Big West Kill Mountain, 3896; Peak O'Moose, 3875; Panther Mountain, 3828; High Peak, 3664; Indian Head, 3585; Round Top, 3470; North Mountain, 3440, and Overlook Mountain, 3150.

Kingston, generally used as the gateway to the Catskills, is only 100 miles from New York.

The motorist who garages his car on the west side of the river, instead of taking it into New York's congestion, can drive northward along the Palisades of the river on Route 9W, which follows the river. From New York, one can use the 125th street, Dyckman street or Yonkers ferries.

In either case, Route 9W follows the river most of the way north, near Alpine running for a way virtually on the edge of the Palisades. There are many splendid vistas out across the river as the motorist runs on northward, one of the finest being obtainable if he drives onto Bear Mountain bridge. A short distance beyond the bridge is storied West Point and its army academy.

From West Point the road is blasted out of the rock on the precipitous side of Storm King Mountain. This part of the high-

Really Rough Going for Cars In Trip to Persia

Driver of Studebaker Relates Story of Bad Roads Triumphantly Conquered.

A trip in a Studebaker Dictator under extreme conditions is described in a letter from an owner in Persia.

Arthur Upham Pope, American business man, wrote the Studebaker Corporation of America that the trip started in Egypt, traversed the Syrian and Mesopotamian deserts and ended in Teheran, Persia, a distance of over 2000 miles.

"After the most furious going under conditions which have no precedents in the United States, the car looks and drives like new," Pope wrote. "It has gone through snow and sand; in rough valleys below sea level and over still rougher mountains nearly 10,000 feet above. It has traveled over good roads, poor roads, desert trails and parts of wilderness without even tracks.

"From Jerusalem, Palestine to Teheran, Persia, with detours of several hundred miles, in six days without change of drivers, would be a tax on any car, but our gallant Studebaker pulled through without trouble, even though cruelly overloaded and at all times pressed at a cruel pace.

"The trip from Damascus to Ruthbah Wells, 269 miles, was accomplished in seven hours and 45 minutes, but times and distances in the Syrian desert bear almost no relation to times and distances in America. Long stretches of sharp, loose stones, twisting trails in dry river bed, deep holes concealed by dust, ruts and ridges, terrific dust clouds, uncertain tracks—all these things make fast travel difficult. That our car reached the Ruthbah Wells from three to four hours before any of the other 20 cars which left at the same time shows the mettle of the Studebaker.

"We fell into one hole that collapsed all the springs with a resounding crash. We all were sure that permanent damage had been done to the car, but inspection revealed no damage."

In a previous trip across the desert in a well known car, Pope said, the jolting constantly threw the occupants of the car against the top, injuring one passenger seriously and driving his helmet down over his eyes again and again.

"Everywhere we went," Pope concluded his letter, "we made better time in our Studebaker than experienced drivers in the region had thought possible. Never once have we been stopped because of any failure of the car, except for two halts on a terrific grade. On both occasions it was a very hot day and we were dogged by a following wind which rendered the fan practically useless. After we got rid of our excess baggage of over 500 pounds, the car negotiated every hill like a breeze."

way, high above the river, is possibly the most striking in the East.

Continuing, the trip passes through picturesquely situated Newburgh to Kingston, where one can turn onto route No. 19 along the great Ashokan reservoir which supplies New York City with water, then through a series of small resort towns into the heart of the mountains.

Or one can continue north beyond Kingston to Saugerties, then turn westward into another section of the Catskills to Palenville and then along Route 23A. On this route may be found Haines' Falls, the Kaaterskill and several rugged "cloves," as well as more resort towns.

One can reach the 23A route from Catskill, which is several miles south of Saugerties on Route 9W.

Returning to New York one can take Routes 51 and 17 to Suffern, at the New York-New Jersey line, then No. 2. For some distance this return trip runs along the Delaware River.

Willys-Knight Great Six Reaches 2500 Cars a Month

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 24.—Production of the Willys-Knight Great Six has reached the stage of 2500 units per month. The incorporation of additional features subsequent to the preliminary showing at the National Automobile Show accounts for delays in reaching the present volume. Now, according to company officials, the Great Six model stands in a front line position among 1929 type motor cars.

The Willys-Overland Co. for a number of years past has relied upon models in the price class of the Great Six as important factors in earning power, and the lack of such a model during the earlier months this year has naturally deferred a considerable profit. Now, with production having fully swung into the anticipated volume to meet waiting orders, it is expected that sales within this range will have a very helpful effect on the company's financial showing for the last half.

U. S. Rubber Co. Tire Activity to Center in Detroit

Plants, Sales and Executive Offices to Be Located in Michigan City.

Detroit is to become the headquarters of the tire manufacturing activities of the United States Rubber Co., according to an announcement by F. B. Davis Jr., chairman of the board and president. The executive and sales headquarters are to be transferred to Detroit from the general offices of the company at New York about Oct. 1.

There is also to be a greater centralization in Detroit of tire manufacturing. The plant at Hartford, Conn., which has been operating since 1831, will be closed for the present and its operations transferred to the company's huge plant in Detroit.

It is expected that ultimately several thousand employes will be added to the payroll in Detroit.

Only a part of the company's tire producing activities are located in Detroit. The factories are strategically located on the Detroit River, with adjoining railroad facilities, in the center of the motor car industry. The plant is being greatly improved in machinery and methods to make it one of the most efficient in the industry. The executive and sales offices will be at the factory.

This move is seen as a further step by the United States Rubber Co. in the plan to simplify its huge operations which was announced shortly after recent changes in management and executive personnel.

L. D. Tompkins, vice president and general manager of the tire department, said the advantages expected from this greater centralization of the company's tire activities were economies in production, overhead cost and management; closer proximity for deliveries to the motor car and truck industry; more central location for general retail tire distribution and closer supervision and co-ordination of all tire building activities.

into the paved Jerseyville road which is the continuation of No. 2.

The fill across Piasa Valley has been paved, but it is worth while to pause there, for Piasa Valley is very pretty with a trick all its own of showing light and shade no matter what the position of the sun.

Part way up the grade, just a little way from where the one-way traffic ends, one of the optional routes to Piasa Chautauqua curves sharply to the left. It is the Elsah cut-off, graveled most of the way, a crooked and hilly road, but with definite scenic compensations, coming at the end of about five miles to Elsah, which is quiet and quaint, in its narrow valley, and to Chautauqua, a couple of miles further on, in a wider valley, a summer resort in a setting of great beauty.

The return to No. 3 may be by another of the optional ways, past Salem Church and through Newburn, and then on to Jerseyville, which is 18 miles from Alton. There a left turn is made into Route 38 for the run of 20 miles through Fieldon to the Illinois River at East Hardin. The paved road runs through pleasant and prosperous farming country, dropping down by sweeping curves to the broad and fertile Illinois River Valley, swinging north at the foot of the hills with a vista to the left, across the valley, of the more abrupt timbered Calhoun County hills, with outcroppings of rock and the orderly rows of orchards alternating with the heavier masses of woodland.

There will probably be a wait for the ferry, for many motorists come that way, but it is a pleasant break in the journey. Then a tranquil progress across the stream and a climb up the steep bank on the other shore and, before proceeding to Kampsville, a turn to the left into Hardin, which is the county seat and the shipping point of the apple growers, but only a pleasant village despite its dignity as a court center and its importance as a shipping point.

Once there, it is not amiss, if one is not deterred by stiff climbing of unpaved roads, to go up and up to the divide, where the view is wide and grand, between the rivers, the Illinois on one side, the Mississippi on the other. And having made the climb and come so far, it will be just as well to go on to Hamburg, on the Mississippi, and from there back across the broader portion of the "kingdom" to Kampsville, thus traversing the more important portion of the apple country.

At Kampsville there is a bathing beach which bids tourists tarry. The return is by the paved road that links Kampsville and Hardin and goes no further than Kampsville, an attractive, winding 10 miles' trip along the river at the foot of the hills and bluffs. And so, ferrying again at Hardin, back the way one came.

There are optional routes of return, of course, crossing the Mississippi by ferry at Hamburg and coming down on the Missouri side, or ferrying the Illinois at Kampsville and proceeding over a paved way 11 miles to Carrollton and turning south through Jerseyville.

Really Rough Going for Cars In Trip to Persia

Driver of Studebaker Relates Story of Bad Roads Triumphantly Conquered.

A trip in a Studebaker Dictator under extreme conditions is described in a letter from an owner in Persia.

Arthur Upham Pope, American business man, wrote the Studebaker Corporation of America that the trip started in Egypt, traversed the Syrian and Mesopotamian deserts and ended in Teheran, Persia, a distance of over 3000 miles.

"After the most furious going, under conditions which have no precedents in the United States, the car looks and drives like new," Pope wrote. "It has gone through snow and sand; in rough valleys below sea level and over still rougher mountains nearly 10,000 feet above. It has traveled over good roads, poor roads, desert trails and parts of wilderness without even tracks.

"From Jerusalem, Palestine to Teheran, Persia, with detours of several hundred miles, in six days without change of drivers, would be a tax on any car, but our gallant Studebaker pulled through without trouble, even though cruelly overloaded and at all times pressed at a cruel pace.

"The trip from Damascus to Ruthbah Wells, 269 miles, was accomplished in seven hours and 45 minutes, but times and distances in the Syrian desert bear almost no relation to times and distances in America. Long stretches of sharp, loose stones, twisting trails in dry river bed, deep holes concealed by dust, ruts and ridges, terrific dust clouds, uncertain tracks—all these things make fast travel difficult. That our car reached the Ruthbah Wells from three to four hours before any of the other 20 cars which left at the same time shows the mettle of the Studebaker.

"We fell into one hole that collapsed all the springs with a resounding crash. We all were sure that permanent damage had been done to the car, but inspection revealed no damage."

In a previous trip across the desert in a well known car, Pope said, the jolting constantly threw the occupants of the car against the top, injuring one passenger seriously and driving his helmet down over his eyes again and again.

"Everywhere we went," Pope concluded his letter, "we made better time in our Studebaker than experienced drivers in the region had thought possible. Never once have we been stopped because of any failure of the car, except for two halts on a terrific grade. On both occasions it was a very hot day and we were dogged by a following wind which rendered the fan practically useless. After we got rid of our excess baggage of over 500 pounds, the car negotiated every hill like a breeze."

way, high above the river, is possibly the most striking in the East.

Continuing, the trip passes through picturesquely situated Newburgh to Kingston, where one can turn onto route No. 19 along the great Ashokan reservoir which supplies New York City with water, then through a series of small resort towns into the heart of the mountains.

Or one can continue north beyond Kingston to Saugerties, then turn westward into another section of the Catskills to Palenville and then along Route 23A. On this route may be found Haines' Falls, the Kaaterskill and several rugged "cloves," as well as more resort towns.

One can reach the 23A route from Catskill, which is several miles south of Saugerties on Route 9W.

Returning to New York one can take Routes 51 and 17 to Suffern, at the New York-New Jersey line, then No. 2. For some distance this return trip runs along the Delaware River.

Willys-Knight Great Six Reaches 2500 Cars a Month

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 24.—Production of the Willys-Knight Great Six has reached the stage of 2500 units per month. The incorporation of additional features subsequent to the preliminary showing at the National Automobile Show accounts for delays in reaching the present volume. Now, according to company officials, the Great Six model stands in a front line position among 1930 type motor cars.

The Willys-Overland Co. for a number of years past has relied upon models in the price class of the Great Six as important factors in earning power, and the lack of such a model during the earlier months this year has naturally deferred a considerable profit. Now, with production having fully swung into the anticipated volume to meet waiting orders it is expected that sales within this range will have a very helpful effect on the company's financial showing for the last half.

U. S. Rubber Co. Tire Activity to Center in Detroit

Plants, Sales and Executive Offices to Be Located in Michigan City.

Detroit is to become the headquarters of the tire manufacturing activities of the United States Rubber Co., according to an announcement by F. B. Davis Jr., chairman of the board and president. The executive and sales headquarters are to be transferred to Detroit from the general offices of the company at New York about Oct. 1.

There is also to be a greater centralization in Detroit of tire manufacturing. The plant at Hartford, Conn., which has been operating since 1831, will be closed for the present and its operations transferred to the company's huge plant in Detroit.

It is expected that ultimately several thousand employes will be added to the payroll in Detroit.

Only a part of the company's line producing activities are located in Detroit. The factories are strategically located on the Detroit River, with adjoining railroad facilities, in the center of the motor car industry. The plant is being greatly improved in machinery and methods to make it one of the most efficient in the industry. The executive and sales offices will be at the factory.

This move is seen as a further step by the United States Rubber Co. in the plan to simplify its huge operations which was announced shortly after recent changes in management and executive personnel.

L. D. Tompkins, vice president and general manager of the tire department, said the advantages expected from this greater centralization of the company's tire activities were economies in production, overhead cost and management; closer proximity for deliveries to the motor car and truck industry; more central location for general retail tire distribution and closer supervision and co-ordination of all tire building activities.

into the paved Jerseyville road which is the continuation of No. 3.

The fill across Piasa Valley has been paved, but it is worth while to pause there, for Piasa Valley is very pretty with a trick all its own of showing light and shade no matter what the position of the sun.

Part way up the grade, just a little way from where the one-way traffic ends, one of the optional routes to Piasa Chautauqua curves sharply to the left. It is the Elsah cut-off, graveled most of the way, a crooked and hilly road, but with definite scenic compensations, coming at the end of about five miles to Elsah, which is quiet and quaint, in its narrow valley, and to Chautauqua, a couple of miles further on, in a wider valley, a summer resort in a setting of great beauty.

The return to No. 3 may be by another of the optional ways, past Salem Church and through Newburn, and then on to Jerseyville, which is 18 miles from Alton. There a left turn is made into Route 16 for the run of 20 miles through Fieldon to the Illinois River at East Hardin. The paved road runs through pleasant and prosperous farming country, dropping down by sweeping curves to the broad and fertile Illinois River Valley, swinging north at the foot of the hills, with a vista to the left, across the valley, of the more abrupt timber-clad Calhoun County hills, with outcroppings of rock and the orderly rows of orchards alternating with the heavier masses of woodland.

There will probably be a wait for the ferry, for many motorists come that way, but it is a pleasant break in the journey. Then a tranquil progress across the stream and a climb up the steep bank on the other shore and, before proceeding to Kampsville, a turn to the left into Hardin, which is the county seat and the shipping point of the apple growers, but only a pleasant village despite its dignity as a court center and its importance as a shipping point.

New Motorcycle Models Announced By Harley Davidson

The Harley Davidson Motor Co. announces beginning of retail deliveries of its 1930 models of motor cycles.

The new "Big Twin" is an entirely new motor cycle. Features are Ricardo removable engine head, downdraft manifold, individual valve action motor. Although of the same piston displacement as former "Big Six" engines, the new Harley Davidson develops 20 per cent more power which gives proportionately more speed. Demountable and interchangeable wheels are another feature that is causing pleased comment.

There is also a new line of Harley Davidson commercial bodies and chassis. The package truck chassis has a brake on the wheel, operated from the foot pedal on the motor cycle. This provides these delivery units with three-wheel brakes.

Colors for 1930 are olive green with brilliant vermillion triping as standard. A large selection of special colors is offered as options at slightly added cost.

Deer Run State Park, near Ellington, Mo.—Noted for its tame, protected deer and its pine woods; in the hills of beautiful Reynolds County. Same route as Ironton, but continue south on No. 21 to Ellington. (330 miles.)

Big Spring State Park, near Van Buren, Mo.—Contains, in attractive Ozark surroundings, Big Spring, the largest spring in Missouri and second in the United States only to Silver Spring, Fla., as it flows an average of 242,000,000 gallons a day. Same route as Deer Run Park, but continue south on No. 21 to junction of No. 60 and west on No. 60 to Van Buren. (380 miles.)

Montauk State Park, Southwestern Dent County, Mo. — A little jewel box of the Ozarks, containing two springs which are the headquarters of cold, rushing Current River; a hard trip for the last 10 miles but worth it. No. 66 (Manchester road) to Cuba, No. 19 to Salem, No. 32 to a point near Rhyse, a crossroads, and a wretched country road, about which local inquiry should be made, to the park; alternative, No. 66 to Rolla (with three short detours between Cuba and Rolla), No. 63 to Licking and No. 32 to Rhyse (300 miles).

Indian Trail State Park, Sligo, Dent County, Mo.—A 13,400-acre game sanctuary and timber preserve. Same route on Nos. 66 and 19 as Montauk, but Sligo is north of Salem (230 miles).

Waynesville, Mo., and vicinity—Same description and route as Jerome. (270 miles).

Jefferson County rural roads—This Ozark County, lying south and southwest of St. Louis, has many miles of passable country roads about which a motorist may wander to his heart's content, away from traffic. They cannot be described in detail but large maps show many of them. In general, they are not good for inexpert or timid drivers, but capable drivers need not fear them and as they contain much natural gravel and rock they usually are travelable.

Part of No. 26 is maintained, but not all-weather. (300 miles.)

St. Clair, Mo.—No. 30 (Gravois road), which crosses the Meramec River and lesser streams and goes through a fine, primitive-looking section of Jefferson and Franklin Counties. Return can be made from St. Clair on No. 66. (110 miles.

Morse's Mill, Mo.—A resort section on the Big River, Jefferson County. No. 30 (Gravois road) and continue on Gravois road instead of following No. 30 from Cedar Hill. (80 miles.)

Ozark Mountains of Illinois.—A rugged, picturesque district in Pope and Hardin Counties. From Belleville follow No. 13 through Carbondale to Harrisburg, thence No. 34 to the mountains, the latter route having two extremities, one at Elizabethtown and one at Golconda, Ill., both towns on the Ohio River. (300 miles or more.)

Vincennes, Ind.—An interesting, historical, old city on the banks of the storied Wabash River. Illinois Highway No. 12 from East St. Louis. Return can be made by No. 41 in Indiana to Princeton, Ind., thence No. 56 (largely an unimproved road) to the ferry across the Wabash into Mount Carmel, Ill., and Illinois No. 15 back to Belleville. (300 miles or more).

Champaign and Urbana, Ill.—Chief interest probably lies in the University of Illinois at Champaign. Recommended route is No. 4 (reached from the East Side or Chain of Rocks Bridge) to Staunton, No. 16 to Mattoon and No. 25 Champaign-Urbana. Several other combinations on hard roads are available (320 miles).

Springfield, Ill.—State capital; famed for the scenes and mementoes of the life of Lincoln, especially the Lincoln monument. No. 4 from the East Side or Chain of Rocks Bridge. (200 miles).

Fort Chartres, Ill.—A historic old place on the Mississippi River. No 3 from East St. Louis to Ruma, thence inquire way west to the fort. (130 miles).

Florida "Gas" Tax for Schools.

The special session of the Florida Legislature, which adjourned recently, passed a law for a 6-cent gasoline tax, and provided that part of the income is to be used for the support of "public schools and higher institutions of learning."

One-Day Journey Covers Calhoun County Region

into the paved Jerseyville road which is the continuation of No. 3.

The fill across Piasa Valley has been paved, but it is worth while to pause there, for Piasa Valley is very pretty with a trick all its own of showing light and shade no matter what the position of the sun.

Part way up the grade, just a little way from where the one-way traffic ends, one of the optional routes to Piasa Chautauqua curves sharply to the left. It is the Elsah cut-off, graveled most of the way, a crooked and hilly road, but with definite scenic compensations, coming at the end of about five miles to Elsah, which is quiet and quaint, in its narrow valley, and to Chautauqua, a couple of miles further on, in a wider valley, a summer resort in a setting of great beauty.

The return to No. 3 may be by another of the optional ways, past Salem Church and through Newburn, and then on to Jerseyville, which is 18 miles from Alton. There a left turn is made into Route 38 for the run of 20 miles through Fieldon to the Illinois River at East Hardin. The paved road runs through pleasant and prosperous farming country, dropping down by sweeping curves to the broad and fertile Illinois River Valley, swinging north at the foot of the hills, with a vista to the left, across the valley, of the more abrupt timber-clad Calhoun County hills, with outcroppings of rock and the orderly rows of orchards alternating with the heavier masses of woodland.

There will probably be a wait for the ferry, for many motorists come that way, but it is a pleasant break in the journey. Then a tranquil progress across the stream and a climb up the steep bank on the other shore and, before proceeding to Kampsville, a turn to the left into Hardin, which is the county seat and the shipping point of the apple growers, but only a pleasant village despite its dignity as a court center and its importance as a shipping point.

Once there, it is not amiss, if one is not deterred by stiff climbing of unpaved roads, to go up and up to the divide, where the view is wide and grand, between the rivers, the Illinois on one side, the Mississippi on the other. And having made the climb and come so far, it will be just as well to go on to Hamburg, on the Mississippi, and from there back across the broader portion of the "kingdom" to Kampsville, thus traversing the more important portion of the apple country.

At Kampsville there is a bathing beach which bids tourists tarry. The return is by the paved road that links Kampsville and Hardin and goes no further than Kampsville, an attractive, winding 10 miles' trip along the river at the foot of the hills and bluffs. And so, ferrying again at Hardin, back the way one came.

There are optional routes of return, of course, crossing the Mississippi by ferry at Hamburg and coming down on the Missouri side, or ferrying the Illinois at Kampsville and proceeding over a paved way 11 miles to Carrollton and turning south through Jerseyville.

Public Appraisal of Viking Value Verifies
the Judgment of Motor Critics

WHEN the new Viking was introduced, experienced motor car critics—editors of leading automotive publications—were uniformly enthusiastic about its appearance, its engineering, and the extraordinary value it offers at medium price.

To quote from Motor: "After more than three years of development, the Olds Motor Works announces the Viking, a V-eight which represents excellent value at $1595. The word 'excellent' is used advisedly. At first glance it might be taken for a $2500 car; a little more careful consideration of all the factors involved might suggest a price of $2000; while the actual list of $1595 is a tribute to modern engineering and production methods."

According to Automobile Topics: "The name 'Viking' is freighted with valorous tradition, and few cars have come forth under as auspicious circumstances, or revealed more sturdy and bold character. Its refreshing originality, especially in respect to the power plant, should command wide attention."

And Motor West adds: "With these characteristics of expensive automobiles, the price of the Viking is as sensational as are its advanced engineering design and distinctive appearance."

Now, the public has had an opportunity to appraise the Viking—and public opinion is in thorough accord with the critical judgment of these automotive experts.

Every day, the Viking is winning new admirers—by the tailored beauty and luxury of its Bodies by Fisher—by the superb performance of its 90° V-type eight-cylinder engine—by its restful riding comfort and uncanny roadability—and, most of all, by its extraordinary value.

Come and see the new Viking. Inspect, in detail, its many outstanding features. Drive it yourself and experience the luxury of its brilliant V-eight performance. Know to your own complete satisfaction the qualities which have brought such sincere and enthusiastic praise from automotive critics and the public alike.

Eight Planes in "Sky Fleet" Due Here on Aug. 28

Army Aviators Acting as Pilots on Extensive Air Tour of Country.

Flying in a V-shaped military formation, the "Sky Fleet" of the General Tire and Rubber Co. is due to glide to the St. Louis airport late in the afternoon of Wednesday, Aug. 28. The planes will arrive from Chicago where they are to take off at 2 p. m. The visit to St. Louis will be on a nation-wide tour in the interest of the development of commercial aviation.

The "Sky Fleet" is composed of eight Aristocrat cabin monoplanes piloted by young army flyers, members of the First Pursuit Group at Selfridge Field, Mich., until they were released to join the "Sky Fleet" tour.

The "Sky Fleet" is scheduled to remain in St. Louis until 9 o'clock Saturday morning, Aug. 31, leaving at that time for Kansas City, Mo.

The fleet already has flown thousands of miles visiting the principal cities and airports in 10 states, mostly in the East Central and Middle-Western regions.

Local arrangements for the visit of the "Sky Fleet" to St. Louis are being made through the General Tire distributer, M. E. Major, of the General Tire Co.

Aeronautic engineers are accompanying the fleet and are keeping accurate logs of observations at landings on all kinds of landing weather conditions with a view to perfecting new safety devices for use on airplanes, principally through the more extensive use of rubber.

W. O'Neil, president of the General Tire and Rubber Co., asserts that "the day is coming when airplanes can be made to bounce instead of crack up when they are forced to land." Through the development of pneumatic shields, rubber motor mountings, new types of airplane tires and other safety devices of rubber, he says, the safety factor in aviation can be greatly increased.

The tour began at Bolling Field, Washington, D. C., under the sponsorship of Major-General James E. Fechet, chief of the United States Army air force, and the flagship was christened by his daughter, Miss Mary Fechet.

Mayors, city officials, aeronautic leaders and officials of chambers of commerce and civic organizations have been welcoming the "Sky Fleet" and its personnel at the cities it has visited.

Four Meetings This Week for Oakland Dealers

A series of meetings for dealers and salesmen handling Oakland and Pontiac cars are to be held by the Oakland Motor Co. in two Missouri and two Illinois cities this week.

The first meeting will be at Marion, Ill., tomorrow noon. The second will be at the same hour in Springfield, Ill. A meeting will be held in St. Louis at the Coronado Hotel at noon Wednesday. The final session will be Thursday noon at the Missouri Hotel in Jefferson City, Mo.

The subject of the meetings will be plans for merchandising new and used cars. Speakers will be members of the staff of District Manager R. D. Williams.

Thirty-five of the leading Oakland-Pontiac salesmen in the St. Louis zone will gather here Friday as guests of the Oakland Motor Car Co. to celebrate qualifying in the Oakland Fifty-Two Car Club.

Membership is limited to those who have sold 52 or more new automobiles in 12 months. July 31 marked the close of the first year of competition and the start of another year's club. This retail salesmen's club is national in scope.

Similar celebrations for members of the Fifty-Two Car Club are being conducted at 24 other zone cities throughout the country. The feature planned for the meeting here is an all-day boat trip, followed by a banquet at 6:30 p. m., at which the four salesmen who stood highest in this zone during the year will be installed as St. Louis zone officers of the Fifty-Two Car Club.

Test in the Alps.

An endurance test tour has been arranged by the combined automobile clubs of Germany, Switzerland, Austria and Italy, over the most picturesque and steepest passes of the Alps and Dolomites. The test, to take place from August 7 to 11, will include crossing some of the 19 world famous passes.

Perilous Motor Round Trip Across Africa Half Finished

The Colorado African expedition, headed by Paul L. Hoefler, famous explorer, has arrived in Lagos from Mombassa, completing the first half of a round trip across Central Africa. Lagos is on the Atlantic Ocean side, while Mombassa is on the Indian Ocean.

The following cablegram from Hoefler to the Vacuum Oil Co. tells of the success of the dangerous trip and also gives an idea of the difficulties encountered:

"Colorado African expedition arrives Lagos, completing first crossing of Central Africa from the Indian Ocean to Atlantic Ocean. Crept along the edge of Sahara desert, French Congo, day after day in low gear with temperatures around one hundred and twenty degrees, motor temperature remaining normal. Used Mobiloil exclusively."

The expedition left Mombassa, April 13. Hoefler plans to return to Mombassa. If successful he will be credited with having made the first round trip through this part of Africa. Two Rugby motor cars are being used.

It is Hoefler's hope to obtain photographic evidence of the existence of certain wild tribes about whom nothing definite is known. He believes one such tribe consists of veritable giants.

Oldsmobile Praised By Woman Writer For Night Driving

A moonlit road; a brisk clover-scented breeze; a car that slips along without effort; no traffic to bother—those are the joys of night driving, according to Prudence Penny, New York writer. After a recent night drive in an Oldsmobile six, she said:

"I wonder why more people have not discovered the advantages of night driving. You start out in the evening and you arrive at a surprisingly distant destination not much later than Cosmopolite's bedtime. The roads are quiet at night and you flash along like a comet, where your daytime progress would have been in a funereally slow procession.

"Getting up for an early start is a dreary matter. I'd rather lose sleep by staying up late, any time. It is far more festive to drive until dawn and then sleep until noon, as well as being more efficient.

"The Oldsmobile is a wonderful car for these long night drives. It is extraordinarily easy to handle and it has lots of little details that make for comfort. The first thing that took my eye, for instance, was the intelligent shaping of the cushions. The seats are padded quite high in front, so that there is a distinct lift under the knee. You'll notice that with gratitude on a long drive. And, incidentally, it throws you back against the back cushion, which curves out at exactly the right place to soothe the tired ache that comes as your drive lengthens into the second hundred miles.

"And I liked that slender corrugated steering wheel rim. If you've ever driven until your hands cramped you'll know why. Have a wheel you can have in a good grip without having to hold too. There's something delightful about the brakes, too, and they work so that you stop without a jar.

"Automobile owners have not experienced all of the charming thrills of driving until they have slipped behind the wheel of a good car and sped away into the night."

YOU WANT MORE THAN TRANSPORTATION

If transportation in a limited sense were all that an automobile could provide, any car would do, and the cheapest would be the best. ¶ The difference between the minimum in transportation and the maximum in motoring is exactly what sets the Chrysler-built De Soto Six completely apart from others in its field. It explains why the De Soto Six has broken all sales records for a first-year car. ¶ De Soto Six was not designed merely to carry people in passable comfort from one place to another. The qualities that afford De Soto true distinction are all supplementary to its mobility. ¶ De Soto Six has style, stability, speed, smoothness. It is flexible to a degree never before achieved in a car of its price. Its comfort and luxury of appointment are self-evident. Safety and ease of control are assured by weatherproof internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes. ¶ De Soto Six is capable of such distinctive and versatile performance that nothing less than a demonstration can do it justice. We shall be glad to arrange this demonstration to suit your convenience.

from colossal chasms like Granite and Death, whose somber depths are almost appalling, to the curious hanging valleys and shallow glacial troughs, which occur just south of Jenny Lake and elsewhere. The former are so deep that they cut the range into segments, while the latter sculpture the segments into forms of great variety and detail.

The peaks are the climax and the main reason for the creation of this park. For the Grand Teton National Park is, after all, preeminently a park of mountain peaks. As peaks the Tetons leave nothing to be desired. They are mountains of a type that is rare in this country—isolated, toothlike peaks with concave sides and a minimum of summit area. It is the type most difficult to scale, of which the Swiss Matterhorn, Mount Assiniboine in British Columbia, and Grand Teton are perhaps the world's best examples.

The Grand Teton National Park is reached by automobile from the north, south, east and west. The main road connecting Jackson Hole with Yellowstone Park is the north, and most popular, approach to the Tetons. It is 27 miles from the Yellowstone's south boundary to Moran over United States Highway 87 west, where the dam or outlet of Jackson Lake is crossed, and from this point Jenny Lake, in the Grand Teton Park, is 10 miles distant. At Moran the traveler reaches the splendid new highway (U. S. 187), which traverses the Jackson Hole and makes the new park accessible.

Two miles south of Yellowstone Park there is a junction with an old road from Ashton, Idaho. This is an ancient wagon road, however, and is not recommended for automobiles, as it is not under adequate maintenance.

From the east U. S. 87 west enters the Jackson Hole via Too-Go-Tee Pass (altitude 9661 feet) and the Buffalo Fork of the Snake river, joining the road from Yellowstone Park at Moran. It is 154 miles from Moran to Lander, 141 miles from Riverton, 268 miles from Casper, 286 miles from Rawlins, and 464 miles from Cheyenne via this approach road.

The south road enters the Jackson Hole via Hoback Canyon. This is a recently improved highway (U. S. 187) leaving Rock Springs, Wyo., on the Lincoln Highway. It is 156 miles from Rock Springs to Jackson, Wyo., the principal gateway town of the Grand Teton National Park, and 35 miles from Jackson to Moran via Menor Ferry Bridge over the Snake River.

Finally there is the spectacular western approach road from Idaho via Teton Pass to Wilson and Jackson. This highway crosses the Teton range at an altitude of 8400 feet and ranks as one of the most scenic roads of the West. It is 27 miles to Jackson from Victor, Idaho, 44 miles to Victor from Ashton on the main western approach to Yellowstone, and 287 miles from Salt Lake City, Utah.

Approach by Rail.

The Union Pacific system has its nearest terminal at Victor, Idaho, 27 miles from Jackson and 62 miles from Moran. It operates daily trains to and from Victor in the tourist season, and there is bus service to Jackson and Moran.

Union Pacific passengers may also leave the train at Rock Springs and enter the Teton region via Hoback Canyon, but information is not yet available as to bus service from this point.

From Lander, the terminal of the Chicago & North Western railroad, a bus line operates 154 miles to Moran on daily schedule.

The Yellowstone Park Transportation Co. operates a daily bus service between Old Faithful and Moran. It makes connections at Old Faithful, which enables passengers going to Yellowstone Park via the Union Pacific (West Yellowstone Gateway), Northern Pacific (Gardiner Gateway), Chicago, Burlington and Quincy (Cody Gateway), and Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific (Gallatin Gate-

As to Camping.

Space for camping by motorists is available near the outlet of Jenny Lake and near String Lake. There is also a small camp ground near Moran and another on the south shore of Jackson Lake. There are, however, no facilities for motor camping in the Grand Teton Park comparable with the highly developed camp grounds of the Yellowstone.

A few tourists tent cabins are available at Jenny Lake and in the village of Jackson. Lodges and hotels are available at Moran and Jackson, but there are no facilities of this kind within the Grand Teton Park. Side trips to the park can be made in a short time from either Jackson or Moran.

Campers' supplies, including fishing tackle, may be procured at Moran, Jenny Lake, Jackson, or Wilson, where well-stocked stores are located. Numerous gasoline stations are located along the roads.

The Grand Teton National Park is essentially a wilderness park. To see and enjoy its wild canyons, crags and rock-bound lakes, its glaciers, and its alpine trees and flower gardens, one must go afoot or on horse, following the trails of early trappers and hunters or the paths of the vanished bighorn.

There are outfits available at Moran and Jackson and at all "dude ranches" for trips into the high back country. New trails will shortly open formerly inaccessible sections of the park to the pack train and the saddle horse, but there will be many peaks and recesses among the cliffs that only the strong and experienced mountaineer may reach afoot.

There is good fishing in Jackson Lake and in the Snake River, the outlet of the lake at Moran. There is also good fishing in Jenny and Leigh lakes during a part of the summer. Boats are available on both Jackson and Jenny lakes.

Durant Sales Increasing Fast In Western States

One of the most remarkable sales records ever made in a large section of the country by any large manufacturer was established by Durant during the first half of this year in states west of the Rocky Mountains, according to a statement by Durant Motors. They cited official new car registration figures showing that in every one of these Western states Durant sales topped all records.

In Oregon and Idaho, sales of Durant cars were exceeded by those of only one make of six-cylinder car. In Utah, only two builders of sixes, and in Washington only three, showed more new car registrations than Durant.

In California, of the 10 leading makes of cars registered, with the single exception of Ford, Durant's gain of 54 per cent was the largest increase. Official new car registration figures published by Motor Registration News (of California) show Durant in first place among builders of sixes in 46 cities and towns, second in 42 centers and third in 29 others. In the 47 northern counties of California Durant gained 14 per cent and in the 11 southern counties the gain for the six months over the corresponding period last year was 116 per cent. This 54 per cent gain by Durant seems all the more impressive when it is known that five of the ten largest companies registered losses ranging from 6 per cent to 36 per cent.

Tunnel Under New York City.

A cross-town underground motor tunnel, more than four miles long is to be built in New York City at a cost of $103,000,000. It will extend from Tenth avenue eastward under the East River to Brooklyn and Queens. At the same time, a tunnel under the Narrows from Brooklyn to Staten Island will be constructed, at a total estimated cost of $75,000,000.

Erskine Wins 'Gas' Economy Contest

In a recent gasoline economy contest at Ottawa, Kan., an Erskine car was victorious by making 5.6 miles on a quart, equivalent to 22.4 miles per gallon. The contest was witnessed by over 25,000 spectators.

The race took place over a dirt track, its purpose being primarily to determine how far each car could travel on a prescribed quart of fuel. It was run under the supervision of Chamber of Commerce officials. The Erskine Six was driven by Dan Lewis. An Erskine, under official supervision and timing by the American Automobile Association, ran 1000 miles in 984 consecutive minutes, averaging 60.97 miles per hour.

Gasoline Dealers Bonded.

Pennsylvania has approximately 27,000 gasoline retailers. Each dealer is required by law to file a bond, in amounts upward of $500, to insure collection of the 4-cent gasoline tax.

Radio Manufacturer Takes Rickenbacker's Place on Air Board

The appointment of Capt. William Sparks, president of the Sparks-Withington Co., Jackson, Mich., to succeed "Eddie" Rickenbacker, World War ace, as member of the Michigan Aviation Commission is said to be significant of a change in attitude toward aviation by airplane manufacturers.

The appointment of Capt. Sparks was made because of the extensive use he has made of aviation in private commercial work. In the past, places on the board have been filled by individuals interested primarily in plane development. The new appointment is seen as a constructive effort to bring general commercial interests and aviation still closer together.

For several years Capt. Sparks has been an extensive user of air transportation in the manufacture and distribution of Sparton radio sets. The company has maintained its own flying equipment, and utilized it to the utmost degree. Planes have been used for tracing material shipments, for transporting officials of the company, and for emergency deliveries of sets. The latter use has been principally in cases where new models were rushed to distributers or to radio shows for display purposes when time was a factor.

whatever the road or weather

One of the outstanding advantages of the Dodge Six is the sense of security it brings to driver and passengers. No matter what the road or traffic condition, this sturdy car insures maximum safety and protection with a body of typical Dodge strength and rigidity. This body is built inflexibly onto the chassis in such a way that the center of gravity is exceptionally low. And also you always have the complete security of Dodge Six 4-wheel hydraulic brakes—positively equalized—internal-expanding—absolutely weatherproof.

At St. Louis Air Fields

THE big event of the week locally was the arrival at Parks Airport yesterday afternoon of the contestants in the women's air derby, including Amelia Earhart, Ruth Elder, Phoebe Omlie and other women whose names are familiar in aeronautics.

The flyers were entertained by East St. Louis civic groups at the Broadview Hotel last night and are scheduled to depart at 8 a. m. today. The race ends at Cleveland, Ohio, tomorrow. During the halt here the planes of the racers were closely guarded because of the rumors of sabotage, which have marred the race.

There are no St. Louis women in the race. Mrs. Neva Paris of Great Neck, L. I., the Curtiss Flying Service entrant, is flying a Curtiss Robin, in which she left Lambert-St. Louis Field two weeks ago.

The appearance of "Red" Jackson and Forest O'Brine, endurance flyers, at a local movie house this week, coupled with the report that the flyers are to appear on the stage in 10 other cities for "big money," is causing a number of their Lambert Field friends to regret that they did not go in for endurance flying.

"Here I've been hanging around this flying field for years waiting for a chance to make some big dough," a veteran pilot complained, "and then O'Brine sails in here last fall and a few months later cops the prize along with Red, who's only been around a few years. Ain't it always that way, though?"

While Jackson and O'Brine are making their stage appearance, their refueling companions, Maj. C. Ray Wassall and "Shorty" Chaffee returned to regular pursuits. Wassall, who will be in charge of the Curtiss Flying Service School on the east side, is testing a moth training plane at Lambert Field. Chaffee, following a short vacation, will return to work at the Curtiss-Robertson plant. When the Curtiss School opens next fall he will become one of Wassall's first flying pupils, having been awarded a flying course by Curtiss Flying Service.

O'Brine is authority for the statement that Wassall and Chaffee are to receive a "split" of the $25,300 prize money to be awarded by the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co. for the record flight. The money was to have been paid at the Cleveland air races, but as the flyers are now unable to attend the races, other arrangement will be made.

Among the visitors of note at Lambert-St. Louis Field last week were William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, and "Young" Stribling, heavyweight pugilist.

McAdoo, on his way East in a new Lockheed-Vega, discussed plans for the proposed St. Louis-New York air mail route with local business men. Stribling, who flies his own Travel-Air plane, was on his way from Macon, Ga., his home, to Kansas City, Mo., for a fight.

Following a week of idleness, due to labor troubles, workmen resumed construction of the new concrete apron at Lambert Field Wednesday. Work also was started on a new comfort station on the west side of the airport. The grading and drainage projects are progressing rapidly. In addition to the field drainage, sanitary sewers have been started and fire hydrants have been installed near factories and hangars.

Work also was resumed on the Curtiss-Robertson addition and the Von Hoffmann hangar.

Donald Wood, 11-year-old "flagpole setter," of 5050 Emerson avenue, who has been spending the week on top a swing at his home, will be the guest of Field Manager Parks at Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon.

In addition to viewing the regular stunt flying program, Donald will be taken on a flight over the city.

Bertie Brooks, one of the early wing walkers of flying circus days, will make a parachute jump at Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon. Robert Grubb, flying student, who has been making the Sunday afternoon jumps, has decided to devote all his time to learning how to fly for the present.

John Kubota, a Japanese of Oakland, Cal., who learned to fly at Lambert-St. Louis Field several years ago, visited "Bud" Gurney, his former instructor, last week. Kubota, who flies his own plane when not engaged in weeding his truck garden near Oakland, was impressed with the improvements at the airport.

The "Sky Fleet" of the General Tire & Rubber Co., now touring the country, is scheduled to arrive at Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon from Chicago. There are 10 planes in the fleet and the pilots will be invited to participate in the flying exhibition.

More than 200 members of the Elks, in East St. Louis for a state convention, were guests at a luncheon at Parks Airport Thursday and then were taken on flights over St. Louis.

Maj. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Co., made two good-will flights into Illinois last week, one to Bloomington and the other to Decatur. The trips were in connection with the inauguration of Curtiss Flying Service activities at the two cities.

Capt. Harry Young, regular army instructor for the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, is attending his third National Guard camp within six weeks. His present assignment is at Little Rock, where the Arkansas air unit is training.

Volunteers from Lambert Field assisted the Florissant Fire Department Thursday, when a large barn on the farm of Rogers Hornsby, baseball star, was destroyed by fire. Prompt action prevented the flames from spreading to adjoining structures. The Hornsby farm is a short distance north of the airport, on Bridgeton Station road.

One of the largest cargoes of air mail to leave St. Louis will be dispatched tomorrow from Lambert-St. Louis Field. The mail comprises 16,700 invitations to the formal opening of the new Hotel Lennox, Ninth and Washington, Sept. 2.

Leighton Rogers, head of the Aeronautics Department of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is taking a flying course at Parks Air College.

Officers of the Thirty-Fifth Division Air Service flew to Sedalia, Mo., yesterday, which was National Guard Day at the State Fair. One of the ships, piloted by Lieut. Walter Braznell, was equipped with machine gun and bombs and was placed on exhibition at the fair during the day.

The arrival time of the Southwest Air Fast Express plane at Lambert Field is now 4 p. m. daily, instead of 3:30 p. m. The schedule was changed to allow more time for train connections at Dallas and Sweetwater, Texas.

George H. Blaine, chief of police, and Kirk Latta, secretary to the Mayor of Tulsa, Ok., were passengers on a S. A. F. E. plane arriving here last week.

G. W. Moe has been appointed local field representative for S. A. F. E. at Lambert Field, succeeding R. H. Allen, transferred to Kansas City.

Arrangements have been made to transport eight members of the crew of the Graf Zeppelin from Los Angeles to New York over the Transcontinental Air Transport route. The arrangement was made to lighten the airship for its flight over the Rocky Mountains. The German flyers are expected to leave Los Angeles in a T. A. T. plane about Aug. 27 and will stop at Lambert Field the following day.

The Western Screw Products Co., 19 St. George street, specializes in screws and other hardware for airplanes. The concern supplies the Curtiss-Robertson Co. with materials in large quantities.

Four members of a Turkish Government Commission, now in the United States to study aeronautical activities, are due to reach St. Louis Saturday. The party includes Maj. Shefik Bey, Capt. Ferruh Bey, Lieut. Kaizim and Ahmed Emin Bey. The latter is a representative for the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co. in Turkey.

Baron Frederick Karl von Koenig-Warthausen, who is flying a Moth plane on a solo-round-the-world trip, is scheduled to reach Lambert-St. Louis Field next Sunday. The Baron expects to remain in St. Louis several days.

A Challenger Robin and two Ryan monoplanes were sold last week by Joe Reed, airplane salesmanager for the Universal Corporation.

Lieutenant Commander Harold Brow, U. S. N., who finished second to Lieut. Al Williams in the 1923 Pulitzer trophy race here, stopped off at Lambert Field Thursday on his way from California to Cleveland for the national air races.

Among visitors at Parks Airport last week were: O. M. Lens, in a Travel-Air form Omaha, Neb.; F. M. Davis, in a Monocoach, from Moline, Ill.; F. H. Schofield, in a Monocoupe, from Charleston, Mo.; Marsh Rossington, in a Waco, from Chicago; E. F. Ross, in a Stinson Junior, from Tulsa to Detroit; Bob LeRoy, in a Travel-Air, from Los Angeles to Cleveland; E. L. Moore, in a Stinson, from Kansas City to Cleveland; Jack Reid, in a tri-motored Emsco monoplane from Los Angeles to Wayne, Mich.; C. F. Rothweil, in a single-engine Emsco, from Los Angeles to Jamestland; Les Bowman, in a Monosport, from Buffalo, N. Y., to Miami, Fla.; and Al Heller, in a Travel-Air, from Wichita.

Eyre Sloniger, air mail pilot, flew a Fokker Universal to St. Louis from Newport, R. I., last week in 10 hours, 20 minutes. He had as passenger Dan W. Jones, president of the Universal Aviation Corporation, and Jones chauffeur.

Youngest Pilot In the U. S.

Louis D. Strickland, 16 years old, who is said to be the youngest licensed pilot in this country. He was graduated the past week from the Parks Air College.

Louis D. Strickland, 16 years old, a graduate of Parks Air College, last week became the youngest licensed pilot in the United States on receiving a private pilot's license. Strickler, the son of a Latrobe, Pa., druggist, will return to high school this week. He actually qualified for a limited commercial license but under Department of Commerce rules can not receive this rating until his eighteenth birthday. He says his father has promised him a plane for his own use.

Three of the 10 Universal Flying Schools, including that at Lambert-St. Louis Field, have received transport ratings from the Department of Commerce. Reports on the other seven schools have not been received. Department of Commerce inspectors found the St. Louis school to be one of the best equipped in the country.

Mail pilots for Interstate Airlines, Inc., operating between St. Louis, Evansville, Chicago and Atlanta, have not missed completing a run in 14 consecutive weeks. Joe Hammer and John Hunter, St. Louisans, are among the leaders of Interstate pilots. More than 60,000 pounds of mail were carried over the line during the first six months of the year. A night flying schedule on the Chicago-Atlanta route will be started Sept. 1.

An arrangement for exchanging passengers was effected last week by Southwest Air Fast Express and the New York Central Railroad. The agreement establishes a second train-plane passenger service between New York and Los Angeles by the way of St. Louis.

Erle P. Halliburton, president of Southwest Air Fast Express, accompanied by several other officials of the line, passed through St. Louis Wednesday on the way to Chicago to attend a meeting of air line operators.

The St. Louis-Chicago passenger line completed its first year of operation Tuesday with a record of 98 per cent operating efficiency. Planes of the Universal Corporation flew a total of 257,444 miles over the route, carrying 2059 passengers during the period.

One of the most colorful airplanes to visit Lambert-St. Louis Field recently was the new $24,500 Wasp Fairchild monoplane of the Cook Paint & Varnish Co., makers of aircraft finishes. The color combination is gray and red. Bert Ison, formerly with Universal, is touring the country in the ship.

Lieut. Phil Love and Sergt. Jim Tate, Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, will leave Lambert Field this morning in a Douglas 02H biplane to participate in the National Guard race at the national air meet at Cleveland, O. The Douglas, which has been "dolled up" to increase its speed, is expected to make 170 miles an hour in the race. A cash prize of $500 will be awarded the winner.

All the local aviation companies will have representatives or exhibits at the national air races and exhibition, which started at Cleveland yesterday. Everyone connected with aviation here who can get away is planning a brief trip to Cleveland. St. Louis-made planes, the Robin, Ryan, Cardinal and Parks, will be on display.

The supply department of the Universal Aviation Corporation has signed up several export agents and recently shipped a quantity of aeronautical supplies to South America. The department is in charge of Hays Walter, who has as his assistant Vernon Huff, formerly with the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

City officials, seeking a more comprehensive view of the construction activities at Lambert-St. Louis Field, viewed the work from a plane last week. Those making the inspection were: Director of Public Welfare Salisbury, Park Commissioner Pape, E. R. Kinsey, president of the Board of Public Service; Charles Cunningham, assistant Comptroller, and W. W. Horner, engineer.

Goodrich "Silver Fleet" Experience Guide for Cities

Following the action of Chicago Rotary No. 1, in recognizing the recently proposed Goodrich safety code for motor traffic, other civic organizations in large and small cities visited by the Goodrich Silver Fleet are accepting the experience of Commander H. R. Schaeffer as a means of reducing deaths in automobile accidents.

Schaeffer has had an opportunity to study traffic conditions in the 40 odd states through which the Silver Fleet has passed that is without precedent in motoring history. He has led a fleet of 15 cars over about 25,000 miles of United States highways without serious accident. He has had ample opportunity to compare one state and its cities against other states.

His experience had led him to believe that a nation-wide code of traffic regulations which will bring about regular brake inspection would prove the greatest means of materially reducing deaths in automobile accidents.

Schaeffer's observations lead him to advocate compulsory brake inspection and a uniform nation-wide traffic code with relation to speed and speed lanes on city and state highways. He also recommends greater banking on curves and danger signals at places where they are actually needed and not promiscuously along highways in places of comparatively slight danger which arouse the contempt and indifference of many motorists. Schaeffer believes that a danger signal should warn of real danger.

Reo Speed Wagon Put to Many Uses By Near East Relief

Help in Drainage Work, Carry Refugees and Serve as Fire Trucks.

Varied and unusual service is given by the Reo Speedwagons owned by the Near East Relief in Transcaucasia. They have helped to drain marshes in an effort to stamp out malaria, and drain cesspools in the work of providing sanitation of a quality previously unknown in the Near East; they have carried the wounded when earthquakes threw the country into chaos and they have become important members of the orphanage fire department and given unusual assistance to fire control in the city of Leninakan, Armenia.

The most spectacular member of the Reo Speed Wagon family in the Leninakan orphanage is a two-ton chassis equipped with a seven-gallon tank body and a centrifugal pump. This truck originally was bought to be used as a septic tank in the sanitary department of the American plant, but when the fire bell rings, either on the orphanage compound, or in the distant city, the Speed Wagon dashes down to the river to be pumped full of water, and is then taken off to the fire.

During the Armenian earthquakes of two years ago, when the Government hospitals were destroyed, as well as 15 entire villages; when 400 people were killed outright and 80,000 were rendered homeless and many thousands injured, Near East Relief's seven Reos worked day and night bringing the wounded from all over the surrounding countryside into the only hospital left standing and workable—the orphanage hospital.

R. B. Nettleton New Peerless Executive

Complete reorganization of the Peerless Motor Car Corporation is going on apace under the new dual management of Don P. Smith and James A. Bohannon. A Clevelander, Ralph B. Nettleton, is the most recent appointee to a major executive position, that of general sales manager.

When the old Locomobile Co. of America produced its big four-cylinder car, Nettleton was an important cog in that organization. Later, when Cleveland men started to manufacture the old Lozier, Nettleton became a branch manager with headquarters in Boston.

In 1913, when the Chandler Motor Car Co. was founded, he became Boston distributor of it and the Paige. In 1922 he became one of the Chandler sales managers, with headquarters in Cleveland. When a merger brought the Chandler and Cleveland companies together in 1926, Nettleton was promoted to central sales manager.

1ST Anniversary Chicago-St. Louis Air Passenger Service

Another UNIVERSAL Achievement

ON AUGUST 20th, 1928, St. Louis was given its first air passenger route when daily service was inaugurated to and from Chicago by the Robertson Aircraft Corporation.

Today, the Universal Aviation Corporation, parent company of the Robertson Aviation Corporation, operates two trips daily between St. Louis and Chicago, carrying air mail and passengers.

A year ago operating equipment consisted of two-passenger open-type planes. Today, on both runs, Fokker Super-Universal cabin planes are employed.

Maintaining the remarkable record of 99% efficiency for an entire year, established by the earlier service, last month's report shows that the St. Louis-Chicago service operated at 100% efficiency.

In addition to service to Chicago, the Universal Aviation Corporation provides daily service to points west and southwest via Kansas City, and to points east via Chicago and Cleveland. Schedules, tariffs and full particulars on request.

Works 20 Years Servicing Buick Cars in St. Louis

"Twenty years is a pretty long time to be working on the same make of automobile for the same company isn't it? But when I come to think of it," said Arnold F. Stephens, wholesale service manager of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., "that's exactly how long I've been connected with Buick in St. Louis!"

A. F. STEPHENS

Stephens, who is known as "Steve" by his fellow workers, was born in St. Louis some 50 years ago. At the age of 13, while still attending school, Stephens got his first job—that of a city lamp lighter.

"I used to get $10 a month for lighting 60 gas lamps in the old Carondelet district," mused Stephens. "Sometimes, if the moon was high, we wouldn't light the lamps until midnight or after—sometimes, if conditions warranted we'd put them out very early in the morning, too."

Stephens for a time was a blacksmith and machinist. Then, in May, 1908, he obtained a job as a mechanic's helper with the Kohler Buick Co. in New York City. Stephens picked up the rudiments of auto mechanics then, in September, 1908, connected with the Buick distributor in Boston.

In February, 1909, Stephens returned New York where he remained until June. "Then," said Stephens, "I got tired of the East and went back home to St. Louis."

Once more back in his familiar haunts, Stephens endeavored to go to work for Buick here, but, to his dismay, there were no openings in the mechanical department. He finally worked for a Ford concern.

"Sept. 1, 1909, however," said Stephens, "proved to be the red letter day in my life. That was the day I went to work for the Buick Motor Co. here and I've been with it ever since and I expect to be for a long time to come."

When Stephens went to work for Buick in St. Louis, the office and salesroom of the company was at Twelfth and Locust streets with a shop at Thirteenth and Locust.

In 1913 the Buick Motor Co. moved to 3205 Locust street. It was while Buick was located there that F. W. A. Vesper took over the factory branch and organized a distributorship in its place. Before coming to St. Louis, Vesper was president of the Buick Automobile Co. of Texas.

In 1917, the firm, then known as the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., moved to Grand and Lindell boulevards. In February, 1928, it took up new quarters at Vandeventer and West Pine.

Stephens has seen his firm grow from a little establishment to the possesor of a pair of the most beautiful buildings in St. Louis.

"In the old days we'd sell perhaps 200 cars in the entire Middle West and South," recalled Stephens. "Now we sell several thousand every year right around here in Eastern Missouri, Southern Illinois and Western Kentucky."

"You know," concluded Stephens, "we old-timers sometimes have to rub our eyes to make sure we're not dreaming when we look at the new models. They're miracles compared to the automobile of two decades ago—yes, sir."

Knowing Errors Helps.

Gasoline gauges may not register accurately, but that is not such a good excuse for running out of fuel as many think. It is not hard to learn the gauge's margin of error and allow for it.

Stock Hudson Cars Win Speed Race And Endurance Run

A Hudson standard stock roadster recently finished in first place driven by Matt Ward in a 100-lap race at the Tulsa, Ok., fairgrounds. Jimmy Davis finished second also driving a stock Hudson roadster. The field was the largest and most representative ever entered at the fair.

Another stock Hudson roadster, owned by Eddie Meyers, won a twelve-hour endurance run on July 14 at the Roby Speedway, Hammond, Ind. Meyers purchased his Hudson roadster on Thursday, July 11, and decided to enter it in the endurance run. Time was so limited that the car went to the post with only 108 miles on the speedometer and without test run. The rules required that the top, windshield, spare tire, head lights, bumper, and muffler be removed. The car was prepaerd late Saturday evening and was at the track Sunday morning at 7:30 a. m.

The race started at 8:00 a. m. and the Hudson took the lead immediately. Nine stops were made in the 12 hours, all but two being only for change of drivers and gas, oil and water. Of the other two, one was for a tire change, the other to regulate the vacuum tank. No mechanical adjustments besides this were made during the race. The mileage covered was 686. The Hudson car won by a wide margin. The Hudson Motor Car Co. has broken all production records month by month for the first seven months of the year. A total of 250,032 Hudson and Essex motor cars were produced in the first seven months of 1929. This was an increase of 41,799 units over the same period in 1928, which was the largest previous seven months period.

Essex Challenger First to Climb to Top of Mountain

A Challenger Essex set a new record last night when it was the first car to climb to the summit of Table Rock Mountain. H. F. Lange, a Hudson-Essex dealer, was at the wheel and the test was supervised by newspaper men.

The trail leading up the sun-baked sides of the incline is a mass of rocks and a tangle of sharp curves and grades, ranging from 28 to 35 degree slopes.

Table Rock was the place where Major Phil Kearney with 100 United States Dragoons stormed the Rogue River Indians' stronghold June 23, 1851.

Gardner Creates New Department To Assist Dealers

L. Z. McKee, one of the best known merchandising counsellors in the automotive industry, has been appointed merchandiisng manager of The Gardner Motor Co., Inc., effective Aug. 1.

The creation of a new department by Gardner is another step in the company's expansion program begun six months ago. The appointment of McKee as head of the new merchandising division is in keeping with the policy of the company which embraces an intensive educational plan of presenting Gardner cars to the public through its greatly augmented distributor and dealer organization. In addition the new merchandising division will concentrate upon service to Gardner owners through newly developed methods.

McKee has made an enviable record in assisting the dealer organizations of several of the largest companies in the industry in merchansing automobiles through the service end of the dealer's business. Under the new Gardner plan, McKee has his own staff of successful retail salesmen who operate directly under his supervision. These men work with the Gardner distributors and dealers in making sales analyses of territory, suggesting better methods of selling and service, effective display of merchandise, efficient cost methods and selling of cars on the floor.

Prior to his connection with Gardner, McKee held an executive position with H. M. Ballard & Co., Chicago, merchandising counsellors. Before that he held a responsible position with the Weaver Manufacturing Co., manufacturer of service station equipment.

Model Plane Derby Set for Monday, Sept. 2

Fully 200 Boys Expected to Compete in Contest in Forest Park.

For the past two years the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has awarded trophies to boys who compete in the annual derbies of the Junior Aviation Club of St. Louis, an organization of more than 1500 boys and girls interested in the building and flying of model planes.

The club is sponsored by the B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co. It will hold its third annual derby on the Old Flying Field, in Forest Park, on Sept. 2.

This year the Post-Dispatch is awarding two loving cups as first and second prizes in class A. This class is for boys between the ages of 15 and 20 years. Prizes are for the best duration flights of tractor models.

In the first derby, two years ago, the Post-Dispatch trophy was won by Lester Reinhardt, 5328 Lansdowne. In the second contest the Post-Dispatch awarded three medals to boys between the ages of 14 and 20 for the best duration flights of twin pusher models. The first prize was awarded to Joseph Ehrhardt, 7020 Wise avenue, who flew his twin pusher model for 6 minutes and 7 seconds, before a crowd of more than 5000 people. The other two prizes from the Post-Dispatch were awarded to Elmer Luckerath, 136 North Clay, and Paul Oldendorph, 1838 Kienlen avenue.

It is expected that more than 200 boys will be on the old flying field to compete for these trophies the day of the derby. Every boy and girl in the city of St. Louis between the ages of 7 and 20 years is eligible for the 14 prizes to be awarded. Each entry will receive a certificate of distinction.

Classes in the building and flying of model airplanes are held each day on the fifth floor of the Nugent store, where the Junior Aviation Club of St. Louis has established headquarters.

Ketterling Foresees Cars Doing 80 Miles Per Gallon

Within 10 years automobiles will safely travel a hundred miles an hour, weigh less than a thousand pounds, sell for less than a thousand dollars, and cover 80 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

That is the prophecy of Charles F. Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corporation, and inventor of the self-starter and many2 other automobile improvements. The pressure of airplane competition will bring this about, he asserts.

"Lightness of construction is one of the things we have learned from the airplane," he says in an interview in Popular Science Monthly. "Until 1920, we used to boast of how heavy our cars were. Now a chief selling point is how light they are. Aluminum, lynite and invar all came into automobile construction by way of the airplane. And right now we are perfecting for commercial purposes a new metal 15 times stronger than nickeled steel, yet only one-third as heavy as aluminum. We figure we can allow about four pounds per horsepower in making motors of this new metal. Thus a 50 horsepower motor would weigh only 200 pounds.

"Light weight and improved methods of carbureton are going to double the mileage we can get on a gallon of gasoline. I also believe that many parts will be eliminated on the automobile of the future. The whole method of gear shifting is undergoing a series of changes right now—changes that eventually will do away with the cumbersome shifting lever. Shifting, breaking and possibly steering will be a part of the electrical system.

"Body design is due for marked changes, also. We are also beginning to learn the possibilities of the streamline body in reducing wind resistance. Maj. Segrave never could have made his recent record unless he had thoroughly understood the science of streamlining.

"As far as I can see—and I am taking a long look into the future—the automobile and the airplane will never conflict. Instead, they'll complement each other—and inside of another 10 years it'll be a wise man indeed who can tell, when blindfolded, whether he's riding in a plane or a car!"

To Show World.

An engineer, photographer and motion picture cameraman of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads of the United States are taking pictures of the construction of low-cost bituminous road surfaces and concrete pavements. The scenes will be shown at the second Pan-American Highway Congress to be held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, this month.

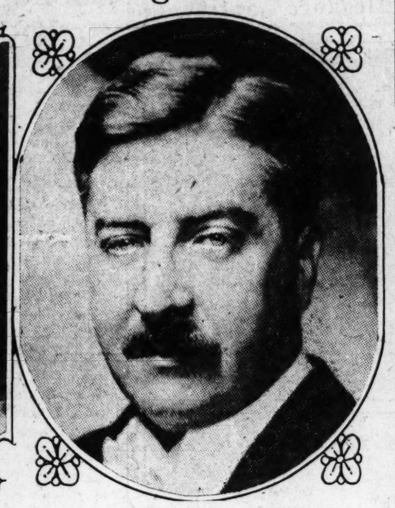
Two Russian Aristocrats Win Places Among Radio Stars

Prince Obolensky and Mme. Zinaida Nicolina, Both Ruined by the Revolution, Build New Lives and Rise to Fame Through Broadcasting.

ZINAIDA NICOLINA



PRINCE OBOLENSKY.

Two of the more picturesque radio personalities are Russian aristocrats. One is Mme. Zinaida Nicolina, who generally sings over the Columbia chain, and Prince Alexis Obolensky, a basso, who has been featured of late in several National Broadcasting Co. programs. Mme. Nicolina is one of the three Russian stars in the Around the Samovar program heard Sunday night over the CBS hook-up. She also takes the part of La Palina in the programs of that name on the CBS.

Prince Obolensky is the exiled head of one of Russia's oldest aristocratic families. He decided to become a singer after his escape from Russia during the revolution. With nothing left of vast possessions, except his Stradivarius violin, he succeeded in getting out of the country safely with his wife, who was born the Princess Troubetskoy, their five children and one string of pearls out of all the family jewels.

Dame Melba was the first to encourage Obolensky to cultivate his voice. He and his wife faced the necessity of reconstructing their lives, so she went to Paris and established a business there and he studied singing. Melba granted him an audition and her Australian opera director, Henry Russell, took him home to his farm and guided him through intensive training there.

Melba Aided Prince.

Two years later Melba heard him again and immediately ordered a concert at Albert Hall, America, and broadcasting through NBC networks followed.

The Obolensky family dates back to the ninth century and has been noted for generations for its patronage of the arts and music. The present Prince's grandfather maintained a large church chorus on his estate and directed the Imperial Russian Musical Society, which took Leopold Auer and Rubinstein to Russia. Later his father headed the same society. Many noted Russian artists of their day received their first encouragement from an Obolensky.

The original estate was one of the largest in the world, including big mines in the Ural Mountains.

Prince Alexis was educated at St. Petersburg University and Heidelberg.

Nicolina a Vivid Personality.

Color seems essential to Zinaida Nicolina and red and green seem to be her favorite tints. She wears jewelry in profusion. Strange, earrings hang from two small ears, while bizarre necklaces add to the exotic effect.

The Russian revolution figured largely in Zinaida Nicolina's life. Born in Koursk, Russia, she studied music from an early age, for her entire family was interested in it and often entertained their friends with singing or piano playing.

Her father, who was Judge of the Supreme Court, gave his daughter a lavish cultural training. The piano first occupied her attention, and at an early age she made an appearance as the prize student from the Conservatory of Music in the Tschaikowsky and Liszt Concertos with symphony orchestra.

Singing, however, had always interested this young artist, and when she heard the Italian Opera Company after one of their gala appearances in her vicinity, her ambitions to study this art could not be checked. Her parents considered the stage a profession not fit for any nice girl and young Zinaida was forced to take singing lessons in secret and pay for them with her own money. A benefit concert was given and her services were called upon. Her family acquiesced with readiness and were surprised at the beauty of her voice. No inkling did they have of the hours that she had spent in practice.

The revolution became an actuality, and Zinaida Nicolina's family were among the first to feel its effects. Their home was burned, but the family escaped with their lives and found temporary security in the Crimea.

Friends of Zinaida's father were important in Turkish diplomatic circles, and through them she managed to be smuggled through to Turkey. One dark night a drab figure completely covered by a large gray cloak wandered anxiously up and down the street. An equally inconspicuous shape bumped into her, presumably by mistake. A quiet exit was effected, and thus did Zinaida Nicolina, at the age of 18, manage to make an entry into Constantinople.

Wins Her Way in Turkey.

There the young Russian had most unusual experiences. She was presented to Sultana Rafia, daughter of the late Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey, and was welcomed indefinitely as a guest at her palace. Young Zinaida proceeded to learn Turkish, and for nine months was companion to the Sultana.

Michael Tolstoy, son of the world-famous writer, heard her sing and was so impressed by her voice that he persuaded her to go to Paris, where he agreed to arrange a series of concerts for her.

France was thus the next step in the career of this promising young artist. For the first time in her life she made a really professional appearance. Her offering to the public was the real music of Russia, both folk songs and classics, and her success was instantaneous. Her audiences were distinguished ones and she entertained at many private parties. Millerand, President of the French Republic, recognized her talents, as did Ambassador Myron Herrick, and as a result she was presented at several diplomatic functions. It was thus that Alfonso, King of Spain, heard her sing, and it was thus that Emanuel, King of Portugal, heard her and congratulated her on the beauty of her voice.

Snap in Chauve Souris.

During one of her concerts in Paris a short, stocky man, dark of hair and complexion, might have been seen in the audience listening attentively to her singing. This was Balieff, director of the Russian Chauve Souris. He needed a coloratura soprano for "The Nightingale," and had been unable to find one. The concert was hardly at an end before he rushed up to the young artist and soon arranged that, in the approaching American production of the Chauve Souris, Zinaida Nicolina would play an important part.

For a year she remained with the Chauve Souris, only leaving it to sing in several of Murray Anderson's productions at the Paramount Theater in New York City. A concert tour of large American cities followed, and charity concerts and private entertainments kept the young Russian busy.

Mme Nicolina's talents have been used in many ways. She was largely responsible for the popularization of the Russian Swan and the Krechma Restaurant, and her recent engagement at the Club Richman was so successful that it was extended into 16 weeks. In vaudeville the result was the same.

Becomes Radio Star.

It was not until her engagement as a featured artist of the Russian program, "Around the Samovar" that Mme. Nicolina became a recognized radio star. Her excellent work caused her to be engaged as La Palina in the two programs of that name that are heard weekly over stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The goal of this talented artist is to sing at Covent Garden in London. She has retained the same desire to sing in opera that she acquired years ago in Russia, when, as a child, she stole away to the theater and listened to the Italian Opera Company.

In the meantime, she is satisfying herself with reproducing in America the color and atmosphere of the gypsies, a task for which she is well equipped. During her youth on her family's estate at Koursk the gypsies used to assemble and even after she had moved to other parts of Russia young Zinaida returned each summer to her birthplace to study first hand the songs of these wanderers. Even in her dress she reproduces this gypsy atmosphere.

Reasons fo Power Tubes.

Power tubes are power handlers. The mere installation of a power tube in a set does not mean more volume. The increase of power must be obtained in the sta[ge] prior to the power stage. A [power] tube, however, will give smoo[ther] and better operation with the [same] ent volume from a set. It will [also] improve selectivity of a set. [The] 171 A requires "B" voltage [of] 180 for best results. About [90] 45 volts of "C" battery are required.

Radio Trade Notes

Regular sales courses, to fit young men to become radio salesmen and service men, are planned by the Aeolian Co. of Missouri, R. C. A. Radiola distributer. There is a real shortage of qualified radio salesmen and executives in this territory, according to H. B. Levy, general manager of the wholesale division of the Aeolian Co. The coming of the AC electric set, the AC screen grid receivers and the rapid general development of the radio industry and merchandising have created many business opportunities, he said.

Levy, John H Boos Jr., of the Radiola sales promotion department, and Henry J. Free, manager of the radio wholesale department, were scheduled to make an airplane trip of 1600 miles yesterday dropping printed matter about the sales courses over 100 or so towns in Missouri and Illinois.

Rudy Vallee, the orchestra leader whose broadcasts are heard weekly over coast-to-coast networks, has had an Amrad receiver, the "Duet" model, installed in his home, the Geller, Ward & Hasner Co., distributer, is informed.

The new Amrads are known as the "Bel Canto" line, and are housed in specially designed cabinets built of rare and imported woods matched and finished.

The chassis is designed to use the AC screen grid tubes for ultra sensitivity, and has 45 super power tubes in push pull audio.

Control of volume is unusually smooth and free from distorted effects.

Without a dissenting voice, the stockholders of the Chas. Freshman Co., Inc., have voted to change the name of the organization to Earl Radio Corporation in honor of its president. This change of name is recognition that C. A. Earl, the president, has inspired the success of the company during the past year and a half.

"Only by this change will the public and trade properly associate our product, C. A. Earl radio, with the company that has sponsored it," said W. J. Keyes, vice president of the corporation.

The new Courier receivers, made by the United Reproducers Corporation, were shown to dealers Thursday night at a meeting and banquet at Hotel Chase held by the Shapleigh Hardware Co., distributer. There was the more interest in the Courier sets because one model has the new Kylectron, condenser type, speaker.

The Courier has three AC screen grid tubes, power detection and a combination resistance coupled and push pull transformer audio system. Two of the three principal models have dynamic speakers. The sets with dynamic speakers have automatic line voltage control and automatic volume control are features. Use of the new Hazeltine constant gain coil makes for equal amplification on all wave lengths.

Furniture is very attractive. One console is in fine American walnut and gumwood with side panels and doors of matched burl walnut and Carpathian elm burl on the posts. Another has front and doors of matched burl walnut with overlay of burl maple. The third is much the same, but with differences in the design.

These receivers are made by a corporation that is a result of the merger of the United Radio Co., Precision Products Co., Newcombe-Hawley Co. and Buckeye Cabinet Co.

The principle of the Kylectron speaker is relatively simple, the device consisting of two energized plates separated by an insulating compound. The plates are of perforated aluminum, the rear plate rigid, the front plate flexible and covered with a coating of aluminum foil. A simple transformer device supplies the current for polarizing the speaker, and while it develops some 600 volts the current is of such a character that it is impossible for anyone to be injured by it.

Reproduction by the Kylectron equipped Courier set and from a special Kylectron speaker Thursday night was so clear, so free from distortion at any volume, that the dealers present were much impressed.

Speakers at the banquet included W. K. Jackson, western sales manager for the United Reproducers Corporation; D. T. Anderson, of the factory engineering department; F. R. Mihleisen, factory representative; R. H. Ogle, general sales manager of the Shapleigh Hardware Co., and T. R. Woods, buyer for the Shapleigh Co. and manager of its radio division.

A six weeks' course of instruction for radio salesmen is planned by the St. Louis Radio Trades Association, to begin about Sept. 16. Arrangements have been made with a noted sales educator and conductor of salesmen's schools to direct the course. Details were discussed at a dinner meeting Friday night.

The man engaged to direct the association's sales course is Dr. George Allison, who has won a wide reputation as sales educational research manager for the Mewa Meadows Manufacturing Co. of Bloomington, Ill. He is recognized as possibly the best instructor in this country of specialty salesmen.

Several hundred Steinite radio distributers are expected to attend a convention at the Steinite Co.'s new plant at Fort Wayne, Ind., tomorrow. Steinite's latest receiver, details of which have been kept secret, is to be shown.

The Fort Wayne factory can employ 3000 persons and produce a maximum of 2000 sets a day.

The completed series of "fifteenth anniversary" automatic models, just announced by the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago, will be known as models 52, 53, 54 and 55.

Zenith introduces in its new models a new design of screen grid chassis, said to be the first to utilize two stages of push-pull audio amplification successfully in a scientifically designed screen grid circuit. By the use of double push-pull Zenith achieves fidelity to tone as well as full volume without distortion. Nine tubes with rectifier are used, including three of the 224 screen grid type.

All of the models have Zenith automatic tuning.

Remote control of automatic tuning, enabling operation of the set from any room or part of the house, makes its appearance as an additional feature of the Model 55.

Ellery W. Stone, president of Kolster Radio Corporation, announces that Kolster's manufacturing subsidiary, Brandes Products Corporation, has been licensed since Oct. 1, 1927, under the Lowell and Dunmore—Dubilier patents which were upheld on Aug. 12 in the United States District Court at Wilmington in the suit brought by the Dubilier Corporation against Radio Corporation of America, and the Kolster products therefore are fully protected under the patents in question.

The Temple Corporation has just signed contracts for construction of a plant in Chicago with sufficient floor space for the manufacture of 250,000 radio receivers in a year. The plant and its administration building will cost more than $500,000 and provide over 300,000 square feet of "all daylight" floor space.

This is the fifth plant that the Temple Corporation has been forced to provide in 18 months. It manufactures Templetone standard and screen grid receivers and Temple electro-dynamic speakers. The new plant will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1, according to Alfred Marhcev, president and general manager.

Production now is at the rate of nearly 1000 sets a day. The company started in the receiver set field from "scratch" from a sales standpoint. Since March 1 a sales organization of 65 jobbers and 3000 dealers has been built up, and more than $10,000,000 worth of business placed on the books in less than four months.

casting stations and musical leaders are helping to make this possible by discovering each year promising new American singers, through the National Radio Audition, and presenting them for the Atwater Kent Foundations, scholarships. CONCEALED RECEIVERS FORESEEN

Artist's conception of a future radio installation, with the set, a plain metal cabinet, in a closet or in the basement, operation being by remote control. The speaker is a picture on the wall.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.

An evolution in radio receiver installation in the home is in prospect, says some engineers.

An increased tendency toward remote control for tuning has led them to express the belief that the speaker and receiver are to be divorced again, with the receiver proper a plain metal box and the speaker alone an example of the cabinetmaker's art.

If not next year, then the following year, they expect the up-to-date radio installation to consist of three units, the principal of which, the set, will find its present elaborate housing replaced by a metal cabinet, containing only a knob or two, for testing, and with two cables leading therefrom.

The set would be installed in a closet or in the basement, out of the way. One cable would lead to a remote control box and the other to the speaker. The remote control would permit full operation of the receiver, by push button.

The speaker could be a dynamic or the new electrostatic or condenser "talker." Both lend themselves to construction for hanging on the wall. The dynamic could be built to fit into a corner of the room, while the condenser speaker can be made in the form of a picture, with tapestry over the outlet depicting a landscape or other scene. An adequate baffle board would be provided in either case.

Girl of Five Years Plays Solo on KMOX

A feature of the concert by John Meiszner's orchestra over KMOX this morning, from 8:45 to 10:30, will be a piano solo by Meiszner's little daughter, Louise, who will be celebrating her fifth birthday. Her father will play a flute obligato for her solo. Little Louise has that great asset for a musician—absolute pitch.

The program will be announced, as usual, by Allen Taylor.

the greatest combination of big car features ever offered at or near $745

The Landaulet Sedan Body by Fisher

You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to own a Pontiac Big Six. Small down payment—often more than covered by our liberal allowance for your present car. Then a few dollars monthly. Lowest available handling and financing charges. Come in today for an appraisal of the car you are driving now.

2-Door Sedan, f.o.b. Pontiac, Mich.

Canvass the whole range of the low-priced sixes—and you will find nothing anywhere to compare with the value offered by the Pontiac Big Six. It is so definitely superior to everything else in its field that thousands of motorists have placed their orders after the most thorough inspection. For Pontiac looks like a big car—and that is what it actually is. Its smart new bodies by Fisher in a variety of colors—suggest the power—the speed—the dependability—the luxurious comfort that Pontiac so generously provides. It offers each of these qualities with that lavishness you associate only with expensive automobiles. Big car qualities—every one—and contributed by such features as those you see listed below. Come in for a demonstration. A few moments on the road in a Pontiac Big Six will convince you that it presents the greatest combination of big car features ever offered at or near $745.

1 A 200-cubic-inch L-head engine yielding 60 horsepower at 3000 r. p. m.
2 The Harmonic Balancer which smooths out torsional crankshaft vibration at all speeds and lengthens engine life.
3 The G-M-R cylinder head which increases efficiency of combustion and reduces spark knock and thumping to the minimum, using ordinary gasoline.
4 The Cross-Flow Radiator—an exclusive Oakland development—which assures efficient engine cooling all the year 'round and increases smooth performance.
5 Automatic temperature control with water pump to assure positive water circulation and eliminate need for radiator shutters.
6 A sturdy, 53-pound, short-stroke crankshaft—fully counter-weighted and perfectly balanced to reduce bearing pressure and prolong the life of the engine.
7 Airplane type, interchangeable, bronze-backed main bearings to assure minimum bearing wear.
8 A 1¼ inch carburetor—unusually large for a car at Pontiac's price—providing ample gas supply for maximum power at all engine speeds.
9 Gasoline pump—to assure positive fuel feed under all conditions and prevent starving on long hills and hard pulls.
10 Special expansion type piston pins—largest in any car in this field—which assure close fit over a longer period of time.
11 Full-pressure adjustable lubricating system to give correct amount of lubrication regardless of engine speed.
12 Crankcase ventilation of pressure-vacuum design, with separate air cleaner—to prevent water vapor from diluting motor oil.
13 Two completely independent braking systems providing an extra measure of driving safety seldom found on any but high-priced cars.
14 Four-wheel, internal-expanding, self-energizing service brakes—silent, protected against rain and dirt—operating at top efficiency in any weather and requiring minimum attention.
15 An emergency brake operating on the transmission, entirely independent of the service brakes, and complying with the laws of all states.
16 Specially moulded, non-squeak brake linings which often serve for more than 30,000 miles without replacement.
17 Specially designed bodies by Fisher of composite, high quality hardwood and heavy gauge steel construction—free from squeaks and rattles—weather-tight—rugged and durable—with wide, comfortable, deeply upholstered seats and ample leg room and head room.
18 Large, strong, attractive, flaring fenders—76 inches across and affording maximum protection from splash.
19 A chromium-plated radiator shell of distinctive design, 34½ inches high.
20 A variety of attractive body colors in the year's most popular Duco shades.
21 Specially designed interior fittings by Ternstedt.
22 Fisher VV type windshield—easily regulated by driver and secure in any position.
23 Driver's seat, easily adjustable even while car is in motion, and affording maximum driving comfort.
24 Semi-coincidental ignition and transmission lock. Key can be removed only when in "locked" position.
25 Instruments, including gasoline gauge, individually mounted on the dash in raised ebony finish panel, lighted by two hooded lamps with separate switch.
26 Foot-controlled, depressible beam headlights for maximum night driving safety and ease of control.

Even this does not cover the entire list of Pontiac's big car features. Dozens of important additional items all contribute their share to your motoring satisfaction. And all combine to make the Pontiac Big Six the greatest value in its field.

Pontiac Big Six, $745 to $895, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Bumpers, spring covers and Lovejoy shock absorbers regular equipment at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only reasonable charges for handling and for financing when the Time Payment Plan is used.

Real Estate — REA

PART SEVEN.

HOTEL MELBOURNE ADDITION TO BE STARTED SEPT. 3

18-Story Structure, to Cost $1,000,000, Will Be on Lindell Frontage of 51 Feet With Depth of 162.

PROJECT OWNED BY F. J. CORNWELL CO.

Ground Cost Said to Be $3000 a Foot — 200 Rooms With Bath and Banquet Hall to Be Added

By Berry Moore.

Excavation is to be begun Sept. 3 for an 18-story addition to Hotel Melbourne, a 14-story structure at the northwest corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard, to cost $1,000,000. The new building will be constructed and owned by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co.

Occupying a site 51 by 162 feet on the north side of Lindell, the addition will be between the present Hotel Melbourne and the Elks Club. The grounds on which the addition will stand is now occupied by the residence of the late Dr. William F. Kier, from whose estate it was recently purchased by Alex M. and F. J. Cornwell. While the price paid for it was not made public, it is understood to have been at the rate of $3000 a front foot, or $153,000, a new peak for ground values on Lindell boulevard.

To Have Novel Features.

The new building will comprise 200 rooms, each with bath and shower. Attractive features of the first floor will be a ball room and a banquet hall, with a seating capacity of 500, and three private dining rooms available singly or together. The building will be provided with a kitchen and laundry facilities of the most modern type.

The present Melbourne Hotel structure, erected in 1923 by Alex M. and Fred J. Cornwell, Jr., has been a notable success. With the new addition it will have approximately 500 rooms, each with bath. It will have a frontage on Lindell of 162 feet and on Grand of 130 feet, a total frontageon the two streets of 292 feet. Cost of the two structures will total more than $4,000,000. These figures do not take into consideration the unprecedented appreciation in ground values on both Grand and Lindell boulevard, since the present hotel structure was erected.

The site is one of the most imposing in the city for a large hotel structure on a pretentious scale. No other part of the city has witnessed a more marked development than that district of which the intersection of Grand and Lindell boulevard is the center.

Plans for the addition were drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, who designed the present Hotel Melbourne.

Other Prospects for Lindell.

The southeast corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard recently was acquired under a 99-year lease by Barney F. and Otto J. Diekmann. The site has 103 feet on Lindell and 144 feet on Grand. It is occupied by a modern two-story building under a 10-year lease to the Lurie Motor Co. This site has been in urgent demand, especially for large hotel projects. Under the 99-year lease, the lessees are given an option to purchase the fee at a designated price. The Lurie lease, which has about eight years to run, however, promises to defer to the erection of a new building on this site.

Plans have been made for a large hotel structure for the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue as an addition to the Coronado Hotel. Several months ago Preston J. Bradshaw obtained a permit to construct a tunnel under Lindell boulevard to connect the new building with the Coronado Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue. Plans for the addition have been made by Preston Bradshaw, who designed the Coronado Hotel.

$6000 a Foot Offer Reported.

Several offers were reported during the week for holdings on downtown Olive street and on Delmar boulevard, which, it is believed, foreshadowed large building projects, notably hotel enterprises.

It is understood that James S. Ohio, vice president of the State Bank of Wellston, has declined an offer of $6000 a front foot, or $180,000, for 30 by 106 feet on the north side of Olive between Twelfth and Thirteenth street just west of and adjoining the north and south alley of this block. Several attractive offers have also been submitted recently for the 49 by 106 feet adjoining on Olive street on the west, owned by William Maffitt and others.

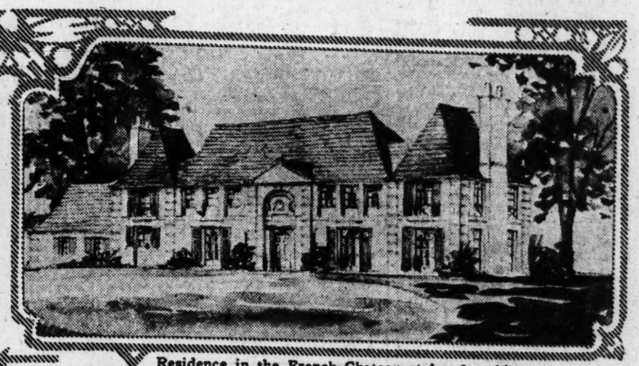
Uptown Hotel Project, New Suburban Home and Another Planned

Architect's perspective of the Melbourne Hotel, northwest corner of Lindell and Grand boulevards, as it will appear when the proposed 18-story addition on Lindell boulevard is completed. It is to be built by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Company from plans by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect.



Residence in the French Chateau style of architecture to be erected in Huntleigh Village overlooking the Bridlespur Country Club by Edward L. Bakewell, developer.—Maritz & Young, Inc., architects.

Recently completed residence of William H. Boehmer in Hampton Park on the south side of the Clayton road, just east of the Hanley road.

HOTEL MELBOURNE ADDITION TO BE STARTED SEPT. 3

18-Story Structure, to Cost $1,000,000, Will Be on Lindell Frontage of 51 Feet With Depth of 162.

PROJECT OWNED BY F. J. CORNWELL CO.

Ground Cost Said to Be $3000 a Foot — 200 Rooms With Bath and Banquet Hall to Be Added

By Berry Moore.

Excavation is to be begun Sept. 3 for an 18-story addition to Hotel Melbourne, a 14-story structure at the northwest corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard, to cost $1,000,000. The new building will be constructed and owned by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co.

Occupying a site 51 by 162 feet on the north side of Lindell, the addition will be between the present Hotel Melbourne and the Elks Club. The grounds on which the addition will stand is now occupied by the residence of the late Dr. William F. Kier, from whose estate it was recently purchased by Alex M. and F. J. Cornwell. While the price paid for it was not made public, it is understood to have been at the rate of $3000 a front foot, or $153,000, a new peak for ground values on Lindell boulevard.

To Have Novel Features.

The new building will comprise 200 rooms, each with bath and shower. Attractive features of the first floor will be a ball room and a banquet hall, with a seating capacity of 500, and three private dining rooms available singly or together. The building will be provided with a kitchen and laundry facilities of the most modern type.

The present Melbourne Hotel structure, erected in 1923 by Alex M. and Fred J. Cornwell, Jr., has been a notable success. With the new addition it will have approximately 500 rooms, each with bath. It will have a frontage on Lindell of 142 feet and on Grand of 130 feet, a total frontageon the two streets of 292 feet. Cost of the two structures will total more than $4,000,000. These figures do not take into consideration the unprecedented appreciation in ground values on both Grand and Lindell boulevard, since the present hotel structure was erected.

The site is one of the most imposing in the city for a large hotel structure on a pretentious scale. No other part of the city has witnessed a more marked development than that district of which the intersection of Grand and Lindell boulevard is the center.

Plans for the addition were drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, who designed the present Hotel Melbourne.

Other Prospects for Lindell.

The southeast corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard recently was acquired under a 99-year lease by Barney F. and Otto J. Diekmann. The site has 103 feet on Lindell and 144 feet on Grand. It is occupied by a modern two-story building under a 10-year lease to the Lurie Motor Co. This site has been in urgent demand, especially for large hotel projects. Under the 99-year lease, the lessees are given an option to purchase the fee at a designated price. The Lurie lease, which has about eight years to run, however, promises to defer to the erection of a new building on this site.

Plans have been made for a large hotel structure for the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue as an addition to the Coronado Hotel. Several months ago Preston J. Bradshaw obtained a permit to construct a tunnel under Lindell boulevard to connect the new building with the Coronado Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue. Plans for the addition have been made by Preston Bradshaw, who designed the Coronado Hotel.

Several offers were reported during the week for holdings on downtown Olive street and on Delmar boulevard, which, it is believed, foreshadowed large building projects, notably hotel enterprises.

It is understood that James B. Olds, vice president of the State Bank of Wellston, has declined an offer of $6000 a front foot, or $540,000, for 30 by 106 feet on the north side of Olive between Twelfth and Thirteenth street just west of and adjoining the north and south alley of this block. Several attractive offers have also been submitted recently for the 49 by 106 feet adjoining on Olive street on the west, owned by William Maffitt and others.

This quarter of the block, which includes the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Olive streets, occupied by the Park Hotel, has figured in plans for various large hotel projects. It is opposite the new Missouri Pacific Building and will overlook the Memorial Plaza, which will greatly enhance its value.

An offer of $70,000 was refused yesterday for 119 feet of vacant ground on the south side of Delmar boulevard just east of the Wabash viaduct. The site is opposite the Wabash passenger station at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont which is a factor to be considered.

It has resisted many offe since the viaduct and new passenger station were completed. It is owned by a client of the firm of Keane & Franke.

RAMONA HILLS PARK AUCTION SALE TODAY

Picnic Grounds at Carsonville Divided into 100-Foot Lots.

One of St. Louis County's most frequented entertainment grounds, Ramona Hills Park at Carsonville, will be sold at public auction today at 2:30 p. m. The tract is divided into 100-foot lots, with a total frontage of 12,000 feet.

This wooded tract is traversed by a main drive leading from Brown road, adjoining Country Day School. Its eastern line is one-fourth of a mile west of Carson road, south of the dog track.

The sale will include the amusement equipment, which is legally classed as personal property of the park management. This includes Ferris wheel, merry-go-round, dance hall, Shetland ponies, carts and harness, tables, chairs and counter equipment.

The grounds are reached by the Kirkwood-Ferguson street car line.

Ramona Park was operated successfully for 39 seasons. This year, the fortieth season, was unprofitable because of a barrier placed across the entrance by the Union Electric Co., following a dispute with the park management when the latter sought to build a vehicular entrance under the company's high-tension wires. According to the management, the barrier prevented the booking of picnics for the summer.

Special features of Sunshine Homes on Wanda avenue are marble sills throughout the house, tile wall in the bathroom, pedestal washstand, shower bath, genuine Kasota marble mantel, hardwood floors throughout and many other new and unique ideas.

The second unit of six Sunshine Homes adjoining those sold is nearing completion.

It contains a large living room, dining room, large two-story entrance hall, two maids rooms and chauffeur's room on the first floor, and four large master bedrooms, with connecting baths, on the second floor.

The residence has been designed and is being erected under the supervision of Maritz & Young, Inc., architects. The property on which the building is to be erected is adjacent to that of Beverly Jones, who is having plans for his residence prepared by Study & Farrar.

TWO IMPORTANT LEASES MARK WEEK'S ACTIVITIES

Miller Chain Store Takes 825 Locust St. Five-Story Building—Sears, Roebuck & Co. Obtains Market Street Warehouse.

Record leases for buildings in the retail and industrial centers of the city, rather than sales, were the outstanding features in the week in real estate.

One of the most noteworthy was that of a 20-year lease of a five-story building at 825 Locust street, acquired by I. Miller & Son, Inc., a nationally known retail shoe concern, through the Isaac T. Cook Co., in connection with Cornet & Zelbig. Another was on behalf of Sears, Roebuck & Co., for 29,000 square feet in a building with shipping facilities in the 3800 block of Market street, made through the Franciscus Realty Co.

While not disclosed, the rental perscribed in these instances established new records for buildings in those locations.

Maurice Miller of New York, president of the Miller concern, who, with his architect, Louis H. Friedland, has been here for several days, announced that the Locust street building would be remodeled and altered on an extensive scale.

Front of Modern Effect.

As described by Friedland, plans contemplate a new front, designed in the trasitional type of architecture, carried out in marble and bronze ornaments. An attractive feature will be a vestibule entrance, at each side of which will be a show window, with floors of Italian Marquetrie and background of maple, English hardwood and satinwood inlay.

Following the example of Chicago, Baltimore, Kansas City, Washington and Philadelphia, the new I. Miller shop will use the French influence for its decorations.

I. Miller & Sons is one of the largest manufacturers of exclusive women's footwear with an annual business in excess of $11,000,000. It has stores in 228 cities throughout the United States.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. Warehouse.

The space in the Market street building was acquired by Sears, Roebuck & Co. for warehouse purposes to serve as a supply depot for its two big department stores recently established at Grand avenue and Winnebago street, a short block south of Gravois avenue, and on Kingshighway just north of Easton, both in new buildings especially built for them. Growth of the stores has been on a scale making imperative additional warehouse space here, according to Stewart Warren, local manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The Market street building is of fireproof construction, and on the Wabash Railroad, with the tracks available in connection with the second floor of the building. The goods are taken by elevator to the first floor, where there is an inclosed platform for trucks to load and unload. The property is owned by the Independent Supply Co., of which I. R. Goldberg is president.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. were represented in the negotiations for the lease by James M. Franciscus, president of the Franciscus Realty Co., who handled negotiations for the sites for the two department stores, which established record valuations.

SINGER-KLEIN REALTY CO. MOVES TO 909 CHESTNUT

The Singer-Klein Realty Co. has taken ground floor quarters at 909 Chestnut street, in the new Ferro Garage Building. The company is composed of Theodore I. Singer, and Louis Klein. Its sales staff includes M. I. Robbins, J. Y. Fishman, I. Rosen, J. D. Block. Formal opening of the new quarters will be tomorrow.

The Singer-Klein Realty Co. handled all the negotiations for the site of the Ferro Garage Building, embracing a quarter of a block at the northwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, recently completed at a cost of $1,000,000. It is exclusive rental agent for the stores which line the Chestnut and Ninth street fronts of the building.

In the final analysis, the difference between a paying investment and one that consistently falls short of earning a satisfactory return is often comparatively trivial.

According to an announcement made yesterday by Peter Greig, managing director of the Society, arrangements have been completed for the rights to more than 15 plays, a stage director in the person of Elmer Brown of New York has been retained, and the Plaza Theater is already in the process of being reconditioned.

"We have had our troubles," said Mr. Greig, "but they haven't prevented us from giving shows of the finest quality. Both the public and the critics have testified that we are first rate showmen and it is on the basis of that accomplishment that we can promise to St. Louis theatergoers a winter season of plays that will set new standards here.

"This is not so much talk. There is plenty of uncertainty in any sort of theatrical venture but it must be remembered that in this case we will be dealing with plays of proved quality—plays such as "Coquette," "The Command to Love," Galsworthy's "Escape" and "Young Woodley." And that we will bring to their production all the resources of modern stage craftsmanship. Some of the critics were kind enough to call attention to the care that we devoted to turning out a finished ensemble in the Garden Theater productions. A similar freshness, suppleness and cohesiveness will be observable in our plays at the Plaza. Though we intend to bring a number of visiting stars to the Plaza during the winter, the dramatic and emotional significance of the play itself will never be sacrificed in order to permit a star to shine a little more brightly."

THE plans of the Society involve eight performances a week at the Plaza beginning Oct. 15. The opening will be on Tuesday and the ordinary play will close on the following Sunday. Matinees will be given on Thursday and Saturday—the Thursday matinee being a "bargain" affair with the top price set at $1.

Monday night of each week will be given over to a dress rehearsal. Mr. Greig believes that several of the plays which have already been procured will prove so popular as to justify a run of two or three weeks, in which case the extra receipts will be devoted to the production of a play of limited appeal, one of Dunsany's or Maisefield's.

The ordinary run of plays during the first season will embrace plays that have been successful in New York or Europe, but have not, for the most part, been shown in St. Louis.

The staging of the plays will reflect a sound but modern technique. A false prescenium and frame for scenery will be built according to the plan now used by the New York Theater Guild. The lighting will involve a free use of baby spots with as little of footlights as possible.

Though the society will not attempt too much experimentation during the first season, it will not lose sight of its intention to become an integral part of the city's cultural life. Although the company of players will be recruited in New York, says Mr. Greig, there will be two or three places for St. Louisans. These places will be given to the most talented persons available but they will be required to maintain a high standard or they will be removed and the openings be given to others.

ANOTHER subsidiary activity of the society will be the promotion of a Little Theater in which all sorts of experimental ideas will be worked out. Mr. Greig declared that ever since the Garden Theater opening he has been receiving verbally or through the mails suggestions about staging, lighting, costuming and the like. In order to try to test these ideas, a laboratory is necessary and a Little Theater will not only supply that need but will also serve as a training school for young St. Louisans who propose to take up the stage as a career.

The society also proposes to work hand in hand with the amateur theatrical groups in the community. Miss Gertrude Knott, who for the last several years has been engaged in organizing Little Theater groups in North Carolina has been engaged as a sort of consultant authority for amateur productions.

Whenever necessary she supervises both the business and artistic side of any production that an amateur society wants to put on. If these groups demonstrate enough interest in the idea a tournament of plays will be promoted, the winning organization will be

Municipal Theater Closes Tonight

The eleventh al fresco production of the Municipal Theater closes tonight. The performance of Shakespeare's spectacular musical comedy has been produced with a cast and chorus numbering is the most ambitious ever attempted in said to be the largest cast ever assembled at the Municipal Theater.

The Municipal Theater season, which opened on June 3 for a season in Forest Park, has presented 12 musical plays, one each week, and hered without a break in the weekly program. The season will close June 2 with "Rio Rita," which will be followed by a new weekly succession of musical productions, which will then produce "The Prince." "Whoopee," "The Air," "The Bohemian Girl," "The Bohemian Marie," "Princess Flavia," "The Enchantress," "The Vagabond King," "Babes in Toyland," "Golden Dawn" and other musical attractions have been presented previously at the Municipal Theater. Winter Plans of Theater Society

Elmer Brown Engaged as Director for Company That Will Give Eight Performances a Week at the Plaza Theater.

FINANCIAL annoyances arising out of a deficit for the summer season at the Garden Theater have had no apparent effect on the plans of the St. Louis Theater Society for the winter season at the Plaza. According to an announcement made yesterday by Peter Greig, managing director of the society, arrangements have been completed for the rights to more than 15 plays, a stage director in the person of Elmer Brown of New York has been retained, and the Plaza Theater is already in the process of being reconditioned.

"In short," said Mr. Greig, "we will utilize and develop the resources of the community whenever it is possible to do so without crippling our artistic program. We have already shown our good faith in this respect by commissioning a St. Louisan, Madame Tamara Darialova to put on a ballet when we needed one. As for the economic aspect of the situation all I can say is that if the public responds to our winter plays anything like it did to the Garden Theater productions, we will realize more than enough to carry through our program on a generous scale and to pay off the summer deficit. This is not an unreasonable expectation."

Municipal Opera Closes Season Tonight

The eleventh annual season of al fresco productions at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park closes tonight with the final performance of "Golden Dawn," a spectacular musical play which has been produced with augmented cast and chorus. The final offering is the most pretentious and said to be the costliest ever staged at the Municipal Theater.

The Municipal Theater Association, which directs the summer season in Forest Park, announced 12 musical pieces for 1929 and adhered without a change to the set program. The season opened on June 3 with "The Love Call." In weekly succession the association then produced "The Student Prince," "Wildflower," "Castles in the Air," "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Bohemian Girl," "Rose Marie," "Prince of Pilsen," "The Enchantress," "The Vagabond King," "Babes in Toyland" and "Golden Dawn." Seven of the 12 attractions had been presented previously at the Municipal Theater. The new works were "The Love Call," "Wildflower," "Castles in the Air," "The Enchantress" and "Golden Dawn."

Garden Theater Favorite to Wed

VIRGINIA SMITH, who proved a great favorite during the season of the Garden Theater which closed last night, will be married on September 14 and is contemplating retirement from the stage. She announced to members of the company yesterday her approachin marriage to Gus Fleischmann of New York.

Miss Smith had never played in a stock company before coming to St. Louis and she says that, though the prospect did not seem too pleasing at the start of the season, she has enjoyed her work here very much.

Another Expert Tells Why He Does Not Like the Talking Pictures

By ROBERT LITTELL,
Dramatic Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Here we are face to face with another Broadway season, which some learned historian will please correct me for saying is the 133d consecutive display of New York theatrical wares. It may be a good season—it looks as if it might be—but how much is there left to remember of the 132 seasons that have gone before it? Where are the shows of yesteryear? How much will the shows of this year mean to us once they are over? For the most part, precious little. It is a safe bet that we may look forward to a season which consists of seven parts of dismal mediocrity, two parts modern entertainment and one part discovery, thrill and talent.

There will, sure as shooting in a bootlegger melodrama, a dozen thrillers with strong-jawed men telling crooks to shut up if they don't want to be filled with lead; there will be homey, squashy little plays about good tired people in a small town; there will be several bushels of musicals with new dances, new songs and new legs almost indistinguishable from the old; there will be new problem plays about the gin-toting younger generation, plays about mountaineers, adultery, high society and occultism, plays in Italian Renaissance costume, in golf pants, in tuxedos, and in underclothes; plays by retired lawyers, school teachers, button makers, and a few plays by playwrights. There will be plenty of plays (at least one a week) put on because somebody loves somebody else, plays brought to brief life by the financial oxygen of an angel who would do much better to give his money to a home for astigmatic dogs. There will be good, sound, uninteresting comedies by old-timers, and brave stabs at truth, character, beauty, humor or what not by newcomers and once in a while there will be a flare of something real and new which makes one believe that the theater is an art and not a means of paying the overhead on large parcels of expensive real estate.

There will be all sorts of things, mostly pretty discouraging, but all of them, for some reason or another; will be interesting, if only as samples of the American daydream, of the mild insanity which takes hold of so many people when left alone with their imaginations and a sheet of blank paper. They will all be different, no matter how good or bad, and it is this diversity which, much more than the quality of what he is dealing with, makes the critic's life possible and keeps him from homicide or suicide or a vice president's chair in some great big beautiful bank.

Waiting for the surprises of a New York theatrical season is like picking up a new hand off the bridge table—there may be kings and aces in it, but there is just as likely to be nothing but sevens and eights. One always hopes and one usually loses. And as the season grows older, one begins to suspect that most of the face cards have been taken out of the pack. It has been so before, and I see no particular reason to suppose that history will not repeat itself. This is a gloomy view, and it is rather early in the season to take such a view, but the plain truth is that a lot of face cards really have been taken out of the pack. Along with of course a large quantity of one-eyed Jacks, many of the best talents of the legitimate stage are deserting the dear old muse and selling their services to the movies, soundies, talkies and squawkies. And why shouldn't they you will ask, and you will tell me that my complaint sounds like a 1905 farmer in a horse and buggy spluttering about them goldurned new-fangled automobiles. All right then, I won't complain, I won't put a stick in the wire wheels of progress; I shall merely state the facts.

The legitimate theater is quite definitely only the runner-up today. The talkie is boss of the whole works. And the talkie is just beginning. It is still in the stage of cranks, goggles and acetylene headlights; it can barely make 25 miles an hour; when you look back, years from now, on the talkies of 1929, they will seem as painful as the spotted flicker of the first moving pictures. I don't like the talkies,

First Rehearsal of Mammoth Chorus

The first rehearsal of the chorus of 1000, or more voices, to be heard at the new Arena, 5700 Oakland avenue, Sunday evening, Oct. 13, will be held at the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association Hall, 3535 Pine street, at 8 o'clock next Tuesday evening, with another rehearsal at the same time the following Friday, it was announced by Ben G. Brinkman, president of the National Exhibition Company. The chorus, said to be the largest ever heard in St. Louis, will sing operatic selections, accompanied by a 75-piece band, as an added attraction to the National Dairy Show, Horse Show, Poultry Show and St. Louis Fair to be held at the Arena at the same time. L. N. Moline, maestro of the St. Louis Grand Opera School, is training the chorus.

"We are anxious to encourage cultural interests of the city," said Brinkman, "and we extend a cordial invitation to the various choral societies of the city and to all persons interested in voice culture to attend the rehearsals."

For Film Fans Who Hate to Go Home

Grand Central Trying Out a Midnight Show and Other Skouras Houses Will Follow Suit if It Is Successful.

By JACK ALEXANDER.

A BIG city, Roscoe, never sleeps. It is the idea of a metropolis that someone shall always be awake and hooting up and down the boulevards while the other half is getting its four or five hours of shut-eye. One reason for this is that most of the population of every big rabbit-hutch is trying to forget its quiet past in places like Vinita Park and Kirkwood. Another is that the city has a considerable investment in street lights and not to use their brilliance would be tantamount to wasting the taxpayers' money.

So the city folks do their hooting and sleeping in shifts. It is so in New York and Chicago, is it not? And, therefore, argued the Skouras Brothers, why not in St. Louis? There being no audible objection, they ordained that St. Louis is to have a midnight movie, the performance starting at 11:30 p. m. The first one was held last night at the Grand Central. Another will be held next Wednesday and so on, the next Saturday and the next Wednesday and the next Saturday and the next Wednesday—have you got the hang of it?

This definitely puts St. Louis in the Big Time and fills (can you handle this one?) a long felt need. It seems there has always been a hiatus in our schedule of shifts here. The last movies were out at 11 p. m. Saturday and there was no one to burn the street lights until the public links golfers began to assemble around the first tee at 2 a. m. Sunday.

The midnight shows will be over about 1:30 a. m. The usual admission charge will prevail. If the plan proves successful, it will be taken up by the Missouri and later, probably, by the Ambassador.

POSSIBLY you have wondered how a motion picture press agent can greet each new film his house presents as "the epic of the century" and slather it with gushing superlatives indicating extreme passion, terror, excitement, comedy or pathos.

The answer is that no press agent goes through life that way, as is indicated in the advance publicity on Lon Chaney's "Thunder," which is shown at Loew's this week. It says, in part: "Permeating all the scenes is breath-taking adventure. Thundering locomotives rush out of the dark like fire-breathing monsters; the crack limited races the Mississippi flood—and wins; and men sacrifice their lives for their calling and so on."

Lon Chaney plays a gruff locomotive engineer in this "epic of the rails." Overshadowing the film, however, is the personal appearance of Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, crew of the champion endurance plane, the St. Louis Robin.

Just why the producers of "Why Leave Home" thought it necessary to change the name of "The Cradle Snatchers," from which stage success it was developed, is not apparent. But they did and it is on display at the Fox this week.

It is an all-talking, musical comedy version of the stage play and introduces a new dance. Walter Catlett, Broadway comedian, heads the cast which includes Sue Carol, Nick Stuart, David Rollins, Richard Keene, Dixie Lee, Jed Prouty and Laura Hamilton, if the names mean anything. The "plot" concerns three collegians, who call off their dates with chorus girls because they haven't any money and spend the evening teaching three married women how to dance. Isn't it tempting? Or is it?

Showing of the new Post-Dispatch-Universal newsreel began at the Missouri and Ambassador this week, in addition to a number of smaller houses in and around St. Louis, totaling about 100. The film jumps from place to place, showing scenes of news interest.

Muny and Garden Theater Stars on Bills at St. Louis

STELLA MAYHEW, who worked up something of a local following during the two weeks she appeared in "Hit the Deck" at the Garden Theater is one of the headliners at the St. Louis this week. Miss Mayhew will sing a number of song hits which have been associated with roles she has played in the past.

For the following week, the week beginning Aug. 31, the St. Louis management has engaged Florenz Ames and Sybilla Bowhan, two Municipal Opera favorites. Miss Bowhan will present a sketch which she used in previous vaudeville appearances called "Try It Again." Ames will work throughout the show in the capacity of master of ceremonies.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

By Helen Hurd

As All Dog Talkie Which Will Be One of Season's Novelties

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 24.

ANYONE from St. Louis lucky enough to have a friend who knew someone who could get them into the music department at Paramount, might run across the name "Irvin Talbot" on one of the office doors. That would not mean much, but in the event that the most pleasant Mr. Talbot should stick his head out of his office, the visitor, if he kept up on his musicians, would recognize the man who presided at the baton at the Missouri Theater when it opened. Or if his memory was good, he would remember the 16-year-old Isadore Cohen who conducted a 10-piece orchestra at the old Lindell Theater. Or maybe the guest of Hollywood would recall this man as one of the first violinists in the St. Louis Symphony under Max Zach. Or perhaps as the leader of the band of the Musicians Post of the American Legion. During his engagement at the Missouri, Mr. Talbot, then Mr. Cohen, met Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld and Felix Kahn who were connected with the Theater Division of Famous Players-Lasky. They took him away from St. Louis to New York where he had the position of musical director of the Rivoli. Later he became the director for the Paramount Theater, and after 15 months was made the supervisor of pit orchestras and organists for Publix Theaters Corporation. With the advent of synchronized accompaniment to silent pictures, and then the all sound and musical pictures, Mr. Talbot rose in the field to become the supervisor of orchestration for Paramount, which brought him to Hollywood. He has news, too, of interest to St. Louis music lovers concerning other musicians who have succumbed to the monetary lure of the movies. Michael Gusikoff, who was concert master of the Symphony, is in New York playing first violin in the Paramount Orchestra. Sylvan Noack, a St. Louis musician is also in Hollywood, playing at night at the Hollywood Bowl concerts, whose present conductor is Eugene Goossens. Mr. Noack plays in the afternoons in the Paramount Orchestra.

MIRIAM SEEGAR

MR. TALBOT had many interesting things to say about the intricacies of orchestral synchronization. "Unfortunately, due to stringent copyright laws," he said, "we are unable to avail ourselves of the wealth of beautiful music that makes up the regular music of our symphony orchestras, and so we are under the necessity of obtaining original music as the first step in synchronizing pictures. When the completed picture is viewed, then a cue sheet is drawn up indicating the various episodes to be set to music, and in keeping with their character, the kind of music most appropriate to them. After that, sections of the film are distributed to the composers. Then as the finished music begins to come in, it is pieced together until the entire score is completed. It is now the orchestra's turn to view the film after which they rehearse the various parts of the music. There is a final rehearsal, the recording device is set in motion and the orchestra plays the music for the first real while the picture is being run on the screen. The slightest slip, a miscue or tardy or hasty response to the directors' signal is sufficient to ruin the whole record and the entire thing has to be gone over. So terrific is the tension under which both the conductor and the musicians labor, they can stand only five or six hours a day of it. Many 'playbacks' show up the mistakes, and many 'retakes' remedy them. Each reel is gone over in the same way until the picture is completed."

The more important pictures which Mr. Talbot has scored are "The Letter," "Shopworn Angel," "The Wolf Song," "Beggars of Life" and some 30 others beside a number of short subjects. He and Mrs. Talbot, who St. Louis will remember as an accomplished musician, have been in Hollywood about a month. He is working on his first all-musical picture, "The Vagabond King," which is being made at the present time.

St. Louis has its quota of musicians in Hollywood. Dave Silverman and Leonid Leonardi, who will be remembered from the picture houses, are composing for Warners and First National.

METRO is making one of the most novel "talkies" in the whole history of the movies. It is a two reeler in which all of the actors are dogs and they will go through a regular performance of a drama. Hollywood of course is full of trained canine stars and about 20 of them have been assembled for this picture. The film is being shot before a silent camera with the trainers standing on the side lines directing their charges and telling them when to bark. Later human voices will be synchronized to the movement of the dogs' jaws and the effect, if all goes well, will make it appear that the pups are really doing the talking. The star of the outfit is Jiggs, a 6-year-old Boston terrier who is famous around all of the studios. This time, much to his disgust, which he makes no effort to hide, Jiggs is cast as a female impersonator and has to wear skirts as the leading lady of the show. The role he plays is that of Clara Bow Bow. Last week Jiggs was on his way to the set accompanied by one of his sons, a 11-month-old youngster called Peppo. Peppo got in the way of a studio truck and was run over and killed. That ended the picture taking for one day. Jiggs absolutely refused to do any of his stunts and would pay no attention to his master's commands. The next morning, however, catching the spirit of all old troupers who believe that "the show must go on" he went before the camera and clowned through his part.

A LITTLE 13-year-old girl from Kokomo, Ind., with blonde curls—the baby of a Chautauqua company playing the small towns under a big tent—one Sunday night was asked to offer a prayer at the vesper service. She prayed for nearly half an hour until her older sister, not wishing to curb her spiritual inclinations, but realizing that the audience was impatient, gently but firmly dragged her off the stage. The youthful mediator was Miriam Seegar, now a movie star, and the sister who probably saved the world from another woman evangelist was Dorothy Seegar, whom you will remember as one of the favorites at the Municipal Opera last year. Aside from that one occasion, during which she held the center of the stage for so long, her chief duties were carrying the Mikado's train in the Gilbert and Sullivan opera which the company rendered to the edification of all the Podunks and Squashvilles in the Middle West, and being the voice off-stage. But it was an experience, as anyone who has ever traveled with a Chautauqua outfit will admit. When Miriam Seegar found that her interviewer had been guilty of the same experience, we were immediately kindred souls and decided that all the fun in the movies couldn't come up to one week of times under the big tent. It ended in seeing who could tell the wildest tale, until the gasping public who had gathered at lunch to see the movie stars must have thought that we were just tourists. But they were wrong in Miriam Seegar. True, she came to Hollywood from England, where she was well known on the English screen, and has quite a following among folks who watch the doings of the stars at Elstree, which is the Hollywood of Britain. How she got to England, via the Chautauqua route, and back again to be selected to play opposite Adolphe Menjou in his first all-talking picture, "The Concert," is a story. After three years of the vaudust trail she went to New York with her sister, Dorothy. She soon found work on a musical comedy, where her performances brought her to the attention of Al Woods, the producer. He placed her under contract and sent her to London, where her first work was the leading feminine role in the English melodrama, "Crime."

FOR the following there years, her time was divided between the London stage and the British made motion pictures. Just prior to her return to America last April, she completed playing the leading feminine role in an Earnest Truax play, "Out Goes She," and at the same time finished her first talking picture experience in a short subject made for British International. She had been in Hollywood only a short while before her fragile beauty and her stage success attracted attention and she was placed under contract. She thinks English methods and American methods of making moving pictures are entirely different. In fact, she says, one has almost to learn all over again. But it won't take her long to get into the swing of Hollywood because Miriam is a smart girl for she started out to see the world under a Chautauqua tent.

THERE is one student in the Paramount studio school these days. Sometimes when there are other youngsters working on the lot, this chap has had company but for weeks now, he has been the one and only school boy around the place. Sixteen years old with movie ambition brought him to Hollywood from Rumania before talkies were the vogue. He was young enough, or old enough, or smart enough to trail Jesse L. Lasky around all over Paris begging him for a job in the movies. He is Paul Guertzman, who is known around Hollywood as Lasky's protege. Paul was working as a commercial photographer's apprentice in Paris—his family having moved from Rumania when he was only three months old, so he is only Rumanian by birth and not by education or language. Lasky, who is in charge of production at Paramount was visiting in Paris last year, and when Paul heard of it, he literally camped at Lasky's door. At the same place every night around dinner time, Lasky saw the boy and asked what he wanted. When he found out that the youngster was looking for a job, the answer was immediately "no," for there was nothing promising looking in this would-be actor. Lasky, or one of his secretaries had to say "no" many times and in several tones of voice, and still Paul didn't believe they meant what they said. Finally persistence won out and he obtained an audience with Lasky on the steps of his hotel. Paul did a few imitations, and sang a few songs in French and it wasn't so good. But Lasky recognized in him the first requisite of a movie actor—determination—so he made it possible for the boy to come to Hollywood.

Besides going to the studio school and learning the English language, Paul has had several "bit" parts, and he is earnestly hoping that his big chance will come in a few months. He wants to "make comedy to make everyone laugh" and gossip has it that he is scheduled, because of his remarkable ability as an imitator and mimic to carry on the comedy of Charles Chaplin in later years.

Another Expert Tells Why He Doesn't Like the Talking Pictures

I don't have to like them and perhaps I shall always think of them as gol-durned and new-fangled. What seems to me most of all wrong with them is something that never can be remedied. They do not belong to the audience, as a play is part of the audience. The actors in a talkie do not feel the electric current which passes across the footlights from audience to actor, the current which, though unnoticed, is at least half of one's pleasure in going to the theater. Between the talkie and its audience there is a blank wall, between a play and its audience there is a subtle understanding and an invisible exchange of emotion which make the best moments in the theaters more real and more exciting than a talkie can ever hope to be.

Any actor will tell you—and all actors have had such moments—how hopelessly depressing it is to play to an empty house. A good play on a rainy night in a house with only two or three rowsful of cash customers will go to pieces. They can't play to a vacuum, they can't give themselves to something which gives nothing back, they feel as flat as you or I would feel playing tennis with a ball that did not bounce. The actors in a talkie, whose only performance is in a soundproof room full of glaring lights and highly paid technicians, before an audience of hard-boiled cameramen and electricians whose only concern is with wires and vibration, are playing with a ball that does not bounce. And their acting shows it. Good or bad, it lacks the fine edge of excitement which only an audience can give. The talkies will get better and better, but it is quite obvious that there is one handicap which they can never get over.

Go into a movie palace early in the afternoon, when the customers are scattered over the rows of thousands of seats in couples and threes and isolated specks of solitary gum-chewers. Watch a famous comedy team go through their gags in a widely advertised talkie. At the end of one of their best gags, the comedians pause, before going on to the next gag for the expected laugh. It doesn't come. There is a dismal silence of a fraction of a second, while the gum-chewers, too shy to laugh in such vast solitude, go right on chewing. The whole illusion comes down with a crash, and you realize the full height and thickness of the unscalable wall between the actors in a talkie and their audience.

This ought to be obvious, but it is equally obvious that for every spectator of a legitimate attraction there are a hundred spectators of the talkies, and that practically every actor, producer and playwright has his eye on the talkies and will jump to the coast if he has the chance. The legitimate stage has already suffered a considerable drain of its talents in that direction, and the drain will be more and more serious as time goes on. Already Broadway people are thinking about all their shows in terms of talkie prospects, and the habit will grow. There is nothing to do about it. The legitimate stage is consequently in a bad way, and perhaps there is nothing to do about that either.

There is no business whose organization makes it less able to cope with possible disaster than the theater business, unless it is the shoe-shine business. The theater business, composed of the most widely diverse elements from producers of ability and distinction through entertainment jobbers and real estate speculators all the way down to the rankest and most inexpert fly-by-night gamblers, has absolutely no professional esprit de corps and almost no machinery for acting in common for it own protection. Taking the theater business as a whole, which means inclusion of the innumerable small shoestring productions that do not live long enough for you to hear of them, experience has taught me that bootlegging is considerably its superior in efficiency, good taste and knowledge of the customer's habits. I am not talking about true art vs. the popular product. The point is that the theater as often as not simply does not know its own business. For the talkies to lure away the legitimate's customers is like taking candy away from a child.

A Questionnaire on Modern Music

As Propounded by the Music Critic of the Post-Dispatch and Answered by Eugene Goossens

THE following series of questions and answers are the result of a correspondence between Eugene Goossens, the gifted composer and conductor who will be one of the guest conductors of the St. Louis Symphony again this coming season, and the music critic of the Post-Dispatch. No living musician is in a better position to answer a questionnaire on modern music without prejudice, than Mr. Goossens. For while his own compositions are certainly modern in every respect he still maintains an appropriately healthy respect for the great creative figures of the classic and romantic periods.

Mr. Goossens has recently concluded a guest engagement at the Bowl in Hollywood where the answers to this questionnaire were written.

1—Q. With the understanding that modern music refers to music that has been written since Debussy, would you say that modern compositions exhibit any positive characteristics in common? If so what are they?

A. Yes. Practically all "modern" composition exhibits a tendency to eliminate superfluous and non-essential processes, particularly "harmonically" speaking. Chromatism "in extremis" and atonality are marked characteristics. Likewise the tendency to stress the more emotional aspects of harmonic devices at the expense of so-called melody and rhythm.

2.—Q. (a) Is there a spirit in modern music which can be as definitely classified as the classicism of Haydn or the romanticism of Richard Strauss. (b) If so how would it be described?

A. Yes. I should coin a word and call it the spirit of "objectivism," as exemplified particularly in the music of Stravinsky and his school. A tendency to deal more with materials rather than abstract conceptions. An uncompromising statement of facts rather than subjective emotions. A sort of public washing of musical dirty linen. Or am I too vague?

3. Q. Do you believe that the incidental technical innovations of great composers have made it possible for other great composers to function who might otherwise have been strangled by too rigid patterns?

A. Yes. Everybody profits by the experiments of his predecessors and contemporaries. Nowadays it amounts to downright filching! Hence the lack of individuality in much contemporary work, and also much of its monotony.

4—Q. What technical innovations, if any, which have been introduced into modern music, have so enlarged the scope and expressiveness of music that music would have been definitely poorer without them? Are there any devices in modern music, for instance, which will be even as important in their effect on subsequent composition as Wagner's use of chromatics or Brahms' use of cross rhythms?

A. This is rather a big subject but to generalize one might stress for instance:

(a) Total independence of key, and key-relation (atonality. (b) The superimposition of unrelated harmonies. (c) The modal application of folk-song processes. (d) The curse of the consecutive dominant ninth. (e) Repetition of rhythmic and harmonic patterns. Whether these and other devices will affect music in the same way as do the devices of Wagner and Brahms mentioned in your note is conjectural.

5 Q. Are the peculiar devices of modern music due to a deliberate attempt to find new channels of expression without regard to the thing to be expressed, or the inevitable result of new emotional and intellectual qualities?

A. More probably the former, I should say. I think that in many cases—indeed most cases today—it is difficult to find any actual signs in music of any new qualities of either emotion or intellect. The emotional and intellectual "make-ups" of Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Wagner and Brahms have not been seriously challenged or even threatened by any contemporary exhibit.

6 Q. Do you believe that a method of composition which relies principally upon fixed tonalities and the diatonic scale has been exhausted for all artistic purposes?

A. Absolutely, short of the appearance of some hitherto unexpected super-genius of Gothic simplicity.

7 Q. Do you believe that the modern temper can be faithfully reflected in music that makes freer use of extreme dissonance than the first movement of Beethoven's Eroica Symphony?

A. I think it extremely doubtful and practically inconceivable.

8 Q. Do you believe that audiences will ever achieve a sufficient acuteness of ear to justify the wide use of quarter tones in music designed for general consumption?

A. Probably, in a hundred years. The Spaniards and the Italians know a quarter-tone when they hear it, because it is one of the chief characteristics of their traditional gift of "extempore" (among the folk singers of course, but our own Western scale is so empiric and ingrained that even advanced musicians rarely recognize in a quarter tone anything but faulty intonation. Instruments must first be built in quarter-tones before the public can be trained to recognize them. Personally, the 12 note scale is sufficient for my own humble purposes at present.

9. Q. Is there any American music which uses a vernacular which is as definitely American as the piano music of Albeniz is Spanish or the Vaughn Williams Pastoral symphony is English?

A. None except the folk-song of the American Indians and Negro Americans.

10. Q. Is there any reason to believe that America is about to witness a period of unprecedented creative activity among its composers of serious music?

A. None at all so far as I can see. I hope it will soon be otherwise, however, especially when American composers begin to realize the inspirational possibilities underlying the geographical and ethnological features of the country.

OPPOSITION TO GOV. RITCHIE

Baltimore County Indorses D. G. McIntosh Jr. for Nomination.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 24.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie's control of Maryland's executive office was threatened today for the first time in 16 years when Baltimore county, which adjoins the city of Baltimore, the largest county in the State and normally Democratic, indorsed, through its Democratic leaders, David G. McIntosh Jr., President of the State Senate, for the 1930 gubernatorial nomination, regardless of Gov. Ritchie's plans for a fourth term, which are not yet known.

Ritchie, one of the leading advocates of States' rights in all questions, and especially on the prohibition issue, is serving his third term, and holds a top position in national Democratic ranks, having withdrawn from the contest for the presidential nomination in favor of Gov. Smith in 1928. He actively supported the Democratic nominee in the 1928 elections, but lost the State to President Hoover. McIntosh is also classed politically as a "wet." Gov. Ritchie tonight refused to comment on the action of the Baltimore county organization.

KILTIES TO REPLACE PLUS FOURS AT NORMANDIE LINKS TODAY

Bag Pipers to Entertain Gallery at Scotch Affair; Losers to Sing "Heather" Songs Tonight.

There will be a decided Scotch atmosphere at the Normandie Golf Club on St. Charles Rock road today when two "Scotch foursomes" of kilted players will tee off to the tunes of the Caledonian Society's "pipes."

Those who will don kilties, instead of plus fours, for the day are: John W. Rowan, Bert Boaz, Edward Wanbaugh, M. B. Marshall, Donald Anderson, James Dick, William Foreman, and "Sandy" Auchterlonie, the club professional.

The bag pipers plan to entertain the accompanying gallery as long as their wind holds out. It being a Scotch affair, no "money holes" will be played, but the losholes" will be played, but the losers will be required to sing "heather" songs in the club dining room tonight.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"

—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

JACKSON AND O'BRINE APPEAR ON THE STAGE

Champion Endurance Flyers Open Week's Engagement at Loew's State Theater.

Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, crew of the champion endurance plane, the St. Louis Robin, made their first theatrical appearance yesterday at Loew's State Theater in a six-minute act.

They were assisted in their skit by a "feeder," who helped supply the heavy comedy. The act, featured by a discussion of fan mail and similar topics, was well received. Neither appeared embarrassed by the footlights.

Their contract is for one week, but may be extended to 10 weeks on the Loew circuit, if it draws well. The salaries were not announced.

CONTAINER SHIPMENTS OF FREIGHT UPHELD

Report to I. C. C., However, Declares Missouri Pacific's Suspended Rates Unreasonable.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Employment by railroads of container service for the shipment in interstate commerce of less than carload freight was held to be desirable and in the public interest in a report today to the Interstate Commerce Commission by Harry C. Ames, one of its examiners.

At the same time, however, Ames recommended that the commission find unreasonable, unlawful and discriminatory the existing container rates of the New York Central, Lehigh Valley and the Pennsylvania and the rates proposed by the New York Central and the Lehigh Valley.

The examiner also recommended that the commission hold the suspended Missouri Pacific rates as unreasonable and unjustly discriminatory.

The investigation into the lawfulness of container service was made on the commission's own motion and also embraced the suspension of certain tariffs proposing to extend the service into new territory.

The examiner's report said that the "findings as to the proposed tariff of the Eastern railroads are without prejudice to the establishment interstate of container service subject to third-class rates on the net weight of the container contents and subject to the further proviso that in no event shall the container rate be lower than the carload rate on any commodity loaded in the container, the inclusion of such commodities in mixed container shipments to control the rates on the entire mixture, this basis to be prescribed as maximum and minimum."

The report added that in respect to "motor truck competition the record shows that the container has recaptured some traffic. But it does not show that serious truck competition exists in respect of all the movements (container service) proposed to be covered by the rates."

Reconsidering a former order, the Commission held the carload rates on unfermented bottled grape juice in the Eeastern, Southern and Western territory were unreasonable and authorized a slight reduction estimated at 15 per cent on freight charges.

The Commission ordered bottled unfermented grape juice to be carried at fifth class rates in the official or eastern territory, the present rating being fourth class. In the southern territory the present fifth-class rate was made sixth class and the class A rate was made fifth class in the western territory.

The Commission suspended the schedule of rates on carload shipments of silica sand from Illinois points to points in Indiana and Ohio. The suspended schedules proposed an increase in rates.

CHARLES and EDWARD HIRTH, Brothers.

IN MEMORIAM

BECKERER—In loving memory of our dear mother, Rose Beckerer, who passed away on Aug. 16, 1928.

You are gone but not forgotten by all who knew and loved you.

SISTERS AND FAMILY.

DREYER—In memory of Sophia Dreyer, died Aug. 23, 1927.

Rolling stream of life flows on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile,
Of one who has gone to rest.
Sadly missed by
SISTER, SONS AND FAMILY.

EDWARDS—In loving memory of our dear mother and wife, Elizabeth Edwards (nee Vogler), who passed away one year ago today.

Her memory is as sweet today
As in the hour she passed away.
HUSBAND AND SON.

KLEIN—In memory of George Klein, who died one year ago, Aug. 22:

One year has passed since that sad day
When you, dear one, was called away.
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought your death so near,
Sadly missed by his wife,
MOTHER, SISTER, BROTHER.

KOERTEL—In loving remembrance of our darling daughter and sister, Florence, who died Aug. 22, 1928:

No stain was on her little heart,
Sin had not entered there;
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.
She was too pure for this cold earth.
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's holy angel bore
Our darling one away.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER, SISTER and all who loved her.

MALINARI—In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Frank Malinari, who died Aug. 29, 1928:

There was an angel band in Heaven
That was not quite complete,
So God then took our darling Frankie
To fill the vacant seat.
Loving PARENTS, BROTHER and SISTER.

MAYER, LOUISE—In memory of our dear sister, Louise Mayer, who died one year ago today, Aug. 25, 1928.

We dare not wish within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
Years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days when
We were all together.
Sadly missed by friends, brothers and sisters.

McCURRY—Humphrey died Aug. 24, 1928.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall.
Love's remembrance outlasts all,
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance, dear, of you.
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

REYNOLDS—In memory of my dear husband, Eugene.

Sadly missed by his wife,
MRS. ROSE REYNOLDS.

SCHWEGHOEFER—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, who departed Aug. 26, 1927:

Nothing can ever take away
The love of a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day.
Remembrance keeps him near.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

SMART, OLIVER C.—In memory of Oliver C. Smart, who departed this life Aug. 24, 1926.

We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today.
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
We think of him in silence,
No eye may see us weep,
But deep within our silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
Sadly missed by
SMART FAMILY AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

STEFFEN, HARRY AND MAY—In loving memory of my dear parents. Departed this life one month ago the 24th and two years ago, the 29th.

God's golden sun is shining upon my parents' graves,
The ones I loved so dearly and tried so hard to save;
And when I lost my parents, I lost my dearest friends;
I loved them both and miss them and will until the end.
Sadly missed by daughter and all who loved them.

WILLIAMSON, CHARLES A.—In suffered hours, yes, hours of pain
To wait for cure but all in vain.
So God alone knew what was best,
He called you home to give you rest.
Years of sacrifice, pain of play
Loving and giving and smoothing the way
Strong in adversity, ready to go,
Faithful and unselfish, a friend ever true,
We think of you often and will to the end
Gone and forgotten we some you may,
But dear to our memory you ever will be.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, MOTHER AND CHILDREN.

SALESMEN

To men of proven sales records on "one-call" straight commission basis of books, stocks or advertising, though this is none of these, we have an exceptional opportunity.

To men between the ages of 28 and 40 years who will prove to us their ability by past records of results, we will prove that the earnings with this organization are far above the average.

Men who are looking for a real opportunity with a future after spending years in fly-by-night specialties, where their efforts have not brought them their just earnings, we have a real opportunity.

Promotions from the field leave open important territories in this nationally known organization which makes this an exceptional opportunity.

If this meets with what you have long had in mind and you are a real salesman with force, personality and appearance and you insist on making these qualities pay you real money, I would like to talk to you.

Phone Mr. J. W. Woodhull, Hotel Statler, Sunday and Monday after 1 p. m. for appointment.

The Surgeon Who Rebuilds Human Fighting Machines

Dr. Wilfred Fralick's Skill as a Repairman of Weakened or Dislocated Muscles Probably Saved Max Schmeling's Career But He Wants to Do Preventive Instead of Repair Work.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

KID BREEZE started off strong. He looked like a sure winner as he manhandled his opponent around the ring. Up to the fifth round it was the Kid's fight, 20 to 1. Then the tide began to turn. All through the opening rounds Young Corrigan had been aiming at the Kid's old wound, and in the fifth he found it. Only a slight tap on the Kid's beak, but it started the claret flowing and it got on the Kid's nerves. His guard went to pieces. He thought only of protecting that bad nose. He left his body unguarded, and when Corrigan found him for a terrific punch over the heart the Kid went to the ropes. The beginning of the end. The Kid never recovered from the punch. Another bust on the nose and the organ looked like mincemeat. And a quick, tough jab on the chin and Kid Breeze took the count. It was the Kid's fourth straight defeat. It looks like Kid Breeze, figured for a champ, is through."

Does it? Well, not necessarily. Not any more, at least. Now these battered Kid Breezes, with their bad ears and their tricky shoulders, their weak thumbs and their wabbly noses, have found a saviour. Right enough it once was that when a boxer, maybe a very good boxer of championship proportions, developed a weak point, he was through forever and a day. Many a time you've read just such an account as the fictitious tale of Kid Breeze above. And if you thought he was through, you probably were right. For once a prize-fighter comes by a physical weakness all the other ringsters learn about it; they go for that point in their next battle with him, and, finding it, they have him whipped.

But—not so any more.

LET us introduce Dr. Wilfred Fralick of New York, surgeon of the first class and mender of fighting men, who can rebuild a smashed finger as expertly as an engineer can mend the steel work of a bridge.

He put Max Schmeling, the German champion, back into the running, did Dr. Fralick. Max, whose prize fighting in Central Europe had been just one victory after another, journeyed to this side of the Atlantic looking for a new world to conquer. But he had his troubles—a smashed thumb, a hangover from an early fight. It troubled him, hurt him, it was stiff, apt to break away from its moorings at the crucial moment.

"Get that thumb fixed up," his backers told him, "before you start battling over here. Get it fixed now." A few days after Max landed he visited Dr. Fralick. Fralick took a look at the bum thumb. The surgeon opened the ailing member, removed a straying splinter of bone. But that wasn't all. He strengthened the tendons with live tissue, he reinforced the knuckle with gristle and cartilage from the ribs. Then he sewed it up, put it in a flexible cast of adhesive tape. It wasn't long before Max was making new history in the American ring.

Dr. Fralick is a versatile scientist. He is one of the first men in American surgery. But he has other scientific interests. The Fralick solution, used during the war for disinfecting and sterilizing water, is the result of this man's research. He fathered an antitoxin for the "gas-fog" of the trenches. Synthetic blood, prescribed according to the condition of the patient, is something else of his.

All these are but his sidelines. Surgery is his main occupation and preoccupation.

It was as a surgeon that he became interested in the trials and tribulations of athletes—and especially the boxing end of athletics.

The doctor has arrived at the conclusion that athletes, using a little foresight, can prevent many of the accidents that might come their way. Take a runner. He may have tendons that are liable to stretch. Let him, then, go to a surgeon before the race and have those errant tendons shortened. A boxer. He may have brittle hands. All right. Call on the surgeon. Let those brittle mitts be reinforced, strengthened—and postpone, indefinitely, the permanently damaged fist.

In other words, put the old adage into practice. An ounce of prevention's worth a pound of cure. Preventive surgery for athletes. And Dr. Fralick is of the opinion that the time will come when every professional will have his weak parts overhauled before the breakdown comes. The average man could do the same thing, if he wanted to, Dr. Fralick believes.

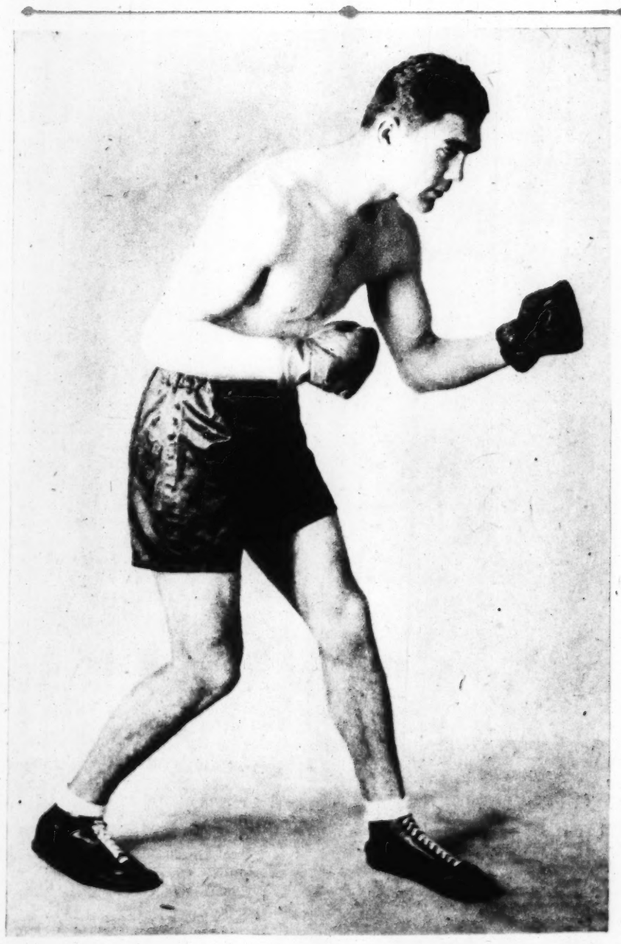
It happens that Dr. Fralick is a fight fan. You usually see him at boxing bouts in New York. Undoubtedly, this fondness for professional fisticuffs got him started on mending battered bruisers, in playing first and last aid to smashed fists, splintered knuckles, shoulders out of joint, flattened noses. Playing first and last aid. Not just repairing them—that would do for you and me—but rebuilding them. For the smashed hand of a fighter must be rebuilt so he may use that hand as a fighting hand. And a bad shoulder must be remodeled so it can take as well as give punishment, and plenty of it.

Take Max Schmeling's hand as a sample of this work in rebuilding and remodeling. The first time Max appeared at Dr. Fralick's office the German couldn't bend his thumb. Worse and more of it, his hand had lost its force. And Schmeling a boxer of championship possibilities. For Max to have gone into the ring with that weakened mitt would have been murder—with the tremendous Teuton on the receiving end. He might as well have hobbled into the battle on a crutch. When the writer met Schmeling at Dr. Fralick's office his hand was flexible, sturdy, as strong as ever it was. And the only reminder of the operation was a thin scar on the inner side.

On the same afternoon two other fighters dropped into Dr. Fralick's office. They were Paul Berlenbach and Jack Sharkey.

Sharkey had just had the cast taken off his left knee. In the last five minutes at his training camp he caught his foot in the canvas of the ring and, in falling, twisted his knee. The result was a torn and loosened cartilage of the left knee joint. Brought to Dr. Fralick, he had been operated on, the ligaments tightened and the leg put in a flexible cast of adhesive tape.

That little slip has already cost Sharkey four months' time and about $90,000. But Sharkey wasn't as downcast as he might have been. The day before the accident he had become the father of a son (he already had two daughters) and his leisure was spent in the company of Jack Sharkey Jr.



Max Schmeling.

I had been hearing conflicting rumors about Paul Berlenbach's probable return to the ring for some time. When I saw him there I learned there was some truth in these stories. Berlenbach admitted that he was thinking about this step, but, before making any announcement, wanted to be sure of his condition. X-rays had been taken and the photographs had come back this very afternoon. They showed several broken bones. Before Berlenbach is ready to fight again he will have to be operated on. At the time of writing he was planning to go ahead.

This trio of boxers are but the last of a long line of wounded and maimed fighters who have been repaired, remodeled and restored to fighting trim by Dr. Fralick. Tunney brought broken hands and a smashed nose for salvaging. So did Harry Wills, Mike McTigue, Young Stribling, Johnny Dundee, Sammy Mandell, Benny Bass and a score of others.

Johnny Grosso had a two-hour operation on his mouth. Jack Zivic and Bud Taylor had trouble with their shoulders. Jack Delaney had a hand, shoulder and knee in need of attention.

These salvaging operations of Dr. Fralick's are quite famous in athletic circles. His work on Jack Delaney's right fist is typical. Delaney smashed his right hand on Frank Carbone's head. When the fight was over the hand was so swollen they had to cut off his gloves. His hand, they said, was badly sprained.

The hand wasn't any better a month later. Delaney was back in the ring but wasn't up to par. He lost almost every fight. His value as a fighter began to shrink and in a short time Delaney was at the foot of the toboggan, down in spirit and out of funds.

He was brought to Dr. Fralick, who found a torn ligament and injured cartilage on the center knuckle. These parts were cleaned up and mended. Then came the touch for which the doctor is known. To put Delaney back in the ring he had to build up that damaged knuckle and make it into a vigorous asset of a fighting hand.

To do this the knuckle was reinforced by live cartilage taken from the ribs. Layers were grafted and made to interlap so that they formed a bulwark to the sensitive knuckle. In time this tissue became a solid part of the surrounding structure. And Jack Delaney stepped back into the ring with a better hand than he had ever had before.

In fact, so good was this hand that a complaint was made to the State Athletic Commission about it. In Delaney's first big fight after the operation he defeated Tiger Flowers with such thoroughness that Flowers' manager complained that Delaney's hand had been reinforced with an artificial plate.

A boxer's shoulders need almost as much attention as his hands. They must not only be able to propel the arm in action but must be prepared to take blows as good as they give. No fighter is stronger than his weakest part.

Jack Zivic, the Pittsburg welterweight, had one of those wandering shoulders. In his salad days as a boxer Zivic's right shoulder had acquired the habit of slipping. His opponents never forgot this idiosyncrasy. A fight to Zivic was only a gamble as to whether he could knock out his man before his shoulder gave way.

It took a long and tedious operation to put that shoulder into its socket so that it stayed. Dr. Fralick made a deep incision from the top of the boy's shoulder clear around the arm pit. Then he practically lifted the right arm out of the body, while he shortened and tightened the tendons and ligaments inside. The main arteries, tendons and nerves had to be pulled out of the way. One nick of the circumflex nerve or any other large nerve would have paralyzed the arm.

Then several elliptical sections were cut from the capsular ligament. One hundred and thirty stitches closed the inside of the wound, 30 more on the outside, and the erring shoulder was firmly tucked in its socket, never more to roam. Two months later Zivic was back in the ring. And, to the surprise of the sporting world, not much later, in a spectacular fight, he knocked out Lew Tendler.

DR. FRALICK'S attention has not been limited to disabled prize fighters. Runners, hockey players, polo players, golfers, acrobats and baseball players have been treated for sprains, strains, dislocations and fractures.

Ringside operations, so to speak, have been necessary at times. One night at the Madison Square Garden a running match was on. About 9:30 a rumor drifted from the dressing rooms that Loren Murchison had suffered an injury to one of his legs and was out of the contest. This rumor was verified when one of the officials came to Dr. Fralick and asked him if he could do anything for the man. Murchison, he explained, had strained the muscles of his left leg.

Sending out for a dozen packets of adhesive tape, Dr. Fralick went back to Murchison's quarters. He moulded a splint of the tape that would support the muscles yet give enough freedom to let Murchison enter the sprint. The crowd outside didn't know what was wrong until they read the story the newspapers carried the next morning. For the splint was on in time for Murchison to win the relay.

Another time, at a professional basket ball game, one of the players got a loose cartilage at the knee. Smothered in one of those tape casings, the knee carried the man through the game. Though perhaps not as necessary to success, hockey players have had temporary tape splints put on their damaged noses until the game was over.

A boxer's face often needs both repairing and remodeling. The dished nose can make trouble for his breathing. A cauliflower ear may bring irritating hemorrhages, and mouths, distorted from injuries, can even imperil a boxer's hopes.

"OF COURSE," says Dr. Fralick, "a nose can be remodeled as successfully as a knuckle. Formerly it was molded over a foundation of some foreign substance, such as gutta percha, ivory, whalebone or an injection of paraffin. But this method is obsolete now. For a fighter it never was any good. One good blow would smash the ivory and the whole job would have to be done over again.

"Today I use fibro-elastic cartilage from some other part of the body, preferably the ribs. I first make a mold of the damaged nose as it now is. Then a second cast of the nose as it ought to be. Then I look for a piece of cartilage and sculpture it to fit the missing part.

"The cartilage of the right size and shape is inserted into the nose in one operation. It is sometimes reinforced with tissue. Now the fighter has a nose that can hold its own against any blow. And he need not hesitate to take it with him into the ring."

Husband Unfaithful—Shelley And Byron to Blame Says Professor's Wife

Mrs. Walter Edwin Peck, Seeking a Separation, Charges That While Her Husband Philandered on the Coast of Bohemia She and Her Children Were in Want.

NEW YORK.

THE romantic movement in English literature is Professor Walter Edwin Peck's special field of study. He has spent a greater part of his life in the company of Shelley, Byron, Keats and Mary Wollstonecraft. And now his wife comes forward to charge that the professor has not confined the romantic movement to the classroom but has put its principles to a long series of practical tests. In short, she accuses him of repeated infidelities.

Mrs. Peck has found this so trying that she says she can endure it no longer and the other day she filed suit for separation.

Mrs. Peck has viewed the whole thing more realistically than the wife of a romanticist can afford to do. Having at last decided to speak her mind, she has used plain terms. She states flatly that her husband is guilty of "astounding immorality," and then cites incident after incident in proof. She says that while he philandered on the fringes of Bohemia, she and their children were often close to actual want. Her patience is at an end even though her husband can plead his cause most eloquently.

"As the world in its mundane fashion," he once wrote, "weighing the metal with the miller's thumb, would see it, I am deeply guilty of infidelity to you. Seen, however, through the eyes of spiritual understanding, I think that what the world calls 'infidelity' may sometimes be the surest road to a deeper, more abiding fidelity."

This has even the note of Shelley. It might be the poet writing to his wife, Harriet, after his elopement with Mary. That is an example of how nearly Professor Peck's life has come to resemble that of the most romantic of poets. He has even come to look faintly like Shelley, with gratuitous touches of Byron and Keats thrown in, and he has never, according to his wife, hesitated to exact the same freedom which the poet took as a matter of course. There is one major difference. Shelley was unquestionably a genius. Professor Peck, is after all, only a scholar, even though a very distinguished one, probably the foremost living authority on Shelley.

His intellectual and temperamental bent has cost Professor Peck his job as assistant professor of English at Hunter College and now it threatens to cost him his wife and family. But Shelley suffered, too. Without any romantic adornment in papers filed in her suit Mrs. Peck makes the statement: "He has had affairs with at least five women of whom I know. His infidelities of recent years have become more and more flagrant."

PECK was born 38 years ago in the town of Ashtabula, Ohio. His father, Charles E. Peck, was determined his son should have an excellent education. The son grew to full accord with his father's plan, and became a student to be proud of.

At 17 he entered Wooster College, in Ohio. There he met the lovely Marian, much as Shelley met his Harriet. Three years later when he drifted on to Hamilton College, in Clinton, New York, the vision of his schoolgirl sweetheart remained.

After one year at Hamilton, he married her. The young Pecks returned to Clinton and both were happy in their life. A daughter, Rosemary June, was born to the young couple. After two years at Hamilton, Peck realized his life must be dedicated to the study of the romantic poets. He packed up his small family, brought them to New York City and set them down on Columbia University campus in 1918.

Mrs. Peck's pride in her young husband knew no bounds as he gathered degrees and scholastic laurels. Another child, Walter Jr., was born.

Then the couple went to Oxford University in England so that Peck could delve into original sources concerning the lives of the romantic poets. In 1922 he received his doctor's degree, and the Pecks returned to the United States.

That was the end of his life in books and the beginning of his life in experience, his wife declares.

It was not until then that something in Peck cried out for expression.

He affected the Byronic collar, the intense expression of Keats. Worst of all, to his wife's way of thinking, he began, she says, to seek the freedom in love that his heroes had demanded. Indeed, the Peck family life became not unlike that itinerant career of Shelley and his Harriet.

Facsimile copy of excerpt from a letter written by Peck to his wife.

His first position was at Wooster College, scene of his courting. Advancement came quickly for the young man and from 1924 to 1926 he headed the public speaking department of Wesleyan University. Here, according to his wife, he committed his first grievous indiscretions.

"My husband had a three-year contract, but he taught for only two academic years at Wesleyan. He was asked to resign before the expiration of the contract. He told me quite frankly at the time that he had had an affair. Well, he was obliged to find a position elsewhere," she said bitterly.

However, at that time believing in his genius and his capacity for love, she forgave him for his alleged dalliance. In the fall of 1925 the handsome young professor obtained an appointment as dean of the graduate school at Washington State College. Thereupon he moved his family to the town of Pullman, Washington. Students there, as elsewhere, found him "simply gorgeous." The faculty there found him very popular with his students because of his charming manners and a constant air that approached melancholy, a kind of cosmic sadness.

But if he profited at all by his wife's former patience and forbearance, he checked profit to loss, poet-like, she declares, when he met the wife of a fellow professor who could not withstand his charms. Some few of his relatives say kindly enough that he is not entirely to blame for "he is so attractive that women pursue him."

Certainly he expresses his own opinion on the subject in his short verse:

"But love's quiver has many darts,
many links in love's chain,
And the heart ne'er gets sated,
Love comes oft, though belated,
If you're a loser in love, turn your heart; try again."

"He became involved in an affair with the wife of one of the professors in Washington and was asked to resign," Mrs. Peck says tersely. She is not willing to talk at length about her hero-worshipping lord and master.

While the Pecks were in Washington, Gloria Lee, a third child, was born. Before he left the State Peck had climbed far up the ladder of success, and was being acclaimed as an autohrity on the poet whom he acknowledged as demi-god. He had brought out the two-volume edition on Shelly's life and works.

They are imposing volumes, into which Peck has put a vast amount of labor. He sought to make his work the definitive life of Shelley, a scholarly landmark that would last for all time. Painstakingly he traced the life of the poet from birth to early death in the blue waters of the Mediterranean. Not a phase of the poet's life, not an obscure edition of a minor poem but was hunted out by Peck.

Almost entirely the biographer remains in the background. Only very rarely does Peck interlude an opinion, and then it is not to condone but rather to condemn the faults of Shelley's character. Of Harriet's tragic suicide, Peck writes:

"Shelley's abandonment of her had been sudden, selfish, deliberate. When she could no longer maintain herself honorably Harriet put as sudden an end to her life. It is useless for any Shelley biographer to pretend that all the wordy incantations, or fragrant perfumes of Arabia can cleanse the hand of the poet from original responsibility for the state of the spirit which induced this crime."

In both England and America critics praised the book. Even conservative members of the academic world paid the book high tribute. And Peck, academically speaking, was still young. His future, it appeared, was made.

Love affairs or not love affairs, he was not hesitant in praising his wife for her assistance in his literary efforts. He attempted to thank her in "Acknowledgments," the preface to his work on Shelley, with:

"But of course when all this has been said, I turn to one who sews by an ample New England fireplace built for another 'amiable consort' in 1747 and wish for words to make the last and greatest acknowledgment. But for that silence is best."

HE was also the discoverer of new poems, essays, and letters by Shelley. He edited "Twelve Letters by Elizabeth Hitchener to Percy Bysshe Shelley" and "Hunt's Letters on Hogg's Life of Shelley."

By the time the acknowledgment was written Mrs. Peck and the children were living in Portland, Connecticut, while Peck found an appointment as assistant professor of English at Hunter College, a women's institution of learning in New York City.

He remained in New York City at the National Arts Club and visited his family when he could, which was seldom because of his financial straits, and for another reason.

Not unlike Shelley, says Mrs. Peck, her husband was usually empty of purse although he earned a large salary. And Mrs. Peck, not unlike Shelley's wife, remonstrated and was indignant, but was incapable of effective resistance.

By this time, too, he was writing pointedly in his letters to her:

"I have found that I cannot be at peace if too closely domesticated with you all. And the path of my life has been such, no doubt, as to increase rather than to decrease this decision."

He was boasting, according to his wife, that he "was associating with the very dregs of society" and that "he had touched bottom and could not go any lower."

"His salary at Hunter College was $5250 a year and the publishing firm of Covici-Friede, Inc., paid him $7500 a year. Yet the children and I have been in real and actual want because my romancing professor thought nothing of going to a night club and spending $200 in a single evening. He also made money from deals in rare books and manuscripts, but that, too, is gone," says she.

"He insists on leading an unbelievably immoral life and in going to the extreme in dissipation. No matter how much income he has had, he has always been in debt and in difficulty, notwithstanding his extraordinary success," she adds.

"During his two years at Hunter he has had at least three different affairs of which I have been informed. One was with a Hunter College student and another was with an employe of a bookseller whom he took to Philadelphia," declares Mrs. Peck.

IT WAS when she discovered these latter indiscretions that she moved to the home of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Winfield S. Morrow, in Larchmont, New York.

Peck wrote her regularly, imploring her to see things his way.

"I am not happy in the consciousness of strange and inflexible conflicts which rage within me, nor the contradictory impulses which sway me to action," he wrote. "I do believe, however, if you can manage to give this Irishman a loose rein, that you will hold him more closely than ever," he adds.

Mrs. Peck, who has believed in the loose rein idea implicity, bit her lip while reading this part of the letter.

Peck pays his wife tribute time and again, but always asks her to continue in patience while he continues in infidelities, she says.

"You have been patient and forbearing beyond the capability of any woman I have ever known. Our unhappiness, when we have experienced it, has been directly traceable to me. I know that. Yet if you do not continue to be superhumanly patient we may go on the rocks, which heaven forbid! Can't you understand my problem a little better? I have never ceased to love you and our children devotedly."

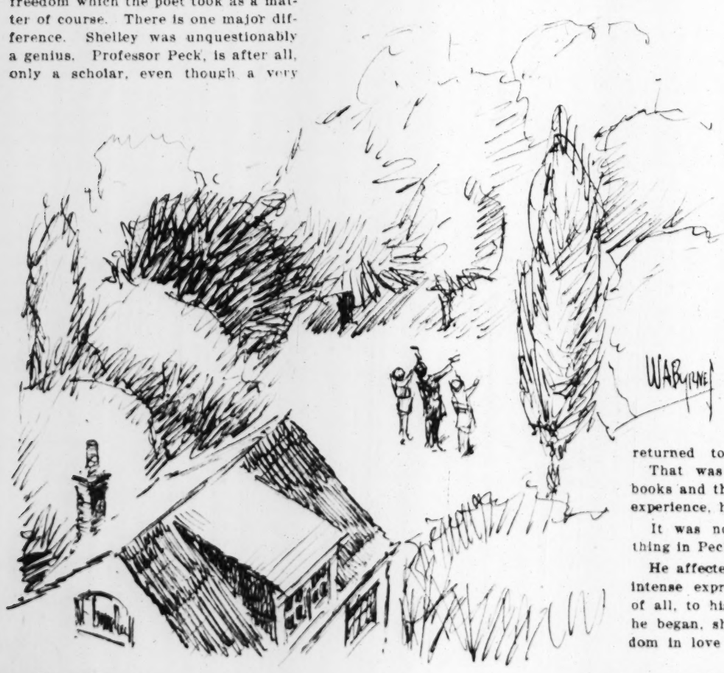
But his wife had heard this so often in the past. She started her separation suit.

Peck fled to obscurity at first mention of the suit, and through his lawyer, J. J. Brennan, denies all the charges of misconduct. He declared he lived with his wife in Portland, and that he had not failed to provide for her. However, he declared through the attorney he earned $12,000 a year, and not $20,000, as she stated. He charged his wife with "improvident habits" and said she was bringing suit because he had disciplined her in connection with a weekly allowance of $75.

The attendant publicity heaped upon his head caused Dr. Blanche Colton Williams, head of the English department at Hunter College, to call for his resignation. He wrote it promptly and delved still further into his hiding place.

But Mrs. Peck continued her separation suit quietly and carefully. She is backed not only by her own parents but by Peck's own father and brother.

The elder Peck, writing from his Ohio home, says: "I think you are entitled to a divorce."



A Notori

Pomeroy at seventeen.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BOSTON, Massachusetts.

A GRIZZLED old man of 71 snarled at the Warden of the Massachusetts State Prison for the last time the other day and presently emerged from the walls of that gray old bastile in the company of two burly guards. It was the first time he had been outside of those walls in 53 years. He snarled at the assembled newspaper reporters, he snarled at the photographers, he shrank from the curious crowd gathered around the gate to bid him farewell. It reminded him of the grim and vengeful crowds of 53 years ago. Still in company of the two guards, he walked across the intervening space to a waiting automobile, got in and was whisked away. After more than half a century in the State prison, Jesse Pomeroy, notorious murderer, notorious torturer, long-publicised life-termer, was being transferred.

Who hasn't heard of Jesse Pomeroy, the killer, the sadist, the Jack-the-Ripper who horrified the Boston of the '70s into a succession of cold sweats? Old-timers recall the terrible tension which prevailed, the chilling fear which haunted the city in the days when Pomeroy's sanguinary trail was being followed. They remember how the pulpit and press denounced him as the fiend murderer, how the mob surged about following his arrest, how he was sentenced to death at the age of 16 and his sentence then commuted to life imprisonment.

It was this same Pomeroy who has bidden an unwilling farewell to the State prison in the Charlestown district and has been removed to the Bridgewater State Farm, where there is grass on the ground and trees that rustle outside the barred windows.

THE transfer was not exactly in the nature of a reward for good behavior, for Pomeroy's behavior has not been good. It was rather because he was a trouble-maker and a bad influence on the other prisoners. It was made on the order of Governor Frank Allen and the Executive Council, upon the recommendations of Dr. A. Warren Stearns, Commissioner of Correction of the State of Massachusetts.

Pomeroy himself opposed it. Up to the last hour of his stay he fought the plan and protested bitterly against the "high-handed" treatment accorded to him by the State. For the State prison was home to him, the only home he had known since he was 18. He hated it, yet he was attached to it. He wanted to stay in the murky dungeon where he could hear the rush and roar of the city. What compensation was there for him in being taken away to the penal settlement where the grass was green and the breezes cool? He wouldn't stand for it. And he isn't standing for it with what might be termed good grace. In his new prison, which will be his home for the rest of his days, he is staging a hunger strike, demanding to be returned. He is refusing surgical treatment for an inguinal hernia from which he is suffering. He is making of himself a nuisance generally, an art in which he is practiced and accomplished.

The Boston public mind that hated him 50 years ago with a bitter hatred, made more intense by fear of him, looked on good-humoredly as he passed on his way to the penal farm. Bystanders even grinned at him, and small boys cat-called and yelled "Hello, grandpa." They wouldn't have done that 50 years ago. The ageing prisoner couldn't understand this good

Who hasn't heard of Jesse Pomeroy, the killer, the sadist, the Jack-the-Ripper who horrified the Boston of the '70s into a succession of cold sweats? Old-timers recall the terrible tension which prevailed, the chilling fear which haunted the city in the days when Pomeroy's sanguinary trail was being followed. They remember how the pulpit and press denounced him as the fiend murderer, how the mob surged about following his arrest, how he was sentenced to death at the age of 16 and his sentence then commuted to life imprisonment.

It was this same Pomeroy who has bidden an unwilling farewell to the State prison in the Charlestown district and has been removed to the Bridgewater State Farm, where there is grass on the ground and trees that rustle outside the barred windows.

THE transfer was not exactly in the nature of a reward for good behavior, for Pomeroy's behavior has not been good. It was rather because he was a trouble-maker and a bad influence on the other prisoners. It was made on the order of Governor Frank Allen and the Executive Council, upon the recommendations of Dr. A. Warren Stearns, Commissioner of Correction of the State of Massachusetts.

Pomeroy himself opposed it. Up to the last hour of his stay he fought the plan and protested bitterly against the "high-handed" treatment accorded to him by the State. For the State prison was home to him, the only home he had known since he was 18. He hated it, yet he was attached to it. He wanted to stay in the murky dungeon where he could hear the rush and roar of the city. What compensation was there for him in being taken away to the penal settlement where the grass was green and the breezes cool? He wouldn't stand for it. And he isn't standing for it with what might be termed good grace. In his new prison, which will be his home for the rest of his days, he is staging a hunger strike, demanding to be returned. He is refusing surgical treatment for an inguinal hernia from which he is suffering. He is making of himself a nuisance generally, an art in which he is practiced and accomplished.

The Boston public mind that hated him 50 years ago with a bitter hatred, made more intense by fear of him, looked on good-humoredly as he passed on his way to the penal farm. Bystanders even grinned at him, and small boys cat-called and yelled "Hello, grandpa." They wouldn't have done that 50 years ago. The ageing prisoner couldn't understand this good humor and this unaccustomed levity. In fact, he seemed afraid of the crowd. He was trembling like an aspen leaf when finally he gained the illusion of shelter in the waiting automobile. Fifty years ago such flimsy shelter would have availed him little. With such an opportunity, the crowds that sought him in 1876 would have rushed in and torn him limb from limb.

Jesse Pomeroy was only 13 when he began his career of crime which brought him such universal hatred. First, little boys were found tied to telegraph poles. Then children began telling their parents how the Pomeroy boy had caught them and held their hands over little blazes kindled by the street corner gangs. Soon there were complaints of children being burned on the ears and noses by "Jesse, the boy with the funny eye." He would sneak up behind his victims and pounce upon them with lighted sulphur matches. Later, children told their parents of being tortured, stripped of their clothing, cut and bruised.

Finally, Jesse was caught red-handed in the act of torturing a child he had lured into the kitchen of his home. By brute force he had held the hand of his younger victim over a red-hot stove. A wave of indignation swept over the city with disclosure of this atrocity. Then a great many others, lesser victims of Jesse Pomeroy's brutality, came forward to tell their stories of cruelties suffered at the hands of the youthful fiend. He was positively identified by one albino eye. That eye is now blind.

Pomeroy was sent first to a reform school, where he remained for 17 months. Exactly one month after his release, however, a South Boston boy disappeared. Then a girl disappeared, to be followed a little later by a third victim, another boy. Eventually, all three bodies were found, horribly mutilated. After being stabbed to death with a penknife, the victims had been cut and slashed until not a square inch of skin remained without a laceration. The girl's body had been mutilated in "Jack-the-Ripper" fashion.

INDIGNATION and horror at this outbreak of savagery spread beyond Boston; it went around the world. against the death penalty — a fight Detectives were not slow to connect Pomeroy with the crimes and quickly ran him down. There arose a nation-wide cry for the gallows. A long trial ensued. Pomeroy's father, who was a butcher, acted as his attorney and defended him in the courtroom of the criminal sessions of Boston. He probably did as well as a lawyer would have done under the circumstances, for the case didn't present many angles of defense. The jury went out and came promptly back with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree. There was no recommendation of mercy and he was sentenced to be hanged. That was in September, 1876. After another court fight against the death penalty — a fight based upon his youth—his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Rice, but no Massachusetts Governor since that time has felt free to pardon him, although some appeals have been made in his behalf.

Thus Jesse Pomeroy has been in the Massachusetts State Prison in Boston for 53 years, hearing the city grow up about him but never seeing it. Once they took him to Concord Reformatory with a ball and chain on his leg and two guards sitting beside him on the 8:30 morning train. He tried to escape and gave his guards a desperate battle, for he was young and rugged then. They subdued him at length and delivered him to the reformatory, but he was not to stay long. One morning somebody found tools in his cell—a spike, a nail, a file and a chisel—and back he went to the State Prison. Once again tools were found and there was other trouble with him, for he was now one of the most desperate prisoners in the convict colony. Following homicidal attacks on guards and other prison attendants, he was put in solitary confinement and kept there 11 years. A tough egg was Jesse Pomeroy, bad all the way through, the prison officials said. He was one of the few prisoners in the place never permitted to have a pet in his cell, never a bird or a cat because he invariably tortured them.

And now at last he has left the State Prison, but he has left it for another cell and another set of stone walls. Short and fleshy and odd-looking with a cap pulled down on his pale and stubble-grown face, he appeared as he walked down the steps of his old prison home. Several persons pressed forward to talk to him. A snarl was all they got. He ignored the sunshine, the tall buildings, the numerous automobiles. He seemed to notice only the crowd and it caused him to shrink and tremble.

At the foot of the granite steps stood a small green automobile. The motor was running and a prison warden opened the door as he approached. Pomeroy hesitated a moment. He had never been in an automobile in his life. Then, as if it were the most common of every-day experiences for him, he put his hand on the door, swung himself past the driver's seat and quickly sat down. Beside him sat another prisoner, a lame man, also being transferred to the penal farm. Two guards in plain clothes, burly and determined looking men, took their seats in front and the car moved away. It swung sharply over Prison Point Bridge and into the bracing air of a cool but sunny day. Jesse Pomeroy was moving. He had left behind him forever the place where he had known some of the most celebrated prisoners of the half-century, such characters as Sacco and Vanzetti, the two men whose execution caused a world-wide protest.

THE notorious "lifer" carried with him an oblong parcel. It contained the sum total of his worldly goods, a well-thumbed Bible and a copy of a prison publication. He carried the package carefully, almost tenderly, as if it contained fragile treasure which couldn't be replaced.

As the car sped onward into the busy whirl and rush of a Boston new to him, he looked straight ahead. He must have felt, even if he didn't see, the change which had taken place since last he walked the streets. But he gave no sign at first. He was intent upon his brooding. He didn't want to go. What if he would hear at Bridgewater the songs of birds? He had forgotten what the song of a bird sounded like. The sounds he wanted to hear were the sounds to which he had been accustomed for 53 years—the sound of clanging metallic doors. What would green meadows mean to him when he had forgotton what green meadows looked like? He cared not a whit for the promised odors of new-mown hay and flowers when the only odors he could call to mind were those of Charlestown's prison-scented air.

Much interest had attached to Jesse's "coming-out" party as a result of wide-spread speculation on what his reactions would be to the vast and numerous changes in the landscape. But at first it was rather amazing to see his show of unconcern. One would have thought he was just an inmate of an old men's home being taken out for a daily spin. He didn't even show interest in the speed of the car in which he was riding, although it was the first time he had ever ridden in any street conveyance that was faster than a horse-drawn buggy.

But as the trip toward Bridgewater progressed and the changed world continued to beat and hammer itself into his consciousness, he began to wake up and stare. New and astonishing sights fell so rapidly upon his vision that he was fairly overwhelmed. It was not long until he was on the edge of his seat, drinking in the wonders that were now being unfolded in a Boston he had not seen in 53 years.

THE rush and clatter of traffic through the streets, the whir and roar of the speeding elevated railway trains, the hurrying throngs fighting to get into the subways, the well-groomed parks, the asphalted streets, the drone of the mail planes from the airport—these brought brightness to his eyes, exclamations to his lips.

"So that's the elevated they talk so much about, is it?" he inquired as a five-car train passed over the machine at Forest Hills and he caught his first glimpse of a method of transportation which Boston has enjoyed for many years.

At Randolph, not far out of Boston, a halt was made and Pomeroy's guards bought him some cigars, ginger ale and ice cream. At first the old "lifer" refused because of the staring crowd, but once under way again he tasted ginger ale and ice cream for the first time and found them good.

"They're wonderful," he said, "but I'm afraid they won't agree with me."

While passing through Randolph somebody remarked upon the beauty of the old Yankee Cemetery and Pomeroy's fellow prisoner inquired where Jesse's mother was buried.

"In North Weymouth, not far from Boston," Pomeroy replied, and then added a bit wistfully: "I'd like to visit her grave sometime, but I'm afraid they won't stop for me on this trip."

At the East Boston airport a mail plane was just taking off and the guards slowed down to permit the prisoner to watch the huge flying craft. He had seen planes high in the air from the prison, but this was his first close-up and he was deeply interested.

Finally, they reached the penal farm at Bridgewater — Jesse Pomeroy's new home with its grass and its trees and birds. The old life at State Prison—the only life he had known for 53 years—was behind him. And Jesse Pomeroy was homesick.

SAILED the ATLANTIC in an 18-FOOT BOAT —And all for LOVE

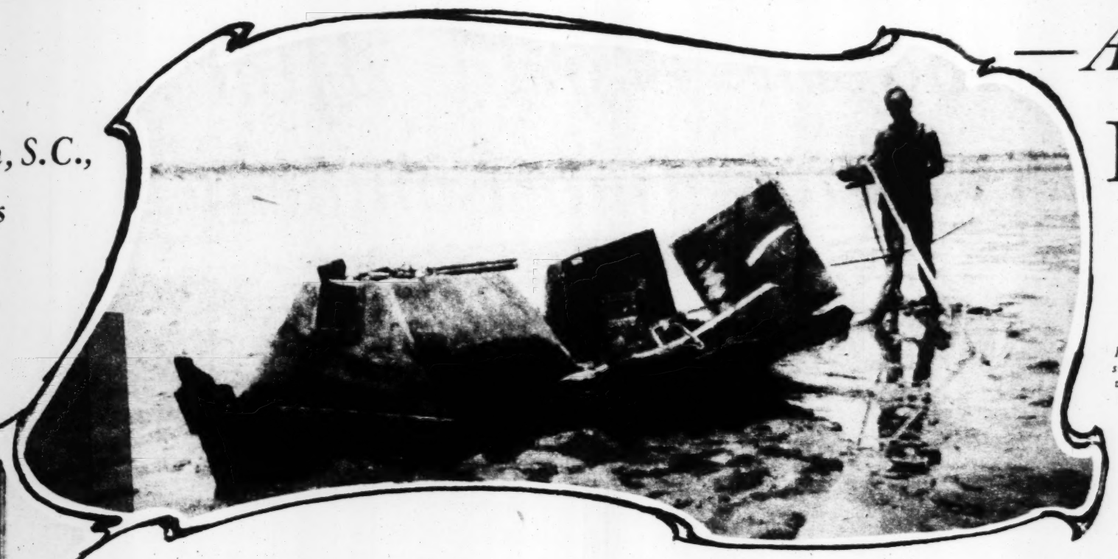
And When He Was Wrecked at Charleston, S.C., the Admiring Citizens of the Town Bought Him a New Boat.



Paul Muller surveying the wreckage of the Aga I.

CHARLESTON, South Carolina.

IT WAS a sheer bit of luck for Paul Muller that the frail boat in which he sailed alone across the Atlantic happened to be wrecked at this particular point in a thousand miles of coast line. For the citizens of Charleston have proved that Southern hospitality is not a myth.

They have taken this German grocer in and they have even come to accept him as a hero of sorts. At least they have accorded him the rewards and privileges of a hero.

This did not come all at once. It must be admitted that there were even scoffers and sceptics at first. And then Charleston learned that Paul had sailed his mighty sail in an 18-foot boat for love's sake, all for Fraulein Agatha Gavinski. That did the trick. Every chivalrous Southern heart beat for him from that day on.

And now Charleston has just accorded him a municipal celebration and sent him away in a new boat, for which citizens subscribed $1000, back across the lonely Atlantic and into the arms of Fraulein Gavinski. He will return quite definitely a hero. Charleston has vouched for that.

In order to marry Fraulein Gavinski at all Muller realized he would have to make more money than he could ever make as a grocer's clerk. And to marry her with the proper flourishes so as to do entire justice to her charms, he felt he should be a hero. Lindbergh—there was a man to be admired, and he had made a kettle full of money, too. So Muller hied himself off to an aviation training school. But they said he was a little too old. Forty-two years, they told him, is beyond the age limit.

Still the idea of crossing the Atlantic fascinated him. If not in an airplane, then in a boat. At this stage of his venture his enthusiasm and eagerness were so great that he was even able to find financial backers who thought, too, that it would be a heroic thing for one man to sail across the Atlantic in a small boat. But then there were two disastrous starts. The financial backers got discouraged, and finally there was only Paul alone for it.

He managed to acquire and outfit an 18-foot boat, which he called—of course—the "Aga," for Agatha. Muller knew little about navigation, but he was going to have a chance during the voyage to learn a great deal more.

AFTER touching at numerous ports of Holland, Belgium, England, France, Spain, Morocco, the Canary Islands, the Bahamas and Cuba, Muller finally reached Miami, Florida, on June 3, 1929. This was Florida, but it was not New York, where all heroes are greeted, so Muller stayed only a short time and then started skirting up the coast.

A terrific gale, on June 28, blew the Aga ashore and dashed her to pieces on Kiawah Island, near Charleston. Paul believed for some time that he was on an uninhabited island. He had been so shaken up that he scarcely realized where he was. As a last resort he set fire to the wreck of the Aga for a distress signal. In half an hour a passing fisherman had come to find what the fire was all about.

After remaining that night on the mosquito-infested beach, Muller was brought to the city and in the due course of events to the Chamber of Commerce.

When Muller had related a simple narrative of his voyage through an interpreter, there were many incredulous smiles. "Is it possible?" these smiles meant. Here, they thought, is possibly another Joan Lowell. But Muller had saved his daily log, his compass, charts, passport, credentials, newspaper clippings and photographs of his 12 months' voyage, and these offered convincing proof of the story he told.

After a day or two the Chamber of Commerce awoke to a responsibility. After all, here was a hero, and a very pleasant and friendly hero, who was being a little neglected. A fund was immediately started. Mayor Thomas P. Stoney was the first contributor. It was not long before the thousand dollars for a new boat that would enable him to complete the round trip and sail back to Hamburg was raised.

Charleston's citizens were shortly to celebrate the opening of a new three-mile, $6,000,000 steel bridge across the Cooper River. Someone happened to think that this date coincided with the date that Muller would sail from Charleston, his boat completed. So his departure was made an official part of the celebration.

When he went to give the new boat a final inspection, in company with representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, Muller managed to make a little speech in English which went something like this:

"With this boat I drive to New York and then I drive also back across the Atlantic. I make the voyage across back in three months, and then I write a book of my experiences. It will be interesting, maybe. Yes?"

SOME of the members of the Chamber of Commerce thought it might be best if he went back into the grocery business and gave up the hero idea. But Paul is determined to bring an even more triumphant end to his adventure. And when he comes back he may have a shipmate on board.

He sailed out of the harbor the other day with shouts of acclaim still ringing in his ears. In bright new paint on the side was "Aga II—Presented by Citizens of Charleston, S. C."

When he reaches New York it is improbable that the resplendent Mayor Walker or the immaculate Grover Whalen will steam down to the bay to meet him. And it is doubtful if the fire tugs will shrill in his honor. Nor will he, in all probability, have to force his way through a rain of ticker tape down the canyon of Broadway. But it is no matter. Charleston has taken care of all that and Paul Muller knows what it is to be a hero.

Her Greatest Wish Was to Meet the Prince of Wales

But as Soon as It Was Granted the Fortunes of Queen Souriya of Afghanistan Began to Decline Until She Landed at Marseilles the Other Day Wearing a Coat Her Servant Might Once Have Spurned.

Queen Souriya.

The deposed King of Afghanistan and King George of England.

MARSEILLES, France.

THERE was once a girl whose dearest dream was to meet the Prince of Wales. She was not a Cinderella, not a girl eking out a poor living toiling in a soap factory. She was, instead, a Queen herself. Queen Souriya, wife of the ruler of Afghanistan.

Just a little more than a year ago her dream came true. Accompanied by her King, dressed in royal sables, while her husband, Amanullah, wore a gorgeous Afghan uniform, received with the thunder of guns, their ship brought them to England. Then it was that a slim young man in the uniform of a Colonel of the Welsh Guards, came aboard. And he took the Queen's hand and kissed it. Her dream had come true. The slim young man was the Prince of Wales.

A few days ago Amanullah and his Queen touched Europe's shores again. This time there was no firing of mighty guns, no marching troopers, no Afghan ensigns breaking forth at the mastheads of ships of war. Instead, a man and a woman in civilian dress came down the gangplank to touch foot on the soil of Marseilles. The man wore a gray suit, a gray hat. And the woman wore upon her head a hat of cheap straw and about her shoulders a tweed coat that once her servant girls would have refused to wear. The man and the woman were Amanullah and Queen Souriya again, ex-King Amanullah and ex-Queen Souriya, exiles from their land of Afghanistan, a deposed monarch and his wife, a woman in tears looking about her on the Marseilles docks for a friendly face.

Amanullah and his Queen were accompanied, on their arrival here, by seven of their children—the eighth, the ex-heir apparent, is in Paris—five close relatives and one maid, whose duty it was to care for the six-weeks-old Princess Hindia.

I looked at them as they came down the gangplank, and the background of gaping passengers faded, and once again I stood with the King and Queen on the channel steamer of their former visit. The Queen clutched the King's arm as over our ship came the British airplanes flying in perfect alignment. Then, almost before we were in sight of Dover cliffs, came an escort of British destroyers, and, for the first time in history, the Afghan ensign in yellow and black was broken at the masthead of British ships. Accompanied by British airplanes and British destroyers, we reached Dover, where there was a guard of honor, a battalion of the Lincoln Regiment and a detachment of sailors.

But here at Marseilles Amanullah and Souriya, hand in hand, followed by their children, looking for all the world like a living picture out of the Old Testament, walked down the gangway into the roaring city, the gateway to the Orient. Queen Souriya, in tears, looked round for a friendly face, and the King wept unashamedly when a small party of his loyal Ministers threw themselves into his arms and kissed him on both cheeks and hugged him affectionately. The royal party drove to their hotel through crowds of jostling sailors, soldiers, Arabs, Senegalese, Armenians and Greeks.

WHAT did the noise of this city say to the royal couple? Did the roar of Marseilles recall the roar of Piccadilly? Did the Queen, in her mind's eye, see once again the nodding plumes of the Lifeguards escort, which I knew she loved so well?

Queen Souriya, whose most sacred memory is her stay at Buckingham Palace, seems resigned to her fate, but not so Amanullah; he is still full of fight. When I asked him if he though he had proceeded too quickly with his reforms, he answered:

"They say I go too quick. No, mullahs go too quick."

Amanullah blames the priests for his downfall. He made an interpreter tell me in detail how Afghanistan was governed. There was a one-chamber Parliament, consisting of 1000 members, known as the Grand Council. Parliament was elected for a term of three years. All males over 21 voted. There was a Cabinet of eight. The Prime Minister's salary was $6000 a year, those of the other Ministers $4000.

Amanullah impressed on me that this might not sound much to me, but the cost of living in his country was low.

"The priests," said Amanullah, "preached to the ignorant tribesmen; these priests were against me because they knew I intended to suppress their influence, which was an evil influence. I fought, but we were overcome, and now there is no King at all. Nobody recognizes the bandit who sits in my palace."

I asked the ex-King to tell me the truth about his financial situation, as once it had been reported that he left his country with $150,000 in cash and $2,500,000 worth of jewels, and a later message said he had left with only $30 in the world. Neither of the stories is true.

AMANULLAH has sufficient money banked in Europe to last him "some considerable time." In addition every Afghan legation has ample deposits to carry on for a long time.

It is now permissible to tell some of the incidents of the last Afghan tour, which lasted seven months. They say that the tour was not all plain sailing. Amanullah, I understand, obtained an advance of six years' cash payments on his civil list, but in many ways he was entirely ignorant as to who was paying the cost of the tour.

When the royal party was in Cairo en route for Rome, the King went into a barber's for a shave; he walked out without paying, but the barber ran after him, and the King said: "The British Government pays." On the very eve of the journey from Paris to London there was a hitch because the King refused to pay the cost of the royal transport from Paris to Calais. He wanted the Afghan legation in Paris to pay; but the legation sent a message to the Paris office of the Southern Railway saying they had better get the money from the King before he started.

The royal party stayed overnight at a Calais hotel before embraking. The manager decorated the table with flowers. Before sitting down to dinner the King insisted on knowing whether he would be expected to pay for the flowers.

These statements are all true, to my own personal knowledge.

I ASKED Amanullah to tell me what the real situation in Afghanistan was. The King replied that important tribesmen in the east and south were supporting Nadir Khan, and the King believes that Nadir will win.

"He is a great soldier, and once commanded my army before he became Minister in Paris."

Then Amanullah went on to tell a romantic story of this old soldier, who, living peacefully in his villa at Nice, suddenly returned to his country and fought.

"Will Nadir become King?" I asked.

"Many people want him to become King, but he is too old and sick."

"Will he regain the throne for you?" I queried.

"If people want me, I go," he said.

And then again I thought of that other visit. How I interviewed the Queen in her apartments at the Hotel Crillon, overlooking the Place de la Concorde. I pointed out to the Queen the two fountains playing, and told her that they mark the site of the guillotine where were executed a French King and Queen.

This Afghan Queen, whose complexion is as white as that of a European—she is Syrian—looked thoughtfully at the fountains.

The wheel of fate brought Souriya very near that of Marie Antoinette.

Then it remembered this girl prodigy of the Montana mining camps, who made the early nineteen-hundreds gasp with her searching analyses of her thoughts and yearnings. She was one of the originators of the "confessions" school of writing and came into literary prominence with a blazing suddenness that was almost unparalleled. She was somber and bitter and petulant, but withal just a bit of a poet. She confessed down to the last primitive impulse, and confessions weren't all. She said her say on a variety of topics and made the public like it. There was about her something of the emancipator, undeveloped though that something was. In retrospect she appears as a sort of pioneer flapper, forerunner of knee-length skirts, frank talk and cigarettes. But what a heavy, Nietzschean flapper!

"The Story of Mary MacLane," her first volume was called. It was a literary curiosity and a three months' sensation. It went like wildfire. School girls and maiden aunts fought for it. Then came "I, Mary MacLane," and, a few years later, "Men Who Have Made Love to Me." They were uniformly shocking to an age which still set great store by the conventions and maidenly proprieties. For Mary was frank and profane and, according to all standards of the time, unmaidenly to a breath-taking degree. She wrote "hells" and "damns" into her diaries without restraint and spoke right out about things which girls of her days weren't even supposed to think about. Moreover, she spoke disrespectfully of marriage and was irreverent besides. She referred lightly to deities in general and horrified all pious folk by addressing prayers to the devil. Her litany to the devil became famous. It was quoted, imitated and parodied from one end of the country to the other.

"From little boys with long curls; from the kind of people who call a woman's figure her 'shape'; Kind Devil, deliver me," she wrote in that celebrated supplication.

"From all sweet girls; from 'gentlemen'; from feminine men: Kind Devil, deliver me.

"From black underclothing; from hips that wobble as one walks; from the soft, persistent, maddening glances of water-cart drivers; from insipid sweet wine; from men who wear mustaches; from the sort of people that call legs 'limbs': Kind Devil, deliver me.

"FROM soft old bachelors and soft old widowers; from any masculine thing that wears a pale-blue necktie; from agonizing elocutionists who recite 'Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight'; from fools who tell me what I 'want' to do; from tin spoons; from popular songs; from a nice young man; from side-saddles; from people who don't wash their hair often enough; from a servant with false teeth; from a bed that sinks in the middle: Kind Devil deliver me."

But, she added, if the kind devil would only bring her happiness she would more than willingly be annoyed by all these abominations. She would even tolerate her home and family. And family life, she declared, was symbolized to her by "six toothbrushes on a bathroom ledge—oh, hell!"

Mary was just out of high school and living with her widowed mother in Butte when she embarked upon her quaint literary ramblings. She was bored and tired of life—tired, at least, of the only life she knew. She was morbid. She longed for death, or fancied she did. She used to go down on the flat to a deserted mine shaft and hang over the brink, looking into the dark pit, undecided whether to let go of the stake which supported her. Death held a sensual appeal for her, she said. She was flirting. But she didn't let go the stake. She always went back to the home fireside that oppressed her, there to meditate upon the injustice of her lot, upon her genius—for she never doubted that she was a genius—and upon her resemblance to Lord Byron. She was sure she resembled him, for she had found suggestions of herself in his "Don Juan." She also thought she resembled Marie Bashkirtseff, the Russian authoress, whose then famous "Journal" had been published a few years before, but she admitted she went beyond Marie.

Mary at nineteen.

"Where she is deep, I am deeper," wrote Mary.

"Where she is wonderful in her intensity, I am still more wonderful in my intensity. Where she had a philosophy, I am a philosopher.

"Where she had astonishing vanity and conceit, I have yet more astonishing vanity and conceit.

"But she, forsooth, could paint good pictures—and I—what can I do?

"She had a beautiful face, and I am a plain-featured little animal.

"She was surrounded by admiring, sympathetic friends, and I am alone—alone, though there are people and people.

"She was a genius, and still more am I a genius.

"She suffered with the pain of a woman, young; and I suffer with the pain of a woman, young and all alone.

"And so it is."

And so it went throughout her first book and those which came afterward. She wrote "The Story of Mary MacLane" in the form of a diary, setting down her daily thoughts in dated chapters. On some days her chapters were brief and melancholy. On others, long and melancholy. Sometimes they were neither short nor long, but melancholy just the same. "Oh, the wretched loneliness of me!" was her daily plaint in one form or another. Often she wound up in an intellectual tantrum.

"To be a woman, young and all alone, is hard—hard!—is to want things, is to carry a heavy, heavy weight.

"Oh, damn! damn! damn! Damn every living thing — the world!—the universe be damned."

Such a literature of frustration might not have attracted much sympathy coming from a mad German philosopher, but coming from a 19-year-old miss, vain of her "excellent young woman's body," a miss who under ordinary conditions might have been expected to gurgle and gush and talk of gallant suitors, it sounded strange and unnatural. It sounded either very pathetic or very selfish and ill-tempered. Many sympathized. Many others criticised. They were irked with her endless complaining. F. P. A., widely known newspaper columnist, once made her the subject of satirical comment in a couplet in which he paraphrased Wordsworth's "The Lost Love":

She walked along untrodden paths
Among the hills of Butte—
A lady nobody cared to love
And nobody dared to shoot.

THE only person she could remember for whom she felt any real affection, Mary wrote, was her "anemone lady." The "anemone lady" was a former high school teacher who used to read poetry to her. Her family meant nothing to her, she said. Her father had died when she was 8, after bringing his family to Montana from Fergus Falls, Minnesota, where Mary was born. She was sure he never loved her, "as he was quite incapable of loving anybody but himself." It was the same way with her mother.

"When I think of the exquisite love and sympathy which might be between a mother and daughter," she wrote, "I feel myself defrauded of a beautiful thing rightfully mine, in a world where such things are pitiably few."

Her mother didn't understand her. Neither did her brothers and sisters. They were not interested in her analyses and philosophy and wants. Their own wants were "strictly practical and material." Any other wants were to them "things only for people in books."

She came out of high school with the following equipment: "Very good Latin; good French and Greek; indifferent geometry and other mathematics; a broad conception of history and literature; peripatetic philosophy that I acquired without any aid from the high school; genius of a kind that has always been with me; an empty heart that has taken on a certain wooden quality; an excellent, strong young woman's body; a pitiably starved soul."

With this equipment she embarked upon a "life of nothingness," beseeching the devil to come to her soon. She wrote every day. Writing was a necessity—like eating. Thanking the devil for her two good legs, she walked every day over the sand and barrenness, the little hills and gluches, finding inspiration in "utter desolateness." Day after day, she said, her routine was this:

"I rise in the morning; eat three meals; and walk; and work a little, read a little, write, see some uninteresting people; go to bed."

And so after two years:

"I find myself at this stage of womankind and 19 years, a genius, a thief, a liar—a general moral vagabond, a fool more or less, and a philosopher of the peripatetic school. Also, I find that even this combination cannot make one happy. It serves, however, to occupy my versatile mind, to keep me wondering what it is a kind devil has in store for me."

Having admitted she was a thief, she hesitated not at all to give particulars. She stole pennies out of her mother's purse. Once she went on a shopping errand for a neighbor and failed to return $3 of the change. The lady hadn't missed it, so, of course, it couldn't be wrong. She didn't traffic with such abstract terms as right and wrong, anyway. What did they mean? What did good and bad mean? Besides, she took the $3 to buy chrysanthemums for a lonely woman. Wasn't that justifiable?

There was so much in the world that was really bad, or rather there were so many things popularly said to be good, regarded as good, which weren't good at all. Look at marriage! Mary often did, then appealed to the devil to save her from it.

"I sit at my window and look out upon the housetops and chimneys of Butte," she wrote. "As I look I have a weary, disgusted feeling.

"People are abominable creatures.

"Under each of the roofs live a man and woman joined together by that very slender thread, the marriage ceremony—and their children, the result of the marriage ceremony.

"How many of them love each other? Not two in a hundred I warrant. The marriage ceremony is their one miserable, petty, paltry excuse for living together.

"How virtuous these people are, to be sure, under their different roof-trees. So virtuous are they, indeed, that they are able to draw themselves up in the pride of their purity, when they happen upon some corner where the marriage ceremony is lacking. * * *

"I think, therefore, that I should prefer some life that is not virtuous.

"I shall never make use of the marriage ceremony. I hereby register a vow, Devil, to that effect. * * *

"May I never, I say, become that abnormal, merciless animal, that deformed monstrosity—a virtuous woman. Anything, Devil, but that."

MARY'S first book was her greatest success. Within a day after the manuscript reached the Chicago publishers it was accepted. Within a week it was off the press. Harriet Monroe, later the editor of Poetry Magazine, was largely responsible. At that time she was a reader for the Chicago firm and sensed the fact that Mary's book would sell. It did.

Mary's success enabled her to leave Butte for Chicago, where she was received as a person of note. She was entertained, photographed, interviewed. People sought her opinions on everything and Mary got to feel that a bright epigram was expected of her every time somebody asked a question. Sometimes the result was embarrassing.

As far, perhaps, as Mary could enjoy anything she did enjoy prosperity for several years while her books and her magazine and newspaper articles poured royalties into her lap. She went east for a time and enrolled in Radcliffe College of Harvard University. Then she got homesick and went back to Butte. She hated it, but at the same time she loved it. She was that way—curiously contradictory.

Her vogue really ended with her second work, "I, Mary MacLane." Afterwards she wrote "Men Who Have Made Love to Me" and "My Friend, Annabel Lee." (She always said Poe's "Annabel Lee" was the greatest poem ever written.) But these met with waning favor. Already the news stands were laden with the works of her imitators and their imitators. Her royalties diminished and disappeared. Then came the lean years and oblivion. She lived in seclusion for a time at Rockland, Massachusetts, finally drifting back to Chicago, unrecognized as a once popular authoress. There, a few days ago, the end came in the humble little hotel on the edge of the black and tan belt. Such was Fame, for disappointed, unhappy Mary MacLane.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN — AMERICANS?

BY

WILBUR DANIEL STEELE

"Git, Eben Perkins," says Molly, "and git quick!"

THIS Is One of a Series of Prize Stories, by Celebrated American Authors, Which Is Being Published in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

THEY live in the country of the old—old houses, old sands, old men. Already they dream, that when they are gone the tides, which seem to eat deeper into the cove each year, will just come on up one spring and carry what's left of Cape Cod down under the water of the Seven Seas that in its old youth it conquered, its work and its glory done. And that will be before long now, for there are only a few folks left.

You can count the families on one hand. There are the Whites and the Fullers in the Hollow, the Rogerses at the Bog, the Brewster brothers at the Cove. That's about all now in this tenuous, half-drowned, seven-mile wrist of the Cape. Of the Whites and Rogerses there are four generations, in the Fuller house three; the latter ends run pretty puttering, though, and pretty thin.

If it's a far cry from Edward Fuller who came ashore to say his prayers, chase Indians, and leave his name on the Pilgrim Tablet over in Provincetown, down to Eddie Fuller, yawning and attending to his pimples behind the postoffice boxes at the Center—if it's a far cry from those dreadless "subjects of the dead sovereign" down to the youthless White youths, flivver-rattling to their fevered merry-makings at Wellfleet or Eastham, their galvanic dead-frog dancing, their drug-store tipple, and their radio jazz—if there's a gap there, there's a gap almost as wide and quite as melancholy still living under the roofs with them—Sam White and Benjie Fuller in the Hollow, Ember Rogers at the Bog, Andy and Isaiah Brewster at the Cove—men who fetched Kennebec icecakes to Calcutta and brought new China tea up the Thames in the Sea Glory and the A. J. Stowell two weeks ahead of London's own East-Indiamen in the days that were days.

IN those days the Cape bred women, too. Look at Molly Andy Brewster's wife, that's dead and gone. Then look at the Molly Brewster of today. She keeps house for her great-grandfather, Andy, and his brother, Isaiah, at the Cove, and what house she keeps! Well, it's not the way the other Molly did of 60 years ago. Bread baked in Boston, beans baked in Chicago, cake in cardboard from goodness-knows-where! She hasn't the time, she says.

Hasn't the time! Those two old men fathom the sad, deep, literal truth of that. She hasn't the time. She came too late, the sand's too nearly run. After her the deluge; so why take pains? What's the use of forethought, with nothing to come? What's the use of character, never to be handed down? What's the use even of appearances? Studying her secretly from beneath their watery lids, they comprehend. That is why, then, she speaks a language of strange, daring, slipshod words; why her gestures are all immoderate and her songs out of tune; why she goes about unabashed in skirts as short and lips as red as a California harlot in the days of gold. That is why she is never at home evenings, darning or quilting under the sitting-room lamp, but off as soon as ever the supper dishes are stacked, with a pat and a fling and a mouth of rebellion, flitting the devil alone knows where in the dark of the country of the old.

"Let us eat, drink and be merry"—— Poor girl!

She hasn't the time even to care about the company she keeps. This strikes deepest into the hearts of Andy and Isaiah. Their pride is bitter. To think of these two blond vikings of the republic who carried the Stars and Stripes around a wondering world, who came to fetch good, honest Indies rum ashore under the dark Cove, like the free men they were, and went up to the meeting house in their Sabbath beavers to worship the God of Massachusetts as only free men may—to think of them having to sit, shackled to their rockers by the weight of their proud years, and watch the remnant of their line and population going, without visibly caring, to the dogs!

They would have called him a dog in their time, or at least "one of them niggers of some sort."

He comes out of the deepening shadows. Whence he comes, in that narrow land where there are only the Rogerses and Brewsters, the Fullers and the Whites, who can say? Andy and Isaiah can't. When they try their minds close up.

He comes out of the deepening shadows, his approach heralded long before he is seen, by the sounding boards of the hills that gather down to the Cove, the clank of a loose brakebeam, the whine of gritted springs, gaskets wheezing. A curious centaur, head and shoulders and busy arms of a man, body of an ungroomed half-ton truck. So from their rockers on the porch behind the mosquito netting they always see him, Jimmy the Greek. So he careens to a halt under the antique, uneasy willows in the blue-brown shadow cast by Sheep Hill; so he snorts, backs, swerves, carricoles, pawing the sand, gamboling in the twilight of these Yankee gods; so he rears there, breathing heavily with his pitted cylinders, peering glassily with his one large, rectangular eye at the house beyond the turf, the house native and noble, solid and broad and low, with a roof like another slope of the gray Pamet moors. So, unbudging from his hybrid shell, he calls through the dusk: "Molly to home?"

Neither Andy nor Isaiah answers. Rock, rock, their chairs and their dry bones creaking, their eyes meeting, full of repugnance, rebellion, appeal. They'd have their tongues cut out before they'd speak.

No need. Molly has answered herself. "Yep; just a second I'll be with you, Jim, old kid."

She passes out between the rockers, hatless, free of elbow, wanton of stocking, neither mother of tomorrow nor daughter of yesterday.

"Where you bound for, Molly?" Andy writhes. He feels degraded.

"Where you bound?" Isaiah writhes. He, too, had sworn never to ask again.

"Oh, nowheres. Up to the dance at Chatham, that's all. Oh, for the love, Jimmy, can that honking, will you! I'm on my way. Now, daddies, run, climb in your beds like good boys. Sound sleep, sweet dreams!"

Sleep! Dreams! The mockery!

Their rockers are still. Leaning forward, squeezing the chair-arms with their veincorded fists, they follow the iron flight of the centaur, cast back in fainter and fainter reverberations from the folded moorside, careening farther away, deeper in the mists of the falling night.

He's going up Graveyard Hill now. If only their legs could run as swiftly as their minds. He's abreast of the old Snow place now. Thrrrmmm! Whine and wheeze! An abominable whisper threading the valleys. It's louder for an instant, as though a door in the hills had opened. He's crossing the marsh at the Center now, this what-is-he? This Greek. This what's-his-name? J. Krenk, General Trucking. Jimmy the Greek. And Molly Brewster.

ANGER, reckless and helpless, sweeps them. Let him take her. Let him take her back to his lemon-peddling, olive-stinking, two-for-a-nickel Levant ports. Then let her see!

Then let her think of those White women, the other Mollys, her mothers!

Memories submerge the two men; their tantrum passes and gives place to nostalgia; they turn cowards, feeling themselves abandoned, defeated at last. The mosquito bar is a cage, oppressing their lungs and bringing to their skins a faint, chill sweat. Moved by a common impulse, they get up and rush out. They have forgotten their hats, and Isaiah's head is as bald as a porpoise. What matter? Their rheumatics! Their hearts! What odds!

Where are they going, hoisting their feet so industriously along the clam-shell metal of this road? Where and why?

They look back when they reach the crest of Sheep Hill, and from the height they see the country familiar to them, rod by rod of its folded moors, its dunes and winding marshes spread of a sudden fantastic and pixy-peopled under this night. Will-o'-the-wisps and ghost fires.

There's John Champion's house, under the shoulder of Finback, a mile to the east. John died a good 20 years ago, and his daughter's family moved to Iowa. Yet there looks to be a light in it, a goblin cheer. Dave Burch passed on in the '90s; his children live in Los Angeles; the homestead, hidden under the cottonwoods in the Flat, opens an eye in distant banshee mockery. And there again. As if there were people and populations! And there again. Like a lamp on Borneo Plain!

There's one element that never betrays, but always plays fair. If the land is playing tricks with your eyes, old fellows, turn them to the sea.

Across the water the sky toward Boston shows a late loom of dusk, double upside down in the mirroring plain. Not far offshore, across the mouth of the cove a fisherman sails, his dim masts erect in the meager breeze. Farther distant, toward the lights on Provincetown shore, a monster lies at rest on the sea.

So the sea, too, is corruptible tonight, even the sea. Like a Leviathan. Leviathan blowing a leaden, lazy spout; prodigious creature, ink-black, incandescent-striped.

"She come in weeth engine trouble," says a voice.

There's another watcher on Sheep Hill. He arises from a beach-plum bush at their feet, headless, because he has his coat shawlwise over his head.

"I never seen her beefore, thees ship, and that's funny because my boy goes een her, and she's lak a city, he says. Fifty-nine t'ousand ton! What you know about that?"

What, indeed, do they know about that? Except that the night is trying to play them another trick. Painting that shadow on the shadows out there, enormous; as though a master and a mate of an incomparable Sea Glory were to be taken in by a jest as thin as that, a ship enormous as 80 Sea Glories on one keel!

It's too rare. Andy and Isaiah open their mouths to chuckle, and, before they can chunckle, a hot, contemptuous anger has got in their throats instead.

"Who are you?" they cry, and, "Where you from?" Those voices that rang, full-winded, absolute, over the decks of the white clippers of the years when the world rubbed its eyes. Echoes now.

Echoes, yes, but echoes still puissant. The headless Jack-in-the-box sounds fetched-aback and ill at ease.

"Wh-who-who am I? Well, I guess you know me, Meester Brewster. You know Manuel Braganza. You seen me round plentee, I guess. Since five year I got thees old Champion place back here, crost from Jimmee the Greek. I guess you know me, all right."

"Nope."

"You don't know Manuel Brag"—— Don't know Manny the Lisbon?"

"Never hear the name. Never!"

"You—you never hear o' my boy Johnee?"

"Johnnie who?"

Silence. That has done for him. It has done for them, too; done wonders. Their feet are solid on their own hill again and they begin to tower. Men against bogies, men will win every time.

It's true. The spook hasn't a word. Presently he begins to fade before their eyes, a receding whisper of sand. Across the hilltop and down the slope the long, black dismembered torso vanishes degree by degree into the dark above the invisible Cove.

Give these old fellows an inch and they'll take a mile. The impulse to pursue, to rout him sevenfold, to crow, to pile it on, is too strong. Nor is it altogether this that hauls them to the sandy precipice where he disappeared. Triumph has given sudden rein to memories; their feet are in old paths; their tongues wag.

"Remember that night the revenue man come snoopin'?"

"Remember the skiff bottom-up on the beach with the three bar'ls of rum under it, and me under it with 'em and my legs caught out by the gun'l, full in view?"

"Rec'lect the brig hove to out there, 'bout where that fisherman lays now?"

"The Abraham, wa'n't it? And Ezra Small?"

THEY pause. Pause? Where are they? What in the name of Jehoshaphat are they doing here, old files, clinging midway of the precipitous sand? This much is certain. If they don't catch their death one way they'll catch it another.

They pause. Hunkering down in little sand slides, they gaze at the becalmed schooner. In the cobweb starlight it might truly be the Abraham, and Captain Ezra prowling the deck and chewing his whisker and wondering what's wrong with the Brewster boys ashore. They gaze at the pool of the inlet below them, and there the starlight, chasing the ripples, weaves silver stuff of dreams, mesmeric, fluent. The gods are young.

"Rec'lect that night, eh?"

"Remember Molly"——

Molly! A subconscious discord. A rift of syncopation, dilute, galvanic; a painted mouth, an empty head; a half-ton truck, a Greek.

No, though! By thunder, no! Molly, they're talking of. Molly!

She was the wife of one, the sister-in-law of the other. Years have almost outlawed the inequality. To each she comes back all comeliness, all docile bravery, all grace. A woman of those days.

"Remember Molly that night, Isaiah? You couldn't see her, though, and you stuck under the skiff; the way she come trippin' down from nowheres, fetch one look at your boots croppin' out like a hamstrung turtle, set down on the skiff, tidied her skirts out over, and set there gazing at the stars as soberlike as if she was in the habit of star-gazin' every night with a shotgun laid across her lap. Nor you couldn't see the way old Revenue Perkins eyed her and hesitated, scrawn out his neck and fetch to a halt."

"I heard him, though, Andy; promise you that. 'Pleasant evenin', Mis' Brewster!' 'Pleasant evenin', Mr. Perkins!' 'I'm aimin' to have a look in under that skiff, if you don't mind, Mis' Brewster.' 'In which case, Mr. Perkins, you're aimin' to do something you ain't able; not so long's I'm sittin' onto it.' 'In which case, Mis' Brewster, I shall have the law onto the lot of you'— 'In which case, Mr. Perkins, I'll have something a sight quicker actin' than the law onto you, sir" (With that I hear the gun-butt easin' up along the garboard strake.) 'Quit it, Molly Brewster!' says Perkins. 'Git, Eben Perkins,' says Molly, 'and git quick!'"

"And Revenue gat! I guess he gat!"

"Never hear the last of it, did he? Nor come snoopin' this way again, eh?"

"Feared o' meetin' up with Molly! Heh-heh!"

The gentlest, the abidingest of women! What homage could be more precious to the heroine of long ago than this cachination of old men, this mirth flung out in thready challenge to reconquering nothingness and the prowling powers of the dark?

The dark answers, coagulating in another shade at their feet, down hill. "What are you doin' here, you guys?"

Their mouths dry and fall agape.

"Well, I v-v-vow!!" bleats Isaiah, and Andy echoes him: "I vow!"

"Oh," breathes the shade, "I know now. It's old Isaiah and old Andy."

"But who in —in are you?"

"Don't you rec'nize me? It's Tony Fuller from the Coast Guard. You know me."

"Tony!" They see their chance. "Tony Fuller!" The impostor is delivered into their hands. Their voices break high. "There wa'n't never a man—there's been Ebs and Ezras, Johns and Jonathans—but never a man amongst the Fullers called by any such name, such a lemon-peddlin' name, as 'Tony.' No-sir-ee!"

The haunt chuckles, rubbing his lips with a spectral sleeve.

"Try Farquiera then; that's my family name when they come from the Azores. Or if you're bent on crackin' your jaws, try 'em on this Sob-lef-sky—Sub-lef-sky—whatever 'tis. He's down in the road to the left, waitin'; so you get along now, quiet, and tell him I sent you, and he'll leave you through. Skedaddle, my boys; clear out of here!"

If there is one there is a dozen retorts, just at their scandalized lips; arrogant laughter, withering old quarter-deck oaths. Dumbly, though sending down a whispering lace of sand, like autumnal spiders, they flee as they are told, not knowing why. They get off the cliff, their own cliff, not knowing how; a lichenous ground is underfoot, then a streak half clay, then ruts. A wind, a slow draft redolent of clam and weed, bears them along; an air familiar as the years of their youth, turned secret and queer. It bears them into the mouth of a hollow floored with blackness and roofed with stars. Sergeant Belkar Soblievski of the State Police snaps on the headlight of the motor cycle and examines them with his yellow cornucopia of flame.

"You're out late, my friends." Then, not meaning the light-blistered couple to stand there all night, he says in a kindlier tone: "Go right on, my fathers, and keep your mouths shut, and no harm done. Good-night."

IT is some moments before he snaps off the snooping light. Behind Isaiah and Andy, across the wheel track to the Eden of their ancestral Cove, the ray hangs horizontal, like a lazy angel's flaming sword.

So it's home they're coming, after all.

Their boots drag; soul and body they're beat, the pair of them, dead beat.

The house opens and swallows them. No need of a lamp; they can find their beds in the dark. Mind the table, Isaiah. Take care of that swayed door; it's got to be fixed, no two ways. Here's the chair for Andy, and here's the chair for Isaiah, to drape their coats and trousers over, their shirts and drawers.

There's nothing left but sleep, then. Sound sleep. Sweet dreams.

Isaiah, the youngster of the two, lies on his back, toes up, wide awake. Andy, across the room, lies toes up, too, counting sheep. One sheep over the fence; two sheep over the fence; three sheep over the fence. There's a nigger-looking fellow herding them. Land! he's got no head. Manny the Lisbon! That's a dirty port, Lisbon. And he had the gall to say—this headless Portugee Eyetalian fly-by-night——

"What's that? There! Again! Pacing like spirit footfalls across the turf outside!

The hall clock is still—still these years — but Molly's alarm clock sends in a tinny cheeping from the kitchen. Where can Molly be?

Five sheep over the fence; six sheep over the——

What's that? "Andy!"

"Yes, Isaiah?"

Isaiah slides out of bed, tiptoes across the chamber, creeps in beside his elder brother. Neither of them says anything. It's nearly 70 years since Isaiah did that. But neither of them speaks.

They're not used to lying awake. It's this night. This night of supernal license, weird airquakes, invasions crepuscular and fleeting of little people from beyond the pale.

Seven sheep over the fence—

"What's wrong, boy?"

"I hear a mosquito in the room, dang him, and I can't sleep."

"Pshaw, Isaiah, now you turn over and shut your eyes and"—Andy sits bolt up, a listener. "Hark!"

Thud! A fault in the atmosphere, small, echoes. A gunshot. Unmistakable. Thud! Thud! Thud! An imponderable fusillade.

Is it ghosts, in this land of the dead? Memories? All inside the brain?

Andy tries Isaiah: "Isaiah, did you hear anything?"

The youngster lies there with the quilt tight over his chest. It's a terrible thing, when you've been equal to anything and everything, to find yourself suddenly like this. His voice comes as thin as eel-grass.

"Where's that girl?"

IT'S too much for Andy, and he joins in: "Why don't she ever come home? What's she thinkin' on, this hour of the night?"

"'Tain't decent, Andy. What'll folks say?"

"What does she care for that?"

"What does she care if she keeps us wakin' for her?"

"Who are we, anyhow? What do we 'mount to?"

"What does anything 'mount to these days; anything but cavortin' about with foreigners, dancin', huggin', maybe, carryin' on, forgettin' your religion, your elders, your upbringin'—anything to make the time go quick?"

"And devil take the hindmost!"

There's a cry, clambered in distance. The devil taking the hindmost, perhaps. The empty moors and dunes where men used to live give it out; one lone articulation, anger, terror, mortal pain, who can tell from the spent whisper creeping in through the Brewster blinds?

"A-n-d-y, I wish—I wish that girl was to home."

"I—I wish she was."

The shame of it, confessed at last, mutably, out loud! Isaiah Brewster, who in the name of the Great Republic stood up on his feet and told the port-bashaw of the Emperor of Siam to go to Jericho! Andy Brewster, who, with his own hands put half his crew in irons at the height of the '71 typhoon! The two of them now, praying nothing but the sound of Molly's dance shoes on the floor beyond the wall; the comfort of even Molly's doomsday youthfulness under the roof with them!

Prayers aren't half-ton trucks, though, for beggars to ride.

How a Milk

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

WITH the death of Robert Henri in New York not long ago the career of one of America's most distinguished artists came to an end. It would be impossible to estimate the influence he has exerted on the trend of American art. And it was the encouragement of a milkman that led Henri to study art.

So when the final reckoning is taken the contribution of this milkman must be considered. It was James Albers Cathcard, who, passing on his morning rounds in a suburb in Philadelphia, noted some sketches that young Henri had done. "That boy has talent," he said to Henri's mother. "He should study at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts."

Of course, it must be added the milkman wasn't only a milkman but the owner of the dairy, peddling the milk to put himself in training for an athletic event. Moreover, he had studied for a time at the Philadelphia academy and therefore was able to recognize the mark of talent in young Henri's earliest sketches. But it was his word that was the decisive factor in the boy's career.

Robert Henri, son of John and Theresa Henri, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, 64 years ago. His family moved about a great deal, first to Denver, then to New York and finally to the town just outside Philadelphia. The boy's education was somewhat haphazard. But he had one great advantage. From the first his parents recognized in him talent of a very high order, genius possibly.

They recognized—as so many parents have failed to do—that he posessed the creative instinct. Whether he was to be a writing man or a painter they did not know. They allowed him to write or draw as the mood suited, with

How a Milkman Started Robert Henri on His Career

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

WITH the death of Robert Henri in New York not long ago the career of one of America's most distinguished artists came to an end. It would be impossible to estimate the influence he has exerted on the trend of American art, and it was the encouragement of a milkman that led Henri to study art.

So when the final reckoning is taken the contribution of this milkman must be considered. It was James Albers Cathcard, who, passing on his morning rounds in a suburb in Philadelphia, noted some sketches that young Henri had done. "That boy has talent," he said to Henri's mother. "He should study at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts."

Of course, it must be added the milkman wasn't only a milkman but the owner of the dairy, peddling the milk to put himself in training for an athletic event. Moreover, he had studied for a time at the Philadelphia academy and therefore was able to recognize the mark of talent in young Henri's earliest sketches. But it was his word that was the decisive factor in the boy's career.

Robert Henri, son of John and Theresa Henri, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, 64 years ago. His family moved about a great deal, first to Denver, then to New York and finally to the town just outside Philadelphia. The boy's education was somewhat haphazard. But he had one great advantage. From the first his parents recognized in him talent of a very high order, genius possibly.

They recognized—as so many parents have failed to do—that he possessed the creative instinct. Whether he was to be a writing man or a painter they did not know. They allowed him to write or draw as the mood suited, with his own inclination seeming to lean toward authorship. It was their conclusion that to press him in any definite direction would be unwise. The safer course was to let matters drift until events should serve to crystallize his ambitions.

Saw Some Sketches on a Wall Which the Boy Who Was to Become a Great American Artist Had Done.

Robert Henri.

WHEN Robert Henri was 19 years old repairs had to be made on the rear of the Henri home which temporarily left a considerable wall surface in an unfinished condition. It was an ideal place for a young artist to practice and Robert did several sketches in colors, knowing that they would be obliterated when the repairs were completed.

By chance James Albers Cathcard appeared on the scene before this could be done.

Sometime before Cathcard had learned that he had unusual ability as a walker. As proprietor of a dairy he ordinarily would not have been delivering his product but would have left the job to an employe. But now he was in training for an attempt to set a new record for pedestrianism and doing the milk route seemed a good way of conditioning himself.

Witness him, there, one morning late in 1884, carrying, with long strides, the day's supply of milk to the back entrance of the Henri home. And observe, as he delivers it to Mrs. Henri, that his eyes fall upon the sketches so casually placed by Robert Henri upon the wall. His conversation with Mrs. Henri followed.

This incident was the turning point in Henri's career. It came at just the right time to bring to his attention, with cumulative force, the fact that the other persons perceived in his drawings the expression of a genuine talent.

The summer of 1884 had witnessed the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the presidency by the Democrats. Young Henri had drawn a political caricature or cartoon which had been subsequently displayed in the window in the store belonging to a friend. The name of the cartoon was unimportant. The significant fact was that it was seen and admired by one qualified to recognize the merit in it.

This man, a total stranger, entered the store and asked the proprietor who had drawn the caricature.

"That young man," said the storekeeper, pointing to Robert Henri, who happened to be in the place.

"Do you intend to study art?" asked the stranger, explaining to the boy that he was himself a newspaper artist.

It appeared that Henri had not considered his powers great enough to warrant such a step.

"You should," said the other. After a further admonition he departed, never to be seen again, and it is possible his advice might have been forgotten had not the subsequent deep interest of James Albers Cathcard been aroused.

Cathcard and Henri soon became strong friends. The former had been compelled to relinquish his own studies, but he was firm in urging Henri to take up and pursue his.

The latter made new sketches and took them to Cathcard. Cathcard, in fact, gave him his first criticism. Eventually, to fulfill the entrance requirements of the Academy of Fine Arts, one of these sketches was submitted to the school. Robert Henri was accepted as a student.

Henri, having the mind of genius, recognized that talent without work gets nowhere. He studied in both night and day classes. In due time there followed a long period of study in Europe. All the world knows how, after rebelling against the prescribed principles of the established schools, he made his own researches, gave himself over to the free growth and expression of his own ideas and eventually, in his own country again, established leadership in that field of artistic thought which believes that what the artist has to express is the most important thing in art, and that, while technique is vital, it is not in itself an end.

Today Robert Henri's pictures are a part of the permanent collection of more than 30 museums in this country and Europe.

HIS good friend, James Albers Cathcard, had a right to feel proud of the discernment which enabled him to perceive the boy of 19 had a real talent for painting.

Although his work is scarcely considered radical now, there was a time when it was looked at a little askance by conservatives. Henri never trimmed his sails to the critical winds. His entire career was marked by a stern independence. In 1906 he was elected a member of the National Academy of Design and of the Association of American Painters and Sculptors and the National Institue of Arts and Letters. But all this did not prevent him from speaking his mind about these organizations a year later. In May, 1907, he withdrew two of his three pictures which had been accepted by the academy for its annual display, criticising what he termed a narrow and unfair attitude toward young artists.

With John Sloan, head of the Society of Independent Artists, Henri and others advocated discontinuance of the jury system in selecting pictures for award and display. Henri, however, never withdrew from the academy.

While critics account him a landscape painter of notable achievement, his portraits also are admirable for the individualization and directness which characterizes them.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN—AMERICANS?

over and shut your eyes and"—

Andy sits bolt up, a listener. "Hark!"

Thud! A fault in the atmosphere, small, echoes. A gunshot. Unmistakable. Thud! Thud! Thud! An imponderable fusillade.

Is it ghosts, in this land of the dead? Memories? All inside the brain?

Andy tries Isaiah: "Isaiah, did you hear anything?"

The youngster lies there with the quilt tight over his chest. It's a terrible thing, when you've been equal to anything and everything, to find yourself suddenly like this. His voice comes as thin as eel-grass.

"Where's that girl?"

IT'S too much for Andy, and he joins in: "Why don't she ever come home? What's she thinkin' on, this hour of the night?"

"Tain't decent, Andy. What'll folks say?"

"What does she care for that?"

"What does she care if she keeps us wakin' for her?"

"Who are we, anyhow? What do we 'mount to?"

"What does anything 'mount to these days; anything but cavortin' about with foreigners, dancin', huggin', maybe, carryin' on, forgettin' your religion, your elders, your upbringin'—anything to make the time go quick?"

"And devil take the hindmost!"

There's a cry, clambered in distance. The devil taking the hindmost, perhaps. The empty moors and dunes where men used to live give it out; one lone articulation, anger, terror, mortal pain, who can tell from the spent whisper creeping in through the Brewster blinds?

"A-n-d-y, I wish—I wish that girl was to home."

"I—I wish she was."

The shame of it, confessed at last, mutably, out loud! Isaiah Brewster, who in the name of the Great Republic stood up on his feet and told the port-bashaw of the Emperor of Siam to go to Jericho! Andy Brewster, who, with his own hands put half his crew in irons at the height of the '71 typhoon! The two of them now, praying nothing but the sound of Molly's dance shoes on the floor beyond the wall; the comfort of even Molly's doomsday youthfulness under the roof with them!

Prayers aren't half-ton trucks, though, for beggars to ride.

Or are they? Wait!

Isaiah is up now, sitting as bolt and gray as Andy.

Another mosquito? No. Hardly louder than a mosquito, to be sure, and oddly like the insect's silk whine — that whine of springs and beams and gaskets, all in one, a mile away.

"'Tis him!"

"'Tis! 'Tis!"

"He's to the marsh now—or—or—no"——

"N-n-no—no— Isaiah!"

"You mean it don't sound like 'twas on"——

"'Tain't on. 'Tain't on any road I know of, Isaiah. That's clear to the north'rd somewheres. Sounds to me"——

"Sounds to me like it was all adrift somewhere up Borneo Plain"——

"Thud! The shadow of the phantom of a shot! That's gone. So is the whine, like the whir of a nighthawk planing back into the night again.

"Isaiah," says Andy, "you lay down and go to sleep. This is foolishness."

Five minutes, up they knife again.

A step. A clandestine sole on the porch. A sneaking tread. .

Andy wouldn't speak for a million dollars; neither would Isaiah.

"Molly!" they call in the same breath.

No answer. Only the scratch of a match, out the kitchen way.

"Molly Brewster!"

The match goes out. More footfalls. Odd footfalls. Odd chills.

Who? What?

There a glimmer of moon through the cracks in the blinds. In the wraith of light Andy lifts on an elbow and studies supine Isaiah. The youngster lies with his head cracked back, as though by a blow, his mouth open, the shape of a black egg, and his whiskers thrust straight up in the air. He's not dead, though; he's asleep.

Andy lies back and summons all his resolution. Resolutely he envisions sheep, just such sheep as Dave Burch used to run on Borneo Plain, matted gray-brown bodies and slender legs snapping under them. Over the stone wall they go. One sheep over, two sheep over; four—or was it five?—five —six sheep—

When he awakens it is with a gulp and a kick.

Who's that? By the bed there, towering in the new gray?

It's Isaiah. It's the youngster, getting his pants on.

"I can't stand it," says Isaiah, his teeth a-clatter.

"What is it now?"

"I don't know. My godfrey, if I knowed, I——there! Hark to that!"

"That trompin' like?"

"Trompin', yes. Trompin', skitterin', skutterin' all about, whisperin', too, an' groanin' into the bargain. There, now! Will y' hark?"

"In the woodhouse. Or, more likely, Molly's room. Mebbe it's Molly."

"I want to know."

"Or cats."

"I want to know."

Andy fumbles his pale legs out of the quilt and into his trousers. They go in stocking feet, carrying their boots. In the kitchen Andy pauses.

"I'll look in her room, anyway, on the chance."

Holding his breath, he edges open Molly's door. His head disappears. It reappears, the cheeks collapsing with relief.

"By glory, she be here all this time, to bed asleep. Us fools!"

SIDE by side, holding the door open, they gaze into the chamber, cave-lit with the seepage of dawn, perfumed with violet water, tar soap, carnation powder, fiber-silk stockings, and all the faint, mingled emanations from frocks and underthings — the rectangular gray whiteness of the bed—the dark spot of a head averted on the pillow.

"Don't wake 'er."

"No; easy's the word; take care."

The old fools!

"Molly!" breathes Andy, just once. Just to try.

The head on the pillow flops over. The heads in the door thrust out.

Black eyes study them from the pillow, hypnotized.

Jimmy the Greek!

If he is hypnotized, what are they?

It was in this room, in this bed, that Molly White Brewster died, on Cleveland's election day. It was through that window her soul went to heaven.

They can do nothing but stare; stare at the bureau, holy of holies, untidy, intimate; a pot of cold cream, a ribbon, a note, a garter, a kitten of combings, a man's plaid cap; stare at the bed, the pillow, the solitary presence there, obscurely begotten, horde-born, Mediterranean.

They open their mouths to roar like lions; in the hush they bleat.

"Where's M-M-Molly?"

He holds them with black-and-white eyes; he has lost his tongue.

"Wh-wh-wh-where's Molly?"

It's Molly that answers, Molly's feet askip on the porch behind them, the wind of her coming across the kitchen, the fling of her arms brushing them aside like wraiths.

Worse than wraiths! Of a sudden something beyond accounting happens. In Molly's bedroom they've always kept the old paper, spotty and faded as it is; funny old paper, peopled by Venetian boatmen and early Victorian trees. And now between two breaths Andy and Isaiah are pictures with the boatmen and memories with the trees. It is as though, still visible, no one saw them, as though reality had abandoned them and gone out into the middle of the room.

Molly is real! they're not. Tag-end of a race and a tradition, her docked hair tousled, her shoes streaked with mud from another county, hem of a torn petticoat at the trail, she's flesh alive; a tradition and a race beginning.

She's on the bed's edge, hip and elbow, one wild hand in Jimmy Krenk's black curls, combwise, questioning, and her breath against his cheek.

"Y'all right, kid? Tell me quicker'n quick; y'all right?"

"Are you all right, Moll; you tell me?"

"You should worry about me! D'I look sick?"

"But, Moll"——

"Shush, kid, I know. I look like a home-made hang-over. I know I do, but you got to consider a hundred 'n' thirty miles in that bus of yours is no tea-dansant for a fair young thing, is it, now? 'Specially the last 15 of 'em on a rim. Cheer up; I'll look good when I get a shot of coffee in me. And don't worry about the stuff. I got it all safe and dark to you-know-who, you-know-where, 31 cases, check, and you couldn't have made it snappier yourself, you poor angel, and that's that. And the bus is back in Costa's g'rage with the old plates on—and the clutch afloat—and that phony rear shoe gone to—and that's that. And that motor-cycle egg was into Yarmouth Hospital at 3, I just got word at the marsh, with his right arm out of commish. And that's that."

"Was it you, Moll? Was it you plugged the guy, same's Turkey says?"

"Well, if I didn't there's been some awful mistake. I picked up your gun when you dropped it, and I was peeved. But, say, don't get me talkin' "——

"LISTEN, Moll, tell me somethin'. Was it you carried me up here from the Cove, same's Turkey says?"

"Well, Turkey helped some—as quick as he"——

"Where was the other guys?"

"Busy, don't you forget. Who'd you s'pose got the cop crowd trailed off down Truro way? Jazzy work for a while. But now, Jim, how's the bean?"

"Bean's a'right."

It's the strangest sensation, being a Venetian boatman inked on moldy wall paper, harkening to unintelligible tongues.

"And the leg?"

"Absitively perfect limb."

"You mean to say that plugged leg is still—— Oh, you poor lamb! Now, listen, Jim; I'll go as easy as easy, but I got to give it a look."

The painted boatmen close their painted eyes. Their painted ears they can not close. Earth swarms. Their painted minds they can not get quite shut. Murmurs. Fragments. The land of the old, the turncoat, teems with the pitiless voices of the young. Rumors creep in through the windows.

"Doc and the priest ought to be coming"——

"No, Gabriel phoned the priest he needn't come. Jim's all right."

"He'll be all right, that is, if we can keep him doggo for a spell"——

"But what they'll say up-Cape when he don't show up at short-stop for the Legion in the Barnstable game next Sunday"——

"Oh, we can bull through it somehow—— Hey, what's that?"

Another kind of murmur; a high, faint throbbing in the air.

"Molly! Inside there! Here comes Doc Bader from Provincetown. I guess it's him, anyway; it sounds like Gaspa's seaplane. I'll slide up to the pond and show him the way."

Still another note, within the room, this one half crooning:

"Good kid, did I hurt? Oh, good kid, I tried to be so gentle"——

"Gentle, Moll? Don't talk. You're the gentlest ever; and you're more'n the gentlest, you're the beautifulest, and you're more'n the beautifulest, you're the straightest, bravest"——

"Bravest! Quit kiddin', you Greek idiot. I been frightened sober; I'm still scared weak. Take hold of me and hang onto me tight, tight."

"I got you, tight. All there is, though, I hate to be a bother here."

"Bother! That's a good line. It's my house, isn't it, Jimmie, dearie? And seeing we're going to get married Friday, where's the diff?"

The Venetian boatmen end their fading by fading quite away, out of the bedroom, out of the house.

It's a fog-dawn, the light from the sun-tipped hills coming down at every angle through the pearly smother. It's as if the night, in place of ending, had just bleached out. Albino darkness. White shades.

Once more Andy and Isaiah flee the canopy of the willows and puff up Sheep Hill. The mist dilutes; at the height they find the sun and air. And the sea, the Leviathan gone. The honest sea.

They flop on a timber and gaze at it. By and by Isaiah points a finger at the wedge of the Cove, still in shadow below them.

"By cricky, she goes fast these days, Andy." He is resolved to see it, and he sees it; the marsh growing an estuary, the estuary a strait, a worm of blue salt water eating ever and ever more hungrily into the entrails of the dead Cape. "By cricky, 'twon't be many years till you can sail a vessel straight through the Hollow to the back side."

"Where do you get that stuff?" inquires a voice from behind the brothers.

"'Twa'n't so many years ago," says Andy in resolute musing, "there was beach plums growin' out there where them breakers are now."

"The hell there was!" A shadow falls across them, and out over their heads, blue and amber, floats the cloud of a cigarette. It's Frankie Silvado, the surfman from Pamet Station, and he has a purple mustache and dark, live, ardent eyes.

Andy clears an indomitable throat: "Accordin' to my calc'lations, Isaiah, the way she's sinkin' now"——

"That's a lovely pipe, that is," persists the tactless shade. "I been patrollin' this shore 10 years and more, and I used to have to walk on the cliff because the tide was all over where them grass flats is now. You old geezers ain't up with the times or you'd know all this land is makin' all the while. There was a professor lectured to Provincetown last summer, and he says, like's not, it'll be all dry ground from here clean to Plymouth shore one day, with woods, like's not, and farms, and cities——

"Though," adds Silvado, "I don't know what kind o' people there'll be to live in 'em, the way things are goin' now, with this Cape crowd, gettin' to be smugglers—runnin' in liquor off these West Indie vessels for all they're worth —women as bad as the men, too, accordin' to what Tony Fuller says he seen last night. I tell you the truth, I don't know what this country of ourn is comin' to."

BY and by Andy turns an eye on Isaiah, and once more, with dogmatic patience, clears his throat.

"As I was sayin'—the way she's sinkin' now—and the way they're droppin' off—Sam yesterday—like's not you or me tomorrow—'twon't be long before there won't be any left hereabouts."

"Any what?"

Now they upend on their reedy legs and face him and lash out at him.

"Any—any—Americans!"

In the white pouring of the sunshine, as they watch greedily the effect of that brutal blow, the red mottles go out of their cheeks. Now, at last, they are terrified. This fellow doesn't even know what they're driving at.

"What do you mean?" he puzzles. "What do you mean—Americans?"

"GOOD SEATS FOR TONIGHT!"

Mr. Peters Goes to the Box-Office.

Robert Benchley.

SINCE the movies started to talk, Mr. Peters had more or less kept away from them, for, as he said, he could listen to dull people talking right at home in Dyke, Ohio, without its costing him a cent. And the voices would come from their mouths, too, and not from under their arms.

But when his convention of malleable-iron sales agents ended in New York, there wasn't much for him to go to on his last evening except talking-movies. As he had to go somewhere before his train left at midnight, he selected an exciting-looking picture on the theory that if the characters felt that they had to talk it wouldn't make so much difference if there was a good murder going on at the same time to take up your mind. Mr. Peters was very partial to murders.

There was a long line of customers in front of the box office, Mrs. Peters stood across the lobby.

"Two in the orchestra," said Mr. Peters to the man behind the grating.

The man snapped two tickets into an envelope and shoved them suddenly at Mr. Peters.

"Four dollars," he said.

But Mr. Peters had bought tickets at a box office before. He opened the envelope and looked at them. They were in the second row, evidently under one of the boxes.

"Haven't you anything farther back and in the center?" he asked.

"Balcony!" said the man shortly.

"I don't want any, then," said Mr. Peters, and put his $4 away. He stepped out of line and joined Mrs. Peters.

"Nothing but 'way down front on the side or in the balcony," he said. "We don't want those. Come on, we'll try another picture."

As they got out into the street a man stepped up to them and said: "Orchestra seats for tonight's show! Right in here!" And he pointed to a tiny shop right next to the theater entrance, which was evidently the mart for considerable business, as there was also a line waiting there and a man behind a little counter snapping through a large bundle of tickets.

"WHERE are they?" asked Mr. Peters.

"Tenth row center," said the man. "How many?"

"How much?" asked Mr. Peters, still unwilling to be frightened into a purchase.

"Three dollars apiece," said the man. "How many?"

Mr. Peters realized that he was being charged a dollar extra per ticket, turned on his heel and walked out.

Three or four doors down there was another feature picture showing, "Love's Oven." So Mr. Peters joined the line.

"Two in the orchestra for tonight," he said, holding out his $4.

"I don't want balcony," said Mr. Peters, with a snarl of equal venom.

Mr. Peters had not been particularly crazy about going to the movies earlier in the evening, but now that it was being made so difficult for him he was determined to get in somewhere, if only out of spite. So when he was accosted at the entrance by another gentleman who offered him good seats for tonight's "Love's Oven," he went with him to another little nook right next door to the theater, where another gentleman with a straw hat on the back of his head was dispensing dozens of good seats that the box office had apparently let get out of its rack by mistake. This particular man wanted to charge Mr. Peters $3.75 apiece for $2 tickets. It was but the work of a second for Mr. Peters to emit a roar, push one of the little men aside and dash out into the street.

"Come on," he said to Mrs. Peters, "we'll go to another picture."

The question was then to find another picture to which they wanted to go.

Fortunately, they saw a sign a few blocks down that indicated a talking-movie had been made out of that well-known novel, "Hydrants."

"I liked the book," said Mrs. Peters timidly.

"That's no sign you'll like the picture," replied Mr. Peters.

He wanted to charge Mr. Peters $3.75 apiece for a $2 ticket.

However, they were by this time in front of the theater where "Hydrants" was being shown.

Again Mr. Peters stood in line patiently. He felt in a talking mood and wanted to talk to the box-office man. In fact, he would have waited in the line an hour to talk to the box-office man.

Peering through the bars, he finally got his chance to say: "Anything in the orchestra for tonight?"

"All sold out," the man replied, looking over a bunch of next week's tickets.

"I suppose the agencies have got plenty," said Mr. Peters quietly.

"You can try, can't you?" said the man; smilingly knowingly.

"What agency would you recommend?" asked Mr. Peters, trying to be very bitter.

"There's one next door," said the man. "They may have some."

"They may have some," repeated Mr. Peters. "You know darned well they have some. Why don't you just hang up a sign over your window saying, 'Orchestra seats next door, $1.50 extra'?"

"Come on, come on, there's others in line," said the man sharply.

Mrs. Peters, standing in her old spot across the lobby, saw and turned away nervously.

"Come on," said Mrs. Peters' husband, taking her by the arm. "We'll go next door and get some seats."

And sure enough, right at the entrance was a little man who shouted pleasantly: "Good seats for 'Hydrants' right in here."

Without a word Mr. Peters went into the little coop and bought two seats in the eleventh row, center, at an advance of only $1.10 on each ticket (it was getting late and the market was falling).

The first half of the picture was a disappointment, as something went wrong with the sound machine. Mr. Peters could hardly wait for the intermission.

"I AM going out and have a smoke," he said to his wife, but she knew very well that he would do no smoking. She thought it would be better if she waited inside.

Before Mr. Peters went out into the lobby he stopped and took three or four little capsule-like objects from a box he carried in his vest pocket. He looked them over as if to see if they were in good condition, then, palming them in the manner of a magician, proceeded out into the lobby to look at the pictures with the other restless ones.

As he passed the box office he noticed that the window was half-shut, but by stooping slightly he could peek in and see all that he needed. The ticket seller was in his tiny office and with him was a man whose light-brown suit proclaimed him to be the proprietor of the agency coop next door. They were probably talking about what a warm night it was.

Being neighbors like that, it was only natural that they should get together after the day's work was done and talk about the weather.

People who were standing in the lobby did not pay much attention to Mr. Peters. People rarely did. One or two of them saw him push his way into the box office through the little door by the side of the window and heard the door shut. A few seconds later they saw a hand reach over and shut the box-office window down tight. If they had kept on looking, which none of them did, they would have seen Mr. Peters come out, enter the theater again, and, before the second half of the picture had begun, leave with Mrs. Peters and get into a cab.

"It wasn't much of a picture," Mr. Peters was saying.

"I liked the book better," agreed Mrs. Peters, looking around nervously as they drove off to the train.

Just how the little box office, with the two men in it, ever got so full of carbon-monoxide gas the police could never figure out. The door being shut and the little window so tightly closed looked almost like a suicide pact, but there seemed to have been no reason for these two gentlemen to commit suicide. They both had big bank accounts and were not of morose dispositions. It was just one of those things. Perhaps they both loved the same girl.

Unguentine permits health-giving ultra-violet rays to penetrate without burning

Take a sun bath —but don't risk

SUNBURN'S agony

SWIM OUT to the raft and show them some fancy dives. Feel the sun on your bare skin. In vacation days get a smart, deep coat of tan and store up that "overplus" health which will see you through the sunless winter months.

But don't risk sunburn's tortures. Just as every burn does, sunburn kills the living cells on the surface of the skin, and produces poisons which are absorbed into your system.

Severe sunburn shows all the symptoms of a deep burn—high fever, nervousness, general weakness.

Even the few minutes on the beach before and after your swim may lead to red, angry shoulders and arms, and ugly painful blisters.

Yet it is all needless. At the first sign of redness apply plenty of Unguentine, the famous antiseptic surgical dressing used in 8 out of 10 hospitals for all burns.

The soothing, antiseptic oils in Unguentine penetrate the injured area and remain in contact with it. The dreadful pain is stopped, and healing is insured.

Get a tube of Unguentine today, and have it ready. Take it to the beach and on your vacation. Always keep a tube handy in your auto kit. At your druggist's, 50c. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N. Y.

Sunburn is serious. Don't rely on ineffective lotions or other cosmetics with no healing power. Unguentine stops the burning.

With Unguentine applied beforehand, you'll tan evenly, smoothly.

Unguentine Soap, bland and pure, is the perfect soap for tender, sunburned skin. And because of its Unguentine content it rapidly clears up blemishes.

Proof that you need Mum

hangs in your own closet

No one is exempt from perspiration, and all perspiration has an odor. The proof of offense hangs in many a woman's own closet. A taint that can linger in a wrap which has not been worn for days is certain to offend others at the time—be sure of that!

Why run even a remote chance of offending when protection is so simple a matter? A dab of the snowy cream called Mum will neutralize every bit of unpleasant odor of the under-arm—or elsewhere—and then you are safe for hours in even the closest contact.

There is nothing harmful in Mum, or in its habitual use. That is why Mum is a boon to womankind in still another way—for the service it performs in connection with the sanitary napkin. Investigate this important use of this true deodorant which is rapidly displacing all less effective precautions.

Mum is delightfully easy to use and quite inexpensive, particularly in the large 60c jar, which contains nearly three times the quantity in the 35c jar. At all drug stores.

Your skin tires so easily!

–but your own two hands can refresh it

YOU HOLD BEAUTY IN YOUR HANDS

Tiny glands constantly lubricating and removing waste . . . the skin itself hardening and rubbing off. True, you can't see this work. But when the skin tires and fails to function properly, then you can see the results . . . dry skin . . . oily skin . . . lines and wrinkles.

To help you refresh your naturally lovely skin, Richard Hudnut has created Du Barry Beauty Preparations, bringing for the first time right into your own home, the actual professional aids of the beauty salon. With these little jars and bottles of soft creams, tonic lotions and smooth oils . . . compounded of rare ingredients, new in beauty preparations . . . your own two hands—lightly patting, gently stroking—can revivify your skin . . . can wipe away those lines about the eyes . . . can strengthen and lift the sagging muscles of the throat.

Have You Lines About Your Mouth?

After a thorough cleansing with Du Barry Cleansing Cream and the Skin Tonic and Freshener Lotion—

"Use the cushion tips of the strong middle fingers. Smooth the Muscle Oil from the lips outward on the cheeks till the circulation is stimulated and you feel the pleasant warmth that comes from your own fingers."

That's the simple treatment for erasing them, and the basic manipulation is illustrated above. After the treatment any excess oil is quickly removed with the Skin Tonic and Freshener Lotion.

This and all the other treatments are described in a booklet which you receive when you purchase Du Barry Beauty Aids, or which we will gladly send you. Here are the principal preparations . . . not a bit expensive, either:
